PREFACE

THIS work is published as a supplement to the Consolidated Digest 1836-1909 compiled by Mr B D Bose. It contains the cases published in the Calcutta, Bombay, Madras and Allahabad Series of the Indian Law Reports, the Reports Indian Appeals, and the Calcutta Weekly Notes, from 1910 to the Indian Law Reports, Lahore Series and the Patna Law Journal. Since they were first published in 1920 and 1915 respectively to 1921 and Volume XXVI of Calcutta Weekly Notes 1922.

For easy reference, a list of words and phrases, which are expounded in the judgments, are given in a separate list, in alphabetical order, under the heading "Words and Phrases".

1 ——— Tenancy divided into separate Tenancies—Partition under 1 state a Partition Act 18 6 and one made by Civil Courts discussed—Protip Chander Das v Kamla Kanta Shaha 10 C W N 518 approved. A sale by the tenant of an entire separated tenancy constitutes abandonment. RAM LOCHAN KOLH JAGJEEWATH MISER (1916) 1 Pat L J 270

2 ——— Occupancy holding—Transfer of portion—effect of subsequent partition—When the transferred portion of a holding is by partition among the landlords allotted to the share of one of the landlords the latter cannot treat the transfer as a relinquishment or abandonment of the holding—Daja Maj v Ananda M P Cloud 117 I L R 47 Cal 172 referred to—SURAJ DEO NARAIN SINGH v LACHI NARAIN SINGH 2 Pat L J 225

3 ——— Transfer of portion of holding—effect of subsequent partition on A partition of the landlords interests does not confer upon the holders of one of the low malis or rayats right against tenants or their assignees which the land lords did not possess before the partition and which do not necessarily result from the partition. Therefore where the transferred portion of a holding is by partition among the landlords allotted to the share of one of the landlords the latter cannot treat the transfer as a relinquishment or abandonment of the holding. SURAJ DEO NARAIN SINGH v LACHI NARAIN SINGH 2 Pat L J 225

4 ——— Sub lease by rayat—Non transferable occupancy Where a tenant having a non transferable right of occupancy sells it and having obtained a sub lease from the purchaser remains in possession and cultivates This need not amount to abandonment. SEPAROAN v PANDER RAI 24 C W N 117

5 ——— By tenant—What is When a rayat without giving notice goes away from the land he has occupied and neither cultivates it nor pays rent the landlord is justified in assuming that he has relinquished it and the rayat has no right to ask to be reinstalled on the ground that he never formally relinquished the land. Mere non payment of rent is not evidence of abandonment but non payment of rent coupled with non occupation of land is evidence of an intention to abandon it. GOHER SURESH v ALIFUDDIN SHEIKH 24 C W N 717

6 ——— Tenant transferring entire holding but retaining home land but not paying rent—Stranger in possession of land leased—Possession of and taken adverse to landlord Though there is no inflexible rule of law that a Court is not competent to determine that the rights of the parties litigant are really different from what is alleged either it is absolutely necessary that the determination in a case should be founded upon a case either to be found in the pleadings or involved in or consistent with the case thereby made. Where notwithstanding the sale of the entire land of an agricultural tenancy the tenant remains in occupation of the homestead portion covering about one tenth of the whole area without however making any arrangement for payment of rent to the landlord Held that the tenant must be taken to have abandoned the land. Time does not begin to run against the landlord in favour of a stranger in occupation of the leased land until the tenancy has terminated. Where the tenant was not shown to have discontinued paying rent until well within the period of limitation. Held that a suit for recovery against a stranger to possession was not time barred. ISHAN CHANDRA DRUPI v. NRSIH CHANDRA DRUPI (1917) 22 C W N 853

7 ——— Tenancy divided into separate tenancies—sale of separated tenancy whether constitutes abandonment. A sale by the tenant of an entire separated tenancy constitutes abandonment. RAM LOCHAN KOER v. JAGERNATH MISSEER 1 Pat L J 270

Of appeal in toto where one of the respondents in whose favour a decree was passed jointly with others had died and her legal representatives had not been brought on the record—Civil Procedure Code Act V of 1908 Order XXII rule 4. In the present case the three plaintiffs claimed to be the heirs and in possession of the property of one D M who was the original mortgagor. The plaintiffs claimed jointly a sum of Rs 7384 as due under the mortgage. The defendant admitted that plaintiffs were the heirs of the mortgagor. The Lower Court passed a joint decree in favour of the plaintiffs for Rs 660. Against this decree the defendant preferred this appeal on 1st October 1910. It was admitted that Musammam H one of the three plaintiff respondents died in 1910 and that appellant knew of it but took no steps to bring her legal representatives i.e. her daughters on the record. Held that the decree being a joint one the appeal having abated against Musammam H abates in its entirety vide Order XXII rule 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *Byju Gopal v. I ———— Illegal cess—Rent

—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) s 71—Regulation VIII of 1793 ss 51 and 52—Contract If upon a fair interpretation of the terms of the contract the sum claimed can be deemed part of the actual rent the tenant is bound to pay it. If on the other hand the sum claimed can only be regarded as an imposition in addition to the actual rent the stipulation for its payment is void. Under a lease of certain lands the yearly rent was specified as a cess at a certain rate and at the end of the lease in a clause entirely distinct from the one wherein the rent was assessed a provision was made for the delivery of husk which was not expressly or by implication made part of the rent. The plaintiff brought a suit for arrears of rent on the basis of this lease claiming a deduction of a certain sum of money for unculturable land and seeking to recover arrears of rent besides husk. They further claimed cesses upon the amount stated to be rent and not upon the amount claimed as price of the husk. Held that the sum claimed as the value of the husk did not form part of the consolidated rent but was an independent item falling within the description of an imposition in addition to the actual rent. *Sonnum Sooiul v Shauk Hadee Dush 7 H R 13 Ram Narain Mitra v Lanna Chond Singh 7 O W N 203 Gopalullah Sardar v Gurish Chandra Bhawal 1 O W N 175 Krishna Chandra Sen v Sunila Soodhary Dassee 1 I R 26 Calc 611 Breehanta Irawal v Irshul Ali Sircar 1 C I J 22 approved. I ———— Corroboration—Material particulars—Identity of accused Before the testimony of an accomplice can be acted on it must be corroborated in material particulars

There must be corroboration not only as to the crime but also as to the identity of each one of the accused. This is no technical rule but is founded on long judicial experience. EMERSON v LALIT MOHAN CHICKERBUTTY (1911)

2. — Spy or detective assisting with a wrong-doer for the purpose of discovery and disclosure of an offence—Necessity of corroboration—Evidence Act (I of 1872) s 113 13. A person who makes himself an agent for the prosecution with the purpose of discovering and disclosing the commission of an offence either before associating with wrong-doers or before the actual perpetration of the offence is not an accomplice but a spy detective or decoy whose evidence does not require corroboration though the weight to be attached to it depends on the character of each individual witness in each case. But a person who is associated with an offence with a criminal design and extends no aid to the prosecution till after its commission is an accomplice requiring corroboration. See v De Pore 3 How St Tr 316 147 v Douling 1 Cox C 109 147 v Mullins 3 Cox C 109 147 v Bailey - Cr App Rep 33 73 J P 339 147 v Sharker Sholag Patin unreported Cr Ca 473 approved of Queen Empress v Jareebaram 1 L P 19 10m 563 distinguished by Holmeswood J and disapproved by Dos J. EMERSON v CHATURBHUJ SINGH (1910)

3. — Accomplice Testimony of—Corroboration Under s 133 of the Evidence Act a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. To justify the High Court in setting aside the conviction it is necessary to show not only that there is no corroboration but that the Judge taking all the evidence together was wrong in acting on it. Where immediately after a dacoity and before the arrival of the police one of the accused who had been caught made a confession to a private person naming the other persons concerned in it except two one of whom he named two days after in his confession to the Magistrate which agreed with the evidence subsequently given by the reformer both the confessions being afterwards retracted and another accused made a confession naming all the persons mentioned by the approver the two accused and the latter having been arrested at different times and places and there was evidence that some of the dacoits were seen in company together shortly before the dacoity and that they were absent from their homes shortly after it. Held that the confessions of the two accused and the other facts were sufficient corroboration of an approver who had been believed by the Judge and assessor as against the co accused who had not made confessions. LALAN MALLIK v KING EMERSON (1911)

18 C W N 663

4. — Testimony of Accomplice Spy or Informer—Corroboration PER HARRINGTON J—The testimony of persons who have been members of a criminal conspiracy or also have joined it for the purpose of betraying its secrets must be very carefully scrutinised and much weight cannot be attached to it unless it is corroborated by other circumstances. PER MON

ACCOMPLICE—contd

LEWIS J—Where a witness has made himself an agent for the prosecution before associating with the wrong doers or before the actual perpetration of the offence he is not an accomplice but he may be if he extends no aid to the prosecution until after the offence is committed. A mere detective or decoy is not therefore an accomplice nor an original confederate who betrays before the crime was committed. Yet an accomplice after the fact would be an accomplice if he had before betraying rendered himself liable as such. As the crime of conspiracy is complete the moment there is concerted intention members of the conspiracy who after such agreement have out of fear or repentance transformed themselves into spies and informers do not thereby cease to be accomplices and their evidence requires corroboration of the same extent and character as in the case of accomplices. LALAN BEHARI DAS v KING EMERSON (1911)

18 C W N 1105

5. — Accomplice competency of as witness—Corroboration required Nature of an accomplice is a competent witness and there is no absolute rule of law which enacts that the conviction on the evidence of an accomplice is bad but there is an established practice founded on the judicial experience of generations which requires corroboration by some untainted evidence and that in a material particular pointing not only to the crime but to the participation of the accused in that crime. SHIB NODIA v KING EMERSON (1913)

18 C W N 550

6. — *Evidence of the Appellant who was the station master of a railway station was produced along with another person who was the goods clerk on a charge of criminal breach of trust as servant. The goods clerk was further charged with having committed an offence under s 477A and the Appellant with abetment thereof. The facts appeared to be that G the servant of a firm of merchants loaded a consignment of goods on behalf of the firm at the Appellant's station but less than the actual weight was entered in the books of the Railway Company and the freight credited to the Company was based on the false weight and a sum of Rs 2 more was alleged to have been paid by G and appropriated by the accused. Held per NEWBOLD J That G was not an accomplice within the meaning of that word as s 113(b) and 133 of the Indian Evidence Act even if he was a party to a conspiracy to defraud the Railway Company inasmuch as he was not concerned in the offence under enquiry and the Sessions Judge did not misdirect the Jury when he told them that they should hold the Appellant to be guilty of misappropriation if G's evidence be believed without warning them that it was unsafe to convict on his evidence unless it was corroborated in material particulars. An indication of the meaning of the word accomplice (which is not defined in the Evidence Act or any other Indian Statute) may be found in s 337 Criminal Procedure Code. PANASICERN GOURDIA v EMERSON 1 I P 27 Mad 2 1st pl 27 (1901) referred to. PER CHATURBHUJ SINGH J 111 A JJ That the facts alleged disclosed a conspiracy either of receiving a bribe or that of criminal breach of trust and the Sessions Judge misdirected the Jury as to the evidence of G and the misdirection was such as vitiated the trial. PER SHANMUL HUDA J That to constitute* an accomplice there need only be the intention of assisting in the commission of a crime but he need not know exactly what crime was being committed Carries Gratchley 9 Cr App Rep 232 (1913) referred to. That even if G was not an accomplice in the technical sense of the term, his evidence was no better than that of an accomplice and should have been dealt with on that footing. The Queen v Chando Chandaline 21 W R (Cr) 55 (1890) Alimuddin v Queen Empress 1 L R 23 Cal 361 (1890) and Ishan Chandra Chandra v Queen Empress 1 L P 21 Cal 390 (1893) referred to. That the learned Sessions Judge should have explained to the Jury what an accomplice was and should have asked them to say upon the facts before them whether G was or was not an accomplice. The Jury should further have been told that if G was a party to the conspiracy to cheat the Railway Company he was an accomplice and it was not safe or proper to convict upon his evidence without corroboration in material particulars. The Judge should have also explained to the Jury what was the nature of corroboration necessary in such cases. SURJA KANTA BHATTACHARJEE v KING EMPEROR 24 C W N 119

ACT OF STATE

Acts done by Government in exercise of its sovereign rights—Status of non-feudatory zamindars in Central Provinces—Withdrawal from non-feudatory zamindars the Police Excise and Cattle pounds administration—Withdrawal of other rights in wajib ul ar or administration paper—Police Act (I of 1861)—Excise Act (X of 1871)—Cattle Trespass Acts (III of 1857 and I of 1871)—Central Provinces Land Revenue Act (X) III of 1881 The plaintiffs in these appeals were members of a group of non-feudatory zamindars in the Central Provinces whose status was in 1864 determined by the Government to be that of ordinary British subjects. When they first came by conquest or cession under British rule the management of their estates and the judicial and administrative powers exercised by them were left in their hands as a matter of convenience or economy of administration and in no case were they recognised as entitled to independent powers or as possessing any sovereign rights. In 1874 sanads giving them proprietary rights in the soil were granted but subsequently at various times the Government withdrew from them the Police and Excise administration and also the rights they had exercised in respect of cattle pounds and in 1903 they were required by the settlement officials to execute (which they did under protest) wajib ul ar es containing provisions restricting their rights in various ways which they considered prejudicial to their interests and prestige. In suits brought by them against the Secretary of State in which they complained that they had been illegally deprived of rights to which they had been indefeasibly entitled from time immemorial and that the contents of the wajib ul ar es were in derogation of their undoubted privileges. Held that in the exercise of the Police and Excise functions the plaintiffs were acting not as of right but either by sufferance or by delegation and that the resumption of those functions by the Government was an act done by the Government in the exercise of its sovereign powers and consequently the suits were not maintainable in the Civil Courts. The maintenance of private cattle pounds was incompatible with the provisions of the Cattle Trespass Act and their establishment under the superintendence and control of Government as being under the circumstances essential for the maintenance of law and order and the peace and

Maxim applies to actions in tort—No application to actions where contractual obligation implied by law—Government—Employment of shroff to accept Babashai coins—Shroff accepting Shikkai coins instead—The coins accepted by Mint officers—Loss to Government—Measure of damages—Acquiescence or ratification by Government On the occasion of calling in the Babashai coins from the British villages in the Ra Ra District the plaintiff was employed by Government as a shroff to examine and accept the Babashai coins only. The plaintiff worked for about a month during which period he passed 12 170 Shikkai coins as Babashai coins. At that date the Shikkai coins were not current and had only bullion value. The coins were finally sent to H. M. a Mint where they were melted. Government alleged that by the shroff's neglect in accepting Shikkai coins they suffered a loss of Rs 753 15 1 which they asked the shroff to pay. The shroff paid Rs 105. To recover the remaining Rs 648 15 1 Government filed a suit against the shroff. The shroff also filed a counter suit against Government to recover Rs 105 which he alleged were wrongfully recovered from him. Both suits were heard together. The District Judge dismissed both suits holding that Government had suffered a loss by the shroff's action but it was compensated by the money already paid by the shroff. Against this decision both parties appealed. While the appeals were pending in the High Court the shroff died and his son was brought on the record as his legal representative. Held that the maxim actio personalis moritur cum persona did not apply to the case as there was an obligation implied by law. The shroff undertook to pass only Babashai coins and it was an implied term of that contract that if he passed any other and Government suffered loss he should make it good (s 211 of the Indian Contract Act 1872). Held further that the fact that Government had kept and had the benefit of Shikkai coins was not sufficient by itself to raise any presumption of either estoppel or acquiescence or ratification on the part of Government. Held also that the action of the Mint officers in accepting the Shikkai coins could bind Government only so far as they had derived benefit from the action of the Mint officers that that benefit made them liable only so far that it was to be taken into account in measuring the damages for the loss sustained by Government in consequence of the shroff's deviation from the directions given to him and the purpose of this employment. Held therefore that in estimating the loss suffered by Government owing to the shroff's action the bullion value of the Shikkai coins must be taken into account for they had on the date they were accepted ceased to be current coin. It is a principle that nominal damages are awarded only where there is failure to prove any appreciable damage in fact. CHUNI LAL : SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA (1910) I L R 35 Bom 12 ss 8 and 15—Court fees Act (III of 18 0) s 4 sub s 4 cl (c) and (d)—Suits Valuation Act (III of 185) s 8—Civil Procedure Code (Act III of 185) s 501—Civil Procedure Code (Act I of 1908) s 115—1 situation for the purposes of Court fees and jurisdiction—Suit for declaration and injunction—Plaintiff of plaintiff as not properly stamped—Appeal—Application to state a case to High Court—Summary dismissal of appeal—Application for revision—Jurisdiction. The plaintiff brought a suit in the Court of the Assistant Resident at Aden for a declaration of her right and an injunction with reference to certain property of the value of upwards Rs. 0000. The claim being for declaration and injunction was under the provisions of the Court fees Act (III of 18 0) s 4 sub s 4 cl (c) and (d) valued by the plaintiff at Rs. 00 upon which the prescribed Court fee stamp was Rs. 10 only. The Assistant Resident rejected the suit on the ground that it was not properly stamped. Against the order of the Assistant Resident the plaintiff appealed to the Resident at Aden and on the 23rd September 1903 presented an application under s. 8 of the Aden Act (II of 1864) to state a case to the High Court upon certain questions specified in the application. The Resident however on the next day that is on the 24th September summarily dismissed the appeal under s. 501 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act III of 1852). The judgment dismissing the appeal was read out to the plaintiff on the 7th October following when she attended the Court. The plaintiff thereupon preferred an application for revision to the High Court praying that the order dismissing the appeal might be quashed and that the Resident be required to state a case. A question having arisen as to whether the High Court had jurisdiction to interfere in revision with any order passed by the Resident in the exercise of his Civil jurisdiction under the Aden Act (II of 1864) Held that with regard to questions which might arise regarding cases to be stated by the Resident for the decision of the High Court under the provisions of s. 8 of the Aden Act (II of 1864) the Resident's Court is subordinate to the High Court. Under s. 15 of the Aden Act (II of 1864) as the Court of the Resident is to be guided by the spirit and principle of the laws and regulations in force in the Presidency of Bombay and administered in the Courts of that Presidency not established by Royal Charter and in the High Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction as a Court of Appeal from those Courts the provisions of the Suits Valuation Act (III of 1852) are the law for the time being for the valuation of claims in the Courts of the Resident of Aden. Held further that the plaintiff's claim being valued at Rs. 130 according to the law for the valuation of claims for the time being in force and according to the rulings of the Bombay High Court it did not fulfil the requirements of s. 8 of the Aden Act (II of 1864) so as to give the plaintiff a right to demand the statement of the case upon any question of fact or law arising in the suit. RUMBAI JAMALBHOY v. ADEN SETTLEMENT REGULATION (VII OF 1900)

s 13—Municipal affairs at Aden—Executive Committee—Rating of property for purposes of taxation—Rating value fixed by the Resident at Aden in a rating appeal—Finality of the decision of the Resident as to value—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts to examine the value in a civil suit—Rule made under the Regulation to give finality to the Resident's decision in rating appeal is ultra vires. The Aden Settlement Regulation (VII of 1900) provided for the establishment of an Executive Committee for the Municipal Government of Aden and its clause 13 authorised the Resident subject to the previous sanction of the Local Government to make rules to provide for the assessment and collection of any toll cess tax or other impost imposed under the Regulation. The rules so made provided inter alia for the preparation of an assessment list containing the annual letting value or other valuation on which the property is assessed for complaints to the Executive Committee where any property was for the time being entered in the list or in which the entered rateable value had been increased and for appeals against any rateable value to the Judge of the Resident's Court. Rule 12 provided that after appeals if any were decided and the results noted in the assessment list all rateable values so entered in the list were final. The lower Courts held on a construction of the above rule that it made the decision of the Judge of the Resident's Court in a rating appeal conclusive and that the aggrieved party could not question it by a civil suit. Held that the rule read as it had been by the lower Courts was ultra vires inasmuch as a distinct unequivocal enactment was required for the purpose of either adding to or taking away the jurisdiction of a Court. ABDULLAH LALLER v. He must show that the conduct of the suit is not in proper hands or that action prejudicial to his interest is being taken by those who purport to represent him. In an administration suit it is extremely undesirable that individual creditors should be added as parties unless they show some very strong reason. The willingness of the applicants to bear their own costs does not counterbalance the delay caused by the addition of a party and the consequent increase in the costs of other parties. *Vasovaji Tricunji & Co. v. Where a suit is valued on the basis of the claim of the plaintiff and instituted in the Court of the lower grade of pecuniary jurisdiction and a claim is thereafter preferred by a creditor who could in respect of his claim institute a suit only in a Court of higher grade the remedy will be the transfer of the suit at that stage from the Court of the lowest grade to the Court competent to try a claim of enhanced value. *Shasur Bhu Shriv Bose v. The period of limitation for a suit against an administrator whose administration is limited by the letters of administration to the minority of the beneficiary begins to run from the day on which the beneficiary attains his majority. An Administrator in whom no special trust is vested for a specific purpose is not trustee within the meaning of S 10 of the Limitation Act 1908. Where in one suit the plaintiff prayed for an order directing the administrator of his father's estate to render an account of his administration and also for recovery of immovable property in the hands of third parties, Held that the suit was in contravention of O II r 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1908. Where a trustee makes a profit by the improper employment of trust money he is liable to make good to the beneficiary the amount of that profit in addition to the money improperly employed. But the beneficiary is not entitled to claim a title in the property acquired by the trustee by the improper use of trust funds. Even if the beneficiary in such a case is entitled to claim either the money used with interest or the property acquired with the money, limitation for the exercise of such an option would be the limitation prescribed for recovery of the money used. JANAK DHAN PRASAD THAKUR v JANAKIBATI THAKURIN 2 Pat L J 642

Commission—As it comes into his hands meaning of—Pledge—Action for account—Estoppel—Evidence Act (I of 1872) s 115—Acquiescence—Laches—Partition. Where part of the estate of which the defendant was appointed administrator pendente lite consisted of Government promissory notes which had been pledged with certain Banks as security against advances and the Government promissory notes were subsequently sold by the Banks under instructions from the defendant and the sale proceeds applied towards satisfying the indebtedness to the Bank and the surplus money paid to the defendant, Held that the defendant under the order of his appointment which provided for his remuneration by the allowance of a commission of 2 per cent on the assets that will come into his hands was not entitled to charge commission on the gross value of the Government promissory notes but only on the surplus moneys which he actually received after the indebtedness to the Banks had been satisfied. Scott v Franklin 15 East 428 referred to. Where an administrator pendente lite had retained as his remuneration more than he was entitled to claim and his accounts showing such amounts had been passed by the Court with the knowledge of the plaintiffs and without any objection being taken by them and a suit was subsequently brought by the plaintiffs to recover from him such excess within the time allowed by law, Held that such suit was not barred by estoppel, acquiescence or laches. Peckgrave v Hurd L P 20 Ch D 1 referred to. The part of the estate to which the administrator pendente lite was appointed was the undivided share of one out of four brothers in a joint family estate the mother being alive and subsequently by a decree in a partition suit the mother was held entitled to a one fifth share. Held that the administrator pendente lite was entitled to charge his commission as on a one fourth share. OSMOND BEERY v KHITISH CHANDRA ACHARJYA CHOWDHURY (1919) 1 L R 41 Calc 771

1 ——— What constitutes admission

To constitute an admission the document needs not to be written by the party against whom it is used. It is sufficient if it is found in his possession and his conduct thereto creates an inference that he was aware of its contents and admitted their accuracy, but unless this is done the document cannot be used against him as proof of its contents. What conduct would properly give rise to such inference depends on the facts of each case. The mere fact of possession of letters is not of much value unless it is shown that their contents were recognized and adopted by the replies elicited or the conduct inspired by them. BANINDRA KUMAR GHOSH v EMERSON (1909) I L R 37 Cal 467

2 ——— By a defendant—A plaintiff may rely on the admissions of defendant as to his title in proof of his claim just as much as on any other evidence and if a defendant goes into the witness box and admits his title there is no further onus upon him to prove it at least as against such defendant. An erroneous statement made without knowledge in an affidavit filed as a matter of routine by a person whose authority to make it was not proved could not bind a party to a proceeding nor affect the character of a sale held in such proceeding under the provisions of s 124 (Beng Act I of 1879) so as to confer upon the auction purchaser a right which he could not obtain by the sale itself. Janardan Singh v Maharajah Perlap Uday Vah Sirsi Deo R A No C of 1880 Per CUNNINGHAM AND PRINCE JJ referred to KALI SANKAR SAHAI v UDAY NATH SARKI Deo (1911) 16 C W N 583

Held also that a brother may sue for a declaration that his brother (a lunatic) is entitled to a share in a mortgage acquired by the two defendants in their own names (one of them being the manager of the lunatic) where the plaintiff is entitled to succeed on the death of the lunatic as one of his heirs. VIR SINGH v HARVANT SINGH

4 ——— Statement by accused—Pointing out places of crime by others and of his subsequent concealment and houses visited for help—Exculpatory statements as to the occurrence—Admission of blood stains on clothes worn by the accused—Admissibility of such statements—Useful test of admissibility of statements to the police—Admissibility of previous deposition when witness cannot be found—Sufficiency of evidence that he could not be found—Evidence Act (I of 1872) ss 25 and 30—Circumstantial evidence rule of S 25 of the Evidence Act does not exclude all statements by an accused to the police but only confessions. There is a distinction between mere admissions and confessions which are statements either directly admitting guilt or suggesting the inference of guilt of the crime charged. The general rule in the section is further subject to that which admits statements leading to discovery whether they amount to confessions or not. Statements by an accused to police officers pointing out the places where the offence was committed by others or where he concealed himself thereafter and the house to which he went for assistance whether regarded as information leading to discovery or as statements made by him as part of his defence are admissible in evidence as admissions. Exculpatory statements by an accused to the police as to what a story to his case actually happened on the occasion of the commission of the offence and put forward by way of defence are admissible as admissions notwithstanding that they are shown by other evidence to be untruthful. So where the accused told the police that certain other persons had killed the deceased described the occurrence and stated that he was seized by them but earned and concealed himself in a paddock that he went to the houses of several people for a stance against the murderers but was turned away as a mad man and that he then went and slept at the house of another person. Held that the statements were admissible in evidence. A useful test as to the admissibility of statements made to the police is to ascertain the purpose to which they are put by the prosecution. If the prosecution relies on the statements as true they may and probably in many cases will be found to amount to confessions. If they are relied on not because of their truth but of their falsity and as a circumstance thereby tending to prove the guilt of the accused they are admissible as admissions. But a statement by the accused to the police that a mark found in the dhot which he was wearing at the time of the occurrence was a blood stain was held under the circumstances (viz. the distance he was from the place of the murder and his prevarication as to the nature of the mark) to be of an incriminating character from which an inference might possibly though not necessarily be drawn. Where the only evidence that a witness could not be found was the statement of a police officer that search had been made for him to summon him but he could not be found that a warrant was also issued and that he was a man of another district but no warrant was produced and there was no evidence of any attempt to serve it or if so of what was done for the purpose. Held that sufficient ground had not been established for the admission of the previous deposition of the witness under s 33 of the Evidence Act. To justify the inference of guilt from circumstances the inculcating facts must be shown to be incompatible with the innocence of the accused and incapable of explanation on any other reasonable hypothesis than that of guilt. EMPEROR v. BHAGAL MALL (1900).

I L R 41 Calc 601

5 ——— Retracted Confession—Evidence Act (I of 1872) s 21. Relevance. For a conspiracy to wage war no act or illegal omission is necessary the agreement of two or more will suffice. While admissions which include confessions are by s 21 of the Evidence Act 1872 declared relevant and may be proved against the persons making them all that s 30 of the Evidence Act provides is that the Court may take them into consideration against other persons. This distinction of language is significant and shows that the Court can only treat a confession as lending assurance to other evidence against a co-accused and a conviction on the confession of co-accused alone would be bad in law. Moreover under s 30 that only can be taken into consideration which is a confession in the true sense of the term so that to place any reliance on a retracted confession against a co-accused would be most unsafe. Yasin v. Emperor I L R 23 Calc 632 referred to. A retracted confession cannot ordinarily take the place of legal proof. EMPEROR v. LALIT MOHAN CHUCKERBUTTY (1911).

1 ——— Suit by reversioner to set aside—
Precious suit by adoptive mother binding effect of— Civil Procedure Code (1908) s 11 A Hindu widow as such brought a suit to set aside an adoption of a son made by her on the ground that she was not vested with authority from her husband to adopt. The suit was contested by the adopted son and it was decided by the Court in India on the ground of estoppel. It was however held by the Privy Council that the adoption was valid and that the adoptive mother had authority from her husband to adopt. After the death of the widow the present suit was brought by an alleged reversioner to the estate of her husband for a declaration that the adoption was invalid and for possession of the estate. Held per LARERJI and CHAMBER JJ (RICHARDS CJ dissenting) that widow represented the estate and the interest of the reversioners to her husband and as the Privy Council had held in the previous suit that the widow had full authority to make the adoption that decision is binding on the reversioners and the present suit was not maintainable. Per RICHARDS CJ (contra) the decision in the suit of the widow was not binding on the reversioners and the present suit was maintainable. RISAL SIRONI & BALWANT SINGH (1915)

The limitation runs from the death of the widow when the cause of action arises entitling the plaintiff to sue for possession. Art 115 could not be applied to this case where the reversioner had brought a suit during life time of the widow praying amongst other reliefs, for a decree declaring the adoption void (as contemplated by Art 113 of Act IX of 1871 and within the period provided therein) but the Court virtually decided that the plaintiff had no cause of action for such a suit until the succession opened to him and his alleged right to recover possession of the property accrued. The alleged adopted son could not claim to have acquired title by adverse possession during the widow's lifetime. Will conferring on the widow power to adopt son and containing no special words restricting that power to one adoption authorised the widow to adopt a second son on the death during minority of the first adopted son Where an adoption made 48 years ago was attacked on the ground that the gift of the boy was not properly made in that it was made by his brother both his parents being then dead Held that the doctrine of factum talit applied and the adoption the setting aside of which would deprive the adopted child of his status after it had been accepted for 48 years should be upheld. Booma Dees v Goolalanund Dass I L R 3 Cal 387 Chinna Gaundan v Kumara Gaundan I Mad II C R p 51 Raja Iyankalav v Jayanarayana I Bom H C Rep A C 191 Janokee Debes v Gopal Acharya I L R 2 Cal 365 applied. Held on the construction of the will that the intention of the testator was that on the death of the adopted son and failure of any issue the entire moveable and immovable properties of the testator would pass to his widow absolutely so that on the death of the first adopted son the property vested in the widow as her stridhan. Bhaowat Pershad v Mubani Lall (1910) 15 C W N 524

These Lordships of the Judicial Committee considered that the Courts below had concurrently found that among the class to which the parties belonged the rules of Hindu Law as to adoption did not apply and that by the custom applicable to that class an unequivocal declaration by the adopting father that a boy had been adopted and the subsequent treatment of that boy as the adopted son was sufficient to constitute a valid adoption and that in fact the defendant had so adopted the plaintiff and treated him as his adopted son. In accordance therefore with the usual practice as to such concurrent decisions Held that the adoption had been established. Owing however to the limited nature of the evidence as to custom among the Agarwal Banias of Zira the effect of the decision should be confined to the particular circumstances of the case. CHITMAN LAL v HAFI CHAND (1913) I L R 40 Cal 879

sale under the Public Demands Recovery Act the right title and interest in a certain homestead land forming part of a ghatwali tenure was sold in 1878 by the Collector. In the sale certificate granted to the auction purchaser the land was de-

no rent was ever paid to the ghatwali or anybody by the judgment debtor or after him by the auction purchaser. In 1888 the plaintiff an infant of 4 years of age succeeded as ghatwali on the relinquishment of the office by his father.
Thereafter by an agreement between the young superior zemindar and the Government the young ghatwali relinquished the office on condition that the property should be treated as resumed by the State to be settled permanently with the Maharajah by whom it would be granted in obtained the mokarar settlement from the Maha-

Canon. The rights of the mortgagee would be extinguished in such a case even where he is not entitled to possession under the mortgage as the mortgagee is not without remedy against the trespasser and could protect his interests by proper proceedings. A mortgage is merely a security for the debt and a mortgagee's right is to sell the interest of the mortgagor in the land and a mortgage decree under which the land is attempted to be sold cannot bind persons who do not derive their title from the mortgagor and were not parties to the suit in which the mortgage decree was passed but claim a statutory title adversely to the mortgagor. *Ramaswami Chetti v. 15 ———— By agent collating rent— Agent paying over the rent to the landlord— Agent settling his own title and keeping the rent to himself during continuance of lease— Landlord's right to land at determination of tenancy. In 1887 certain land belonging to defendant No 2's family was leased to a tenant for 18 years by a registered lease by the plaintiff's family who acted as agents of the defendant No 2's family and collected the rent and paid it over to them. The rent was so paid till 1893 when the plaintiff's family set up their own title to the land and ceased paying over the rent to the defendant No 2. The tenant remained in possession of the land till the determination of the tenancy in 1903 and then attorned to defendant No 2. In 1908 the plaintiff sued to recover possession of the land alleging that the title of defendant No 2 to the land was lost by the adverse possession of the plaintiff. The lower Courts decreed their claim. On appeal by defendant No 2 held reversing the decree that so long as the tenant held the land under the tenancy he held it as the tenant of defendant No 2's family and their rights were just as good at the end of the tenancy as they were at the beginning and were absolutely unaffected in any particular by the reiterated assertions made by the plaintiff of an adverse title or by the fact that the rents were retained by the plaintiff. *Krishnadixit v. 18(a) ——— The question of adverse possession is a mixed question of fact and law. The facts found by the Judge must be accepted but the conclusion drawn from them, namely whether the possession was adverse or not is a question of law.

To prove dispossession of one co sharer by another it must be shown that there was exclusion or ouster to the knowledge of the former and this principle is applicable to all cases of co owners and is not confined to cases where the co owners were per ones who at one time had formed members of a family.

The possession of one co owner is the possession of all for the purpose of limitation.

There can be no dispossession by one joint tenant in the absence of an assertion of a hostile title by him to the knowledge of the other joint tenants sought to be excluded from the joint tenancy and if no notice is given to the co sharer of the denial of his right the occupant must make his possession so visibly hostile and notorious and so apparently exclusive and adverse as to justify the inference of knowledge on the part of the co owner sought to be ousted and of laches if he failed to discover and assert his rights. JOGENDRA NATH MUKHERJEE v RAJENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE 26 C W N 890

20 ——— Co owners—Notice of hostile claim if necessary—Possession hostile at commencement—Subsequent accrual of title as co owner—Possession continued not hostile—Limitation Act (IX of 1908) Sch II Arts 134 and 144. The plaintiff and the third defendant were the reversionary heirs of one O who had mortgaged the suit properties to one P. The third defendant's father purchased the properties from P in 1893 without notice of the mortgage and has been in possession of the same ever since. The widow of O died on the 6th September 1900. The plaintiff brought this suit on the 2nd September 1912 to redeem the properties. The third defendant pleaded that the suit was barred by limitation. Held that the suit was not barred by limitation. Possession held by one of the co owners will not be adverse to the others until they have notice of the hostile claim. Though possession was hostile when it commenced still such possession will not continue to be hostile on the accrual of a peaceful title before the completion of the adverse possession. VELAYUTHAM v SUBBAPPA (1915) 1 L R 39 Mad. 879

Adverse possession against the mortgagor is not per se adverse also against the mortgagee in the case of a simple mortgage. Per SANDERSON C J. Adverse possession effects the interest which the person who was entitled to immediate possession had at that time. Per MOOKERJEE J s 28 of the Limitation Act clearly contemplates that the person whose right is extinguished by lapse of time is a person entitled to institute a suit for possession of the property.

When the holder of title proves that he too has been exercising during the currency of his title various acts of possession then the quality of these acts even though they might have failed to constitute adverse possession as against another may be quite sufficient to destroy that adequacy and interrupt that exclusiveness and continuity which is demanded from any person challenging by possession the title which he holds KRISHNAN (ALIAS KUTHALITI) MOOTHAYAR v PERINGATI KUNHABANKUTTY HAJI 26 C W N 668

Joint principals—Joint power of attorney—Execution of mortgage in pursuance of the authority—Death of one of the principals effect on the power of attorney—Portion of the part as object of the power and the nature of the property whether material in concurring the power—Members of a Mitakshara family—Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872) s 201 S P R K and R S three brothers executed a joint power of attorney in favour of P P the fourth brother (all the brothers living jointly as members of a Mitakshara family) and thereby authorized him to borrow money on their behalf and as security for the loan to mortgage their joint property. Subsequently P S died without issue. After his death a mortgage was executed by P I and P K on their own behalf and by R P as attorney for S P. A second mortgage was executed of the same properties by R I on his own behalf and as attorney for P K and S P. A third mortgage of the same properties was executed by R P on his own behalf and as attorney for S P. P K, having died previously to the execution of the third mortgage leaving certain minor sons and R P also purported to execute the third mortgage as guardian of these minor sons of R K. Held that the intention of the parties was that the power of attorney should continue as long as the property remained undivided and so the deaths of P S and R K did not revoke the power of attorney. Held also that consequently the mortgages were valid and binding on the joint properties. Per MOOREJEE J—We cannot hold as an inflexible rule of law that whenever two principals appoint an agent to take charge of some matter in which they are jointly interested the death of one of them terminates the authority of the agent not merely as regards the deceased but also as regards the surviving principal. 2. ——— It is held that the provisions of the law as to the alienation of sur land—Mortgage and relinquishment of expropriary rights—etc. by two separate documents of even date. Certain zamindars appurtenant to who proprietary share was a considerable area of sur land executed on the same day in favour of creditors to whom they were indebted to the extent of Rs 9000 two documents. By one of them the proprietors covenanted to mortgage with possession 30 bighas of land forming part of their sur land. They recited that they had put the mortgage in a usual position of the land in question surrendering all their rights in the sur and khudkash. They further covenanted that if the mortgagees should fail to obtain possession or if the mortgagees should after all not give up the sur land from their own cultivation or should set up any claim to hold it as expropriary tenants then the mortgagees should be entitled to sue for their mortgage money with heavy interest and to enforce the same by sale of the proprietary rights of the mortgagors not merely in the 30 bighas of sur land but in a total area of 63 bighas and odd belonging to the mortgagors. The consideration of this document was stated as a sum of Rs 8000. A further attempt was made to safeguard the mortgagees by the insertion of a covenant that they should further be entitled at any time to sue for the principal of their mortgage debt and to bring to sale the proprietary rights of the mortgagors in this area of 30 bighas which was formally hypothecated as security for the debt. The other document was a deed of relinquishment by which the mortgagors under the former deed purported to surrender or to relinquish in favour of the mortgagees in return for a consideration of Rs 1000 their rights as expropriary tenants in the 30 bighas of sur land in question. Held that the whole transaction was but a single one effected under cover of two deeds and was nothing more than an attempt to evade by an ingenious device the provisions of sections 10 and 20 of the Agra Tenancy Act 1901. *Mohi Chand v. rule 2 On a partition of certain revenue paying property some land which fell to the plaintiff's share remained in possession of the defendant who refused to vacate it. The plaintiff sued the defendant for ejectment in the Revenue Court. The defendant pleaded that he was an exproprietary tenant but the Court held him to be a non occupancy tenant and ejected him. The plaintiff then brought the present suit under s 34 of the Agra Tenancy Act 1901 for rent of the land held by the defendant during the period prior to his ejectment as land occupied by the defendant without the plaintiff's consent. Held that the defendant being in occupation of the land without the consent of the plaintiff was liable to pay rent therefor under s 34 of the Agra Tenancy Act and further that the claim could be maintained notwithstanding that the defendant was not in possession at the date of the suit. Sheo Gopal Pandey v Thakur Baldeo Singh 8 All LJ 1087 distinguished. Held further that the suit was not barred by reason of the plaintiff having in his previous suit for ejectment treated the defendant as a tenant. Held also that the plaintiff's cause of action under s 34 of the Agra Tenancy Act was no part of his cause of action to recover possession of the property and could not be joined in the previous suit and the present suit was therefore not barred by the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure O II r 2. NARAYAN SINGH v GANGA PRASAD (1913) I L R 35 All 512

Courts—Jurisdiction—Appeal A party to a suit in a Revenue Court cannot merely by formally raising an absolutely untenable plea of jurisdiction remove the case from the Revenue Court to a Civil Court. Deo Narain Singh v. Sitla Bainsu Singh (1916) I L R 40 All 177

Suit for declaration of status of tenant—Plea that plaintiff was not a tenant at all—Question of jurisdiction decided—Appeal In a suit which was framed as a suit under s 95 of the Agra Tenancy Act 1901 asking for a declaration of the plaintiff's status as an occupancy tenant the defendant zamindar pleaded that the plaintiff was a mere trespasser and further stated that there was no allegation in the plaint regarding the jurisdiction of the Court as was required under the law. An issue was framed—Is the suit under s 95 Act II of 1901 maintainable and cognizable by the Court—upon which the decision was—s 95 of the Tenancy Act is the only section under which suits can be brought. The suit is maintainable under s 95 and as such is cognizable by the Court. Held that it could not be said that in these circumstances a question of jurisdiction had been decided within the meaning in s 17 (f) of the Agra Tenancy Act 1901 and the appeal lay to the Commissioner and not to the District Judge. ATAN SINGH v. PRAN SINGH I L R 43 All 368

s 124—Distress—Attachment—Removal by tenants of distrained crops—Theft—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) s 379 A distress legally carried out according to the provisions of the Agra Tenancy Act 1901 takes priority over the rights of a decree holder who has attached the crops distrained and this notwithstanding that the distress may be the result of collusion between the landlord and his tenants. When therefore certain cultivators acting under section 124 (1) of the Agra Tenancy Act cut and stored certain crops which had been distrained by their landlord but which had also been previously attached by a decree holder. Held that they had committed no offence. *EMPEROR v. ss 142 199—Usufructuary mortgage—

Lease by mortgagee in favour of mortgagor—Disfranchisement for arrears of rent—Suit to contest distraint—Subsequent suit by mortgagee for possession of property mortgaged—Res judicata A usufructuary mortgagee of certain zamindari gave a lease of the mortgaged property to the mortgagors. Subsequently the lessor distrained for rent due under the lease. The lessees instituted a suit under section 142 of the Agra Tenancy Act disputing the validity of the distraint on the ground that the mortgage debt had been discharged and the lease had therefore come to an end. In this suit the Court of Revenue found that the mortgage had been discharged. Thereupon the mortgagee instituted the present suit in a Civil Court against the mortgagors claiming possession of the mortgaged property upon the ground that the mortgage still subsisted. Held that the decision of the Court of Revenue could not operate as res judicata. Section 199 of the Agra Tenancy Act 1901 did not apply to a suit by an alleged tenant against an alleged landlord but only to a suit by landlord against a tenant. *SURAJ KUMAR v. —Appeal—Estoppel The plaintiff came into court alleging that on a partition between the defendant and himself certain plots of land had been allotted to him but that the defendant had taken possession of them. He claimed that under a 34 of the Agra Tenancy Act he was entitled to treat the defendant as a tenant at will and he asked for a decree for his ejectment. The defendant pleaded that he was the occupancy tenant of the plots in suit but he had never put forward the plea in the partition proceedings. He also pleaded that having regard to the plaintiff's own allegations, the suit was not cognizable by the Revenue Court and on that ground the suit should be dismissed. The Court of Revenue held that the suit was properly triable by it but dismissed it upon the ground that the defendant was an occupancy tenant. The plaintiff appealed to the Commissioner who returned the memorandum of appeal to the plaintiff holding that the appeal lay to the District Judge. The District Judge entertained the appeal and gave a decree in favour of plaintiff. Held (1) that a question of jurisdiction had been decided within the meaning of s 177 (f) of the Agra Tenancy Act 1901 and the District Judge therefore had jurisdiction to hear the appeal and (2) that the defendant not having raised the question of his occupancy rights in the partition proceedings could not afterwards be permitted to raise it as a defence to the plaintiff's suit for ejectment. Deo Narain Singh v Sita Balkish Singh I L R 40 All 177. Damodar Das v Jhago Singh I A L J 319 and Umrai Singh v Fuar Singh I I R 41 All 270 referred to. GOKARAN SINGH v GANGA SINGH I L R 42 All 92

2. It is that the defendant was holding under an expired lease - Q. In effect, the plaintiff is a suit for ejectment in a Court of Revenue. The defendant pleads that he was entitled to remain in possession under a certain lease, the term of which had not expired. The Court of Revenue treated the question thus raised as falling under a 199 of the Agra Tenancy Act 1901 and directed the defendant to file a suit in the Civil Court within three months to vindicate his right. Held that a 199 was not applicable and the defendant was not bound to file his suit in the Civil Court within three months from the date of the order of the Court of Revenue. SINGH MAL & HIRA LAL V. the plaintiff's share of the profits — the defendant's share in the revenue papers of the institution of 1917. The plaintiff is a suit for profits in a Revenue Court respecting an interest in a share amounting in all to 1/2. It appeared that the plaintiff had been during the period for which profits were claimed and was at the date of the institution of the suit recorded as having an interest in the whole 1/2. On the other hand the Civil Court had previously decided that the plaintiff owned a one sixth interest in half the 1/2. It was thus that came to no decision in respect of the suit in the remaining half which was 1/12 of the property. During the pendency of the suit for profits the entries in the revenue papers were amended so that revenue authorities and the plaintiff recorded as having an interest in half of the 1/2. It was held that the alteration of the revenue records pending the plaintiff's suit for profits could not affect the plaintiff's right as they stood when the suit was filed irregularly. *Hargu Lal v. P e n a n d — E f f e c t —

Revenue Court decision on question of tenancy in a former suit in a subsequent suit in a Civil Court for ejectment as trespasser Defendants were tenants of one D. D took proceedings in the Revenue Courts to eject them as tenants at will. The Assistant Collector dismissed the suit but the Commissioner allowed the appeal. The Board of Revenue however in second appeal dismissed the suit. D in the meantime had executed the decree passed by the Commissioner and obtained possession. Upon the decree passed by the Board of Revenue in their favour the defendants made an application to be restored to possession but it was rejected as time barred. D's son brought the present suit to eject the defendants as trespassers alleging that he had been in possession of the land as his Khude kash that the defendants had entered upon forcible possession and that the effect of the Revenue Court proceedings was to extinguish the tenancy. The defendants pleaded that the tenancy subsisted. The Court of first instance decided that the tenancy was subsisting but granted to the plaintiff damages for forcible dispossession. The lower Appellate Court remanded the case to the first Court with directions to act in accordance with the provisions of a 202 of the Agra Tenancy Act. Held that the order was the proper one to make in the circumstances of the case and the question whether by reason of the events that had happened since the decision of the Board of Revenue the tenancy was extinguished or not was one which the Revenue Courts were competent to decide. Maru v Gauri Salai (1904) All Weekly Notes 46 Sargu Musr v Bindern Pershad 11 A L J 691 referred to BHARAT MADAN MOHAN LAL (1916) I L R 36 All 533

In a Criminal case the Magistrate after examining the complainant summoned the accused under s 37 Penal Code although allegations were made in the petition of complaint of an offence under s 147 Penal Code also. An agreement was entered into between the parties and with the leave of the Court the case was compromised. Held that a case under s 37 Penal Code being compoundable with the leave of the Court and the Magistrate having given permission to compound the case the contract was not opposed to public policy. The allegation in the petition of complaint of a non-compoundable offence under s 147 Penal Code which was not accepted by the Magistrate when issuing process made no difference. *MAHAMMAD ISMAIL v. In 1895 the appellant in titrated two suits in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Nadia the one against the Government (7) and the other against W & Co (74) of the same year the object of the suits being to obtain possession of different plots which had re-appropriated after being dilapidated. Suit 73 was compromised on the terms amongst others that W & Co were to retain the lands the subject of the suit 73 and recognise the ownership of the appellant and that if the appellant succeeded in obtaining a decree against the Government she would grant a joint settlement of the lands in suit 72 to W & Co on the same conditions as those agreed to with regard to the lands in his possession. This agreement was reduced to writing a petition of compromise based upon it was filed by the appellant in suit 73 and on 20th September 1897 judgment was given in terms of the compromise and a decree was drawn up in pursuance of the judgment on the same date. This decree recited the claims in the suit and the petition for compromise and granted a decree in the terms of the compromise which were then set out in full. *Gradual accretion to an already existing lanka—Slow and imperceptible meaning of—Land added in the bed of the river by slow imperceptible and gradual river action to a known extent of land applicable to law of accretion to The plaintiff respondent sued for a declaration against Government that a certain lanka or alluvial island formed in the bed of the Godavari at a place where it was both tidal and navigable belonged to him as an accretion to his adjoining lanka. It was found by the Court below with which finding the High Court agreed that the suit lanka was originally formed in contiguity with the plaintiff's land that it was formed very rapidly and in some years during the annual rise of the river large additions were made which could not but be perceptible as soon as the water subsided that portion of the alluvial land was separated from the rest by a channel a few years before the suit and that it was not possible to say that the accretion was slow or imperceptible. Held that the suit land was an accretion to the plaintiff's land that in applying the rule of English law as to accretions local physical conditions must be taken into consideration and that in the case of large rivers in India like the Godavari which on occasions leave large and sudden deposits it is not necessary that the accretion should be slow or perceptible. Rez (nom Gifford) v Yarborough 2 Bligh (N S) 147 and Attorney General v McCarthy 2 Ir R 260 referred to Srinath Poy v Dhruvabandhu Sen I L R 42 Calc 439 applied. Held also that the fact that in 1870 when the suit lanka was not as yet formed the extent and boundaries of the plaintiff's lanka were known as ascertainable did not render the law of accretion inapplicable. Attorney General of Southern Nigeria v John Holt & Co (Liverpool) Limited [1915] A C 519 612 followed. Secretions—The Bengal Alluvion and Diluvion Regulation 1815 (Ben Reg XI of 1815) ss 4 and 5. Where a party can show that clear land is in fact a reformation in situ of land identifiable as his own he is entitled to that land though it may have been for a period submerged. It is not sufficient for such a claimant to show that the accretion is in situ of a river bed which has been settled with him. It is necessary for him to show that the land claimed had previous existence and was reformed by 4 of the Bengal Alluvion and Diluvion Regulation 1815 as a whole was not intended to apply to land which has been previously in existence and the property of individuals. 5 6 was intended to apply to such land. after a revision to the High Court has been rejected. The plaintiff petition r applied to the Judge of the Small Cause Court Lahore for amendment of a decree passed in his favour. The Court held that it had no power to grant the application inasmuch as the defendant had presented a petition for revision to the High Court which although rejected in limine had the effect of merging its decree in that of the High Court. Held that a decree of a Small Cause Court is final and not appealable and although in certain circumstances it may be set aside or modified by a High Court in virtue of its revisional powers it must remain the decree of the Court which originally passed it when the High Court declines to interfere with it on the revision side and that the Lower Court accordingly was competent to entertain the application for amendment. KHODA BAKSHI v ALLAH DITTA I L R 12 Lah 342

— Limitation—Fresh relief claimed in respect of which a suit would have been time barred. A deed of mortgage purported in the first place to mortgage with possession certain specified plots of sir and khudkash land. There was however a stipulation in the mortgage deed that if the mortgagies failed to obtain possession under the deed or were disturbed in their possession they would be entitled to recover their money from the mortgagors and thus either by sale of the mortgaged plots or by sale of the zamindari share to which the plots appertained or from the persons and the property of the judgment debtors. A suit was filed just within the extended period of limitation allowed by section 31 of Act No. IV of 1908 for sale of the specified plots. After the period of limitation however had expired the plaintiffs applied for leave to amend the plaint and asked for sale of the zamindari share. The Court below allowed the amendment. Held that the Court had no power to allow amendment of the plaint by introducing a new cause of action after the period of limitation in respect of such claim had expired. Muhammad Saif v Abdul Majid I L R 33 All 616 distinguished. BALFARAN UPADHYA v CHAYA DIN KALWAR (1914) I L R 30 All 370

— Mortgage Suit—Practice and procedure—Omission to include claims on previous mortgage and charge—Inadvertence and bona fide and erroneous impression as to jurisdiction—Right of appeal—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) O II r 2. Where the Court on an application for amendment of plaint granted it without deciding the points urged but subject to any contention which the defendants might raise in answer to the claim as amended. Held that it was better and more regular that the question of the right to amend the plaint should have been determined before the order was made or if this would have involved a lengthy inquiry covering the same ground as the evidence in the suit that the bearing of the application to amend should have been adjourned to the hearing of the suit and determined on the evidence then taken. The Court being desirous of getting at the true facts will allow an amendment subject to the three chief conditions that there is good faith on the part of the applicant, possibility of amendment without such prejudice to the other party as cannot be compensated by costs and lastly that the amendment is not such as to turn a suit of one character into a suit of another character. O II r 2 of the Civil Procedure Code refers to a case where there has been a suit in which there has been an omission to sue in respect of portion of a claim and a decree has been made in that suit. In that case a second suit in respect of the portion omitted is barred. In a case where the suit has not been heard but a claim has been omitted by inadvertence an amendment may be allowed. Qare—Whether there was an appeal or no from an order of amendment in this case. UPENDRA NARAIN FOY v JAYAKI NATH FOY (1917) I L R 45 Cal 395

Annuitant's charge on property Where in an eknamam between A and B it was agreed that A would receive Rs 150 per month during her lifetime from the share of the estate which she inherited from her son that B would pay the said sum every month and if he did not pay it A would be entitled to recover it by suit from the said share. Held that the annuity was a charge upon the said share. The property could be easily ascertained and that being so it did not matter that no schedule of property was given in the deed. The question in all such cases is one of intention. In equity no charge can be created unless there is an intent to charge.

1 ABATEMENT OF APPEAL

— Limitation Act IX of 1908 s 3 Art 177—Period of limitation provided in Art 177 applicable to applications made after the day when the Act came into force—Effect of abatement of appeal against one of several joint trustees. Applications to bring in the legal representatives of a deceased respondent made after the coming into force of Act IX of 1908 must under s 3 and Art 177 of the Act be made within six months of the death of such respondent. If not so made the appeal must abate against such respondent. Where the deceased respondent in respect of whom the appeal abates is a joint trustee with other respondents the appeal cannot proceed against such other respondents. Whether the Court has jurisdiction to consolidate proceedings or not it would only do so where the consolidation is asked for before the trial of the suits begins or where the evidence given in the two cases is common in both of them. No amendment of plaint can be allowed where the proposed amendment would take away from the defendants if allowed a right that they would have if the plaintiffs had proceeded against them by way of original suit. Section 136 H (1) introduced into the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act of 1881 by Act XVI of 1889 qualifies s 22 cl (b) of the original Act with the result that under it read with s 3 of the Sambalpur Civil Courts Act 1906 (Beng Act IV of 1906) an appeal against a decree or order passed by the Deputy Commissioner acting as Civil Court lies to the District Judge. Where in such a case an appeal was wrongfully preferred before the Commissioner no second appeal from the Commissioner's decision lies to the High Court. RAJIVRATH SINGH s ABHUT SINGH (1911)

Disposal of effect on primary judgment—The effect of the disposal of an appeal from the decree of the primary Court is that if it is reversed it is absolutely dead and gone and if affirmed it is merged in the decree of the superior Court which takes its place for all intents and purposes. 8 DEMAND

Appeal from order of dismissal under s 20 Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1885)—Suit in which two different claims were made—Claim to recover money paid to release attachment disallowed—Claim for damages for wrongful attachment withdrawn—Non appearance of plaintiff—Improper procedure in dismissing suit for default—Remand. The plaintiff (appellant) made two claims: one for money paid into Court to release from a attachment property which he alleged he had purchased but which had been taken as a loan as belonging to the Delhi Cotton Mills Company against which the defendant (respondent) held a decree and the other for damages for the wrongful attachment. As to the former claim the District Judge ruled that the payment was entirely voluntary and for the plaintiff's own interests and that his remedy was under s 69 and 70 of the Contract Act against the Delhi Cotton Mills and I dismissed the case for recovery with costs. The case will proceed on the question of damages for illegal attachment. Evidence was produced in support of the claim for damages and after an unsuccessful petitioning that a decree might be drawn up in respect of the dismissal of his claim to the money paid into Court and for leave to withdraw his claim for damages under s 33 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1885) with liberty to bring a fresh suit the plaintiff on the 11th day withdrew from the claim for damages but not from the claim to the recovery of the money.

Subsequently the defendant proceeded to give evidence upon the issues raised in the case and eventually the plaintiff not appearing the District Judge dismissed the whole case for default under s 102 of the Code. On appeal to the Chief Court the majority of a Full Bench of that Court decided that no appeal lay from an order dismissing a suit under s 102 and the appeal was consequently dismissed. Held by the Judicial Committee that after the decision of the District Judge adverse to the plaintiff on the claim to recover the money paid which left no question as to that claim open in the Court of first instance and the abandonment by the plaintiff of the claim to damages there remained nothing in substance to be tried and that the case was one not proper to be dealt with under s 102. Without deciding (as being therefore unnecessary) the question whether an appeal would lie against a dismissal regularly made under that section their Lordships remanded the case to the Chief Court to decide the appeal on its merits. KANTIYA LAL v THE NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA (1910) I L R 37 Cal 426

An adjudication was made by the Trial Judge which declared that the partnership was dissolved as from 1st July 1907 and then ordered and decreed that it is referred to the Assistant Referee of this Court to take the following account and make the following enquiry that is to say (a) to enquire who were the partners entitled to share in the assets and goodwill of the partnership business (b) to take an account of the dealings of the parties with the assets of the partnership business. From that adjudication though it was appealable the appellants did not appeal. The Referee made the enquiries directed and took the account. His report as to enquiry (a) was adverse to the appellants was excepted to by them and was confirmed by the Trial Judge in his final decree. On an appeal by the appellants raising the question whether inquiry (a) was rightly included in the first adjudication or whether it was not one which should have been made by the Court itself. Held (affirming the decision of the Courts below) that the first adjudication of the Trial Judge which included inquiry (a) was a preliminary decree under a 97 of the Civil Procedure Code 1908 and that the appellants not having preferred an appeal from it could not question it on appeal from the final decree. The sentences to run concurrently. On the 2nd February 1920 his counsel erroneously presented an appeal to the High Court which was returned on the 21st February for presentation to the proper Court and was filed in the Sessions Court on the same day. The Sessions Judge dismissed it as time barred relying on Sant Singh v Qaim (118 P P 1908). The petitioner filed a revision to the High Court. The definition of decree in s 2 of the Code is not applicable to Chapter XLV (relating to appeals to His Majesty in Council). against to His Majesty in Council under s 393 and that provision cannot be restricted by the provisions of s. 353 (16) that such orders passed in appeal shall be final. In this case which was an appeal from an order of the High Court confirming a sale in execution of decree and reversing an order of a Deputy Commissioner which set the sale aside it appeared that the judgment debtor had died pending the proceedings for attachment and sale leaving a widow and a minor son and that the whole of the proceedings subsequent to his death were without notice to any one representing the minor that the sale proclamation had not been properly made and did not contain the particulars required by s. 37 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1859, especially those as to the value of the property which was grossly undervalued, that the property was sold for a very inadequate price and that there was abundant evidence that the appellant had suffered substantial injury therefrom. Held (reversing the decision of the High Court) that there had been no proper representation of the minor and that the above matters constituted material irregularities in publishing and conducting the sale within the meaning of s. 311 of the Code which justified the setting aside of the sale. There were concurrent decisions of the Courts in India that the Court of Wards never took charge of the property of the minor and their Lordships came to the same conclusion. Held that inasmuch as the interests of the minor with regard to the property were not in fact represented by the Court of Wards it was open to his mother as his natural guardian to appear (as she had done) and represent him in the proceedings and his appeal was not rendered incompetent thereby. *KRISHNA PRASAD SINGH v. Their Lordships have come to the conclusion that injustice of the kind mentioned above has been done in this case by the admission of a vast body of wholly inadmissible hearsay and other evidence and the evidence so admitted has been used to the grave prejudice of the accused and that at the end of the hearing before the Sessions Judge there did not exist any reliable evidence upon which a capital conviction could be safely or justly based. *VAITHI NATHA PILLAI v. An order sanctioning prosecution made in the course of a disciplinary proceeding against an attorney under cl 10 of the Letters Patent of 1863 is not governed by cl 39 and therefore against such an order no leave to appeal to the Privy Council can be given. Clause 39 of the Letters Patent empowers the High Court to delude the fitness of an appeal to the Privy Council in any matter not being of criminal jurisdiction if it is a final judgment of decree or order of the Court made on appeal or in the exercise of original jurisdiction. A proceeding under cl 10 is a disciplinary power which does not fall under any of the jurisdictions specified in the Letters Patent and thus is not governed by cl 39. IN THE MATTER OF AN ATTORNEY (1914)

The appellant brought this suit against the respondents to set aside a disposition of the respondent by his father and to have the same declared null and void under the Hindu Law and for a declaration that it did not affect his interest in the ancestral estate of one V of whom he claimed to be the nearest reversioner heir. The suit was dismissed by both Courts in India and the appellant filed an appeal to His Majesty in Council pending which he died. In an application by his grand on as the sole surviving member of his grandfather's family and also on his death the next reversioner heir to the estate of V for an order that his name be substituted on the record for that of the appellant and that the appeal be revived. Held that the petitioner was entitled to the order asked for under O I r 1 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) which declares that persons who may be joined in one suit as plaintiffs. A suit to set aside an alienation is brought by the presumptive reversioner in representative capacity and on behalf of all the reversioners. The act complained of is to their common detriment, just as the relief sought for is for their common benefit. Under the above rule the contingent reversioner may be joined as plaintiff in the presumptive reversioner's suit and if it follows that on his death the next presumptive reversioner is entitled to continue the suit begun by him. The two kinds of suits which the Indian law permits to be brought in the lifetime of a female owner by reversioners for a declaration that an alienation made by her is invalid or an alienation effected by her is not binding against the inheritance (see articles 118 and 120 of schedule I of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908)) although they differ in character will be found to be the same in both in fact as regards the position of the plaintiff so far as the point for decision is concerned and the test of res judicata is not relevant to the inquiry whether the contingent reversioner is entitled to continue the suit commenced by the presumptive reversioner. It is the common injury to the reversioners which entitles them to sue and the question

Final order" meaning of—Order finally disposing of rights of parties—Contr. of with arbitration clause—Arbitration Act (1899) 19—Civil Procedure Code 1908 s 109 110—Grant of certificate that value of matter in dispute exceeded Rs 10,000. The decision of the Court of Appeal in England as to what is a final order is that an order is final if it finally disposes of the rights of the parties Salaman v Warr (1811) 1 Q B 734 and Bacon v Altrham Union District Council [1903] 1 K P 34 referred to. In a suit for damages for an alleged breach of contract for the sale of cotton the contract contained an arbitration clause and the defendant applied under section 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act (IX of 1899) for a stay of proceedings with a view to the issues being referred to arbitration under that section. The Trial Judge granted a stay but on appeal the Court of the Judicial Commissioners of Sind reversed that order and refused to stay the proceedings. On an application to the Judicial Commissioners for a certificate under section 109 of the Civil Procedure Code 1908 with a view to appeal to the Privy Council the Court of the Judicial Commissioners being of opinion that the order refusing a stay was a final order granted a certificate and under section 110 that the value of the matter in dispute exceeded Rs 10,000 and the appeal came to His Majesty in Council. On a preliminary objection by the respondent that the order refusing a stay was in fact not final and that the appeal did not lie. Held that the order under appeal did not finally dispose of the rights of the parties but left them to be determined by the Court in the ordinary way. It was therefore not a final order within s 109 of the Civil Procedure Code 1908 which relates to appeals to the Privy Council and appeal was therefore dismissed. Pamchand Mansingh v Govindadas Vithandas Ratanchand (1910) 1 L R 47 Cal 818

ARBITRANCE TO ARBITRATION

I Letters Patent
1865 cl 10—Order of Judge refusing to decide whether arbitrators are going beyond scope of their authority—Judgment—Appeal—Construction of submission to arbitration—Insurance against fire—Liability of Company for further loss. An order of a Judge dismissing a petition to revoke a submission to arbitration on the ground that the arbitrators are going beyond the scope of the reference is a judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent and as such is appealable. Such an order compels a party to submit to the jurisdiction of arbitrators though he complains that no such jurisdiction exists. It decides a question of right namely whether or not he is by the terms of reference to arbitration deprived of his right at common law to have the dispute decided in the ordinary way in a Court of law. It goes to jurisdiction and is not passed as an exercise of discretion. The loss or damage by fire which is insured against in a policy of insurance cannot include loss caused by deterioration of the property insured consequent on neglect (if any) of the Insurance Companies to take care of it if they have taken possession. A loss so caused is not an inevitable or direct consequence of the mischief by fire. It is only where mischief arises from fire (in fire insurance cases) and from perils of the sea (in marine insurance cases) and the natural and almost inevitable consequence of that mischief is to create further mischievous results that underwriters become responsible for the further mischief so incurred. Montoya v London Assurance Company 6 Ex 451 458 referred to. The fact that a petition by nineteen different Companies was not signed by all the nineteen Companies and that the appeal from the order of the Judge dismissing the petition was by but one of the nineteen Companies and the other Companies were not parties to it would have required serious consideration if the Court had to revoke the submission to arbitration but when the order which the Court passes is only an intimation to the arbitrators of its opinion on the question of their jurisdiction it is immaterial whether all or some of the Companies are formally parties to the proceedings in appeal. As to the objection that even so far as the petition is by one Company it is signed by one of its officers without any authorisation as required by law the defect is a mere irregularity which can be cured if necessary by the Company putting in a power of attorney showing the authority given to a signatory. ATLAS ASSURANCE COMPANY LIMITED v AHMED BHAY HABIBHOY (1908) I L R 34 Bom 1

2 ——— Arbitration Act (IX of 1893) s 19—Contract by both parties and notes — Arbitration clause—Contract Act (IX of 1872) s 6 G. Where on application under an arbitration clause in a contract was made to stay proceedings and refer matter in dispute to arbitration and it was contended by the opposite party that for the original contract a new agreement had been substituted inasmuch as both parties had agreed to an extension of time. Held that a mere extension of time did not operate so as to rescind the original contract but where a new term to the inspection of the goods before delivery had also been introduced the original contract was replaced by the new agreement to which the arbitration clause in the original contract could not apply and the application must therefore be refused. In this case the acceptance of part delivery out of time also indicated a new agreement between the parties. LACHMINARAIN BHARADWAJ v HOARE MILLER & Co (1913) I L R 41 Cal 35

3 ——— Jurisdiction—Power of Court to supersede an arbitration proceeding under its orders before submission of award—Pennington—Civil Procedure Code (1908) s 115 sch II para 15. Sembl. That the intention of the second schedule to the Code of Civil Procedure is that when once a reference to arbitration has been made under the orders of the Court that reference should only be superseded for one of the reasons given in the schedule itself and that allegations of corruption against the arbitrator should be dealt with under para 15 after the award has been received. Even if a Civil Court possesses inherent jurisdiction to supersede an arbitration proceeding under its orders such jurisdiction should be cautiously and sparingly exercised and an application involving such jurisdiction should at least suggest grounds for supposing that the applicant will suffer some irreparable injury if prompt action is not taken. The High Court can interfere in revision when the inherent jurisdiction of a Court is exercised wrongly and with material irregularity. Atlas Assurance Company v Ahmedbhay Habibhoj I L R 34 Bom 1 not followed CHITABHAI v RAOHIBHAI DAIYAL (1914) I L R 38 All 354

It is applicable even if the person appointed arbitrator has not accepted office before refusing to act. When he has been nominated by the parties his refusal to act is signified as clearly by his refusal to accept nomination as by any other course he could pursue and any other construction would defeat the provisions of the Act. Pugardin Ramtani v Moinsara Ramtani I L R 6 Vad 414 and Bepin Behari Choudhury v Annoda Prasad Mullick I L R 18 Cal 321 disapproved of. In the present case the parties had compromised the suit and had stated in the instrument of compromise the matters in dispute and had each nominated therein a person as arbitrator to decide them. A decree in terms of the compromise was made by the Court and the matters were referred to the arbitrators named for their decision. One of them refused to act and the party whose nominee he was declined to make another nomination. The District Judge in the exercise of his discretion under s 510 of the Code thereupon himself determined the matters submitted to the arbitrators thus practically superseding the arbitration. His decision was confirmed by the Court of the Judicial Commissioner. Held (reversing the decision of the Courts in India) that the District Judge should under s 510 have appointed a new arbitrator which he had power to do notwithstanding that the arbitrator refusing to act had not first consented to do so and he was not precluded from making such appointment by the fact that the party whose arbitrator had refused to act declined to assist the Court by suggesting another name. The Court could not proceed with the suit which had been put an end to by the compromise. The decree on which was final and it had no power except by consent of parties to itself decide the matters referred to arbitration. That right having been remitted to one tribunal had been decided by another was a fatal objection to the procedure adopted. SADIQ HUSAIN v NAZIR BEGAM (1911) I L R 33 All 743

The plaintiff after shipment of goods drew two bills of exchange against the defendant at 60 days sight. These were presented by the National Bank of India Delhi to the defendant who accepted them but subsequently refused to pay them upon maturity. The plaintiff accordingly sued the defendant and based his claim upon the accepted but unpaid bills and in the alternative sued for the price of the goods and certain expenses. The indent contained a clause that if any claim or dispute arose in connection with the contract it should be referred to arbitration and the defendant relying on this clause applied for stay of the proceedings under r 18 Sch II of the Code of Civil Procedure. The indent also contained a clause to the effect that the bills drawn by the sellers on the buyers must be accepted and paid at maturity notwithstanding any objection the latter may have regarding or on account of any variation whatever in the terms of the indent such objection to be settled by arbitration. On the application of the aggrieved party the award was remitted on the 22nd July 1918 by the High Court to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce for further consideration. The Chamber thereupon made a fresh award on the 24th October 1918 again in favour of the same party as at first. Both parties obtained separate Rules from the High Court—the one aggrieved by the award to show cause why the said award should not be set aside as having been made in contravention of s 13 (2) of the Indian Arbitration Act the other in whose favour the award was made to show cause why the time for making the award should not be enlarged till the 31st October 1918. Held that without deciding whether there was an appeal against the order refusing to extend the time an appeal lay against the order setting aside the award and the Court in considering that appeal must consider the learned Judge's reasons for his decision and if the Court came to the conclusion that the learned Judge's reasons were ill founded and that he was wrong in holding that he had no power to extend the time and so make the award effective this Court would have the power to make an order for extension of time under O XLI r 33 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held also that this case depended upon the provisions of the Indian Arbitration Act and under s 12 of that Act the Court had power to extend the time though the time for making the award had expired and even though the award had been in fact made. *Shib Krishna Das v. to vitiate the award without any imputation on the honesty or impartiality of the arbitrator but no such irregularities were established by the appellant on whom the onus of proving them lay. An arbitrator selected by the parties comes within the general obligation of being bound to give evidence and where a charge of dishonesty or partiality is made any relevant evidence he can give is without doubt properly admissible. It is however necessary to take care that evidence admitted as relevant on a charge of dishonesty or partiality is not used for a different purpose namely to scrutinize the decision of the arbitrator on matters within his jurisdiction and in which his decision is final. The limitations applicable to the evidence of an arbitrator as witness in a legal proceeding to enforce his award are stated in the case of Buccleugh v Metropolitan Board of Works L R 3 H L 418 but where charges of dishonesty are made the Court would reject no evidence of an arbitrator which could be of assistance in informing itself whether such charges were established. In this case the charges of dishonesty and partiality were held to have entirely failed. Where part of an award was found to be invalid as being in excess of the arbitrator's powers and it was separable from the rest the remainder of the award being good was maintained. It is generally desirable that an arbitrator should make and retain for subsequent use if necessary notes of the proceedings before him but there is no warrant for holding that in the absence of such notes an award should be set aside at the instance of one of the parties who must be held to have known the general course of procedure and who did not make any protest until after the making of the award with the terms of which she was not satisfied. AMIR BEGUM v BADE UD DIN HUSAIN (1914) 1 L R 36 All 336

Whether having regard to the above changes in the law the decision of the Privy Council in Pajah Hor Narain v Bhagwant 1 L R 13 All 300 s c L R 18 I A 55 is of the same binding authority as before. Semble As in this case while the award was being rendered into English the parties entered into a written agreement not to dispute the award the plaintiff was precluded from questioning the award. The agreement might be regarded as amounting to a fresh submission and acceptance of the English award as an award binding on all the parties to the agreement or it might be regarded as a lawful adjustment of the suit which might be enforced as a decree under O XXIII r 3. SRI LAL v ANJUN DAS (1914) 18 C W N 1325

The order does not merge in the decree. It is competent to a Court setting aside an order directing an award to be filed to declare that the decree based on the award has been vacated because the order on which it was based has been cancelled. Khetra Nath v Ushabalo 18 C W N 331. Submission to arbitration is a contract and the parties thereto must not only have a general legal capacity to contract but they must also have such power in relation to the subject matter of the submission as will enable them to carry into effect any order which could be legally and properly laid upon them by the award. Where a party's capacity to contract is restricted the power of making a submission is in the same manner and to the same extent limited. An executor cannot make a reference to arbitration with the avowed purpose that the terms of the will may be modified and arrangements made for the management and distribution of the estate contrary to the directions of the testator. Questions of law including questions as to construction of a will may be validly referred to arbitrators. But they cannot add to or alter the terms of the will. A Court will not enforce an award to the detriment of persons not parties to a reference may take exception to the legality of the award. Submission to an arbitrator does not operate as a waiver of an extrinsic objection that the award is illegal because based on an illegal act or subject matter. SOUDAXANI GHOSH v GOPAL CHANDRA GHOSH (1914) 19 C W N 948

But the arbitrator can only extend the time in such cases before the time originally fixed for making the award had expired. If he did not do so he was by reason of effusion of time functio officio and had no further jurisdiction in the matter. As in this case the arbitrator had extended the time after the three months originally fixed by Court had expired the award must be set aside although it was submitted within the time so extended by the arbitrator. If an arbitrator unknown to one of the parties has a personal interest in the subject matter of the award it would be improper that he should act as arbitrator. If however his interest is insignificant and unknown to himself so that it is impossible that it could have influenced his award in any way the Court would not be disposed to set aside the award. *CO-OPERATIVE HINDUS' TRADING CO. Even when the portion of the award open to exception is separable from the rest the Court cannot proceed to give effect to the portion which is valid in a summary proceeding under para 21 of Sch II of the Civil Procedure Code. The mere fact however that the award cannot be filed will not affect the validity of this portion of the award as a contract between the parties. Award made in the absence of party who withdrew from the arbitration if bad. A suit was referred to the arbitration of three persons two of whom were witnesses in the case one for the plaintiff and one for the defendant. The former of these gave evidence before the two other arbitrators at the instance of the plaintiff. Thereafter the defendant objected to the arbitration going on and intimated that he would not call any evidence before the arbitrators who concluded the arbitration and gave an award two for the plaintiffs and one for the defendant. The application for reference to arbitration contained a provision that the opinion of the majority would prevail but the reference to arbitration did not provide for it. Held that there was no impropriety on the part of the arbitrator who gave evidence before his colleagues. That the application for reference to arbitration having provided that the opinion of the majority would prevail the award was not bad because of the absence of any such provision in the reference to arbitration. That the defendant having refused to call any evidence before the arbitrators they were justified in continuing the hearing and giving their award in the absence of the defendant. *HATIDAS DUTTA v. 24 ————— Arbitration award proceedings provided for in contract—Stay of arbitration pending decision of suit when party filed suit impeaching contract on equitable grounds. In a contract of purchase and sale of goods between plaintiff and defendants there was the usual clause for referring disputes arising out of the contract to arbitration. Plaintiff repudiated the contract on the ground that the broker in the transaction did not disclose that he was a partner of the defendants firm. Defendants maintained that plaintiff was still bound to take delivery of goods and on plaintiff's refusal referred to dispute to arbitrators mentioned in the contract. The plaintiff filed a suit for a declaration that the contract was not binding on him and obtained an order from Court restraining defendants from proceeding with the arbitration. Held that as this was a case where the plaintiff was impeaching the contract on the ground of fraud the Court below was right in staying the arbitration proceedings until the suit impeaching the contract was decided. *GAJANAND MASHARA v. Paragraph 21 of the 2nd Schedule to the Code of Civil Procedure 1908 confers no power on the court to remit an award for the determination of matters left undecided by the arbitrators. If therefore any of the matters referred to in paragraph 14 are proved the court has no option but to refuse to file the award. KUNJ LAL v. BANWARI LAL 4 Pat L J 394

26 ————— Delay in filing award effect of when parties acquiesce in delay—Code of Civil Procedure (Act V of 1908) s 115 Sch II rr 8 and 15—Revision. R 15 of Sch II of the Code of Civil Procedure 1908 does not render an award made out of time per se a nullity but merely voidable within ten days from the time when the award is filed and it is binding upon the parties if no action taken before them. Under r 8 of Sch II the Court may extend the time after the award has in fact been made even if made out of time and the parties can also agree to an extension and such agreement can be implied. In such a case the parties would be estopped from impeaching the award upon the ground that it was made out of time. If a Court bond fide in the exercise of its jurisdiction decides some matter of fact or law erroneously even though such decision may involve a determination as to the regularity or irregularity of some method of procedure this determination would not necessarily render applicable the provisions of s 115. *PATTO KULDEVI v. Sch II cls 14 and 16—Application under O IX s 9—Award leaving matters referred to arbitration undetermined—S 115—Jurisdiction of High Court—Permission of award to arbitrator by High Court in revisional jurisdiction—Procedure A suit was referred to arbitration by a Court on the application of the parties. The terms of the reference provided that the arbitrator should determine the case after hearing the evidence and if one of the parties failed to appear before him he should have power to decide the case ex parte. On the date fixed for trial the defendant appeared with his witnesses but the plaintiff did not appear. The arbitrator did not take the evidence on behalf of the defendant but made an award by dismissing the suit for default. The award was filed in Court. Thereupon plaintiff applied to the Munsif for the setting aside of the award on the ground that he could not appear before the arbitrator for illness but the application was rejected and the Munsif passed judgment according to the award. In the course of his order however the Munsif expressed an opinion that the ground alleged might be a good ground under O IX r 9 Civil Procedure Code. Plaintiff thereafter applied to the Munsif under O IX r 9 Civil Procedure Code and then the Munsif set aside the award of the arbitrator and restored the suit to his file. The defendant moved the High Court against that order. Held that the arbitrator had no power to deal with the matter under the provisions of O IX r 8 of the Civil Procedure Code and that he ought to have heard the evidence on behalf of the defendant that the award made by the arbitrator should be held to have left undetermined the matters referred to him for arbitration and that under the provisions of cl 14 of the Second Schedule of the Code of Civil Procedure the Munsif ought to have remitted the award or the matters referred to arbitration for the reconsideration of the arbitrator that the application under O IX r 9 Civil Procedure Code made to the Munsif was incompetent and the Munsif was obviously wrong in setting aside the award of the arbitrator and restoring the suit to his file. Held further that the proper order to make in this case was that the order of the Munsif being set aside the High Court in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction under s 115 Civil Procedure Code should remit the award in the matter referred to arbitration for reconsideration by the same arbitrator on the ground that the award had left undetermined the matters referred to arbitration. *GOPAL CHANDRA DAS v. The lower Court set aside the award on the grounds that the arbitrators had taken an erroneous view of the law and that as the minor had received a smaller share under the award it was not to his benefit and therefore not binding upon him. 41 ————— Mutation of names—Mutation proceedings referred to arbitrator—Award based on finding as to title of one of the parties—Award no bar to suit for possession in a Civil Court. The parties to proceedings for mutation on names in a Court of Revenue referred the matters in dispute between them to arbitration. The arbitrators made their award declaring a certain person to be entitled to mutation upon the finding that he was the adopted son of the last holder. Held that this award was no bar to the other party to the mutation proceedings suing in a Civil Court to recover possession of the property upon the ground that the adoption of the defendant was not established. Girdhari Chaudh v Pim Baran Misir I A L J 85 followed. DALIP SINGH v MAN KUTWAR I L R 43 All 327

43 ————— Contract for the sale of goods between London and Madras merchant—Stipulation for arbitration in London—Award made in London—Suit on award—Defence that arbitrator having given no opportunity to Defendant to be heard if may be taken in the suit—English Arbitration Act 1889—Supreme Court Rule O 64 r 14—Irregularity not going to the root and not apparent on the face of award. In a contract to purchase sheep skin of a specified quality by a merchant carrying on business in London from a merchant carrying on business in Madras it was stipulated that any differences not amicably settled was to be submitted to arbitration in London in the usual way and the award of such arbitration was to be binding on both buyer and seller. The buyer having sued the seller in the Madras High Court for enforcement of an award made by an arbitrator in London the seller objected that the award was not binding on him as the arbitrator had proceeded to arbitrate without giving him an opportunity to be heard. Held that as the arbitration clause provided for an arbitration which was to take place in London and in accordance with English law and procedure any objection to the award on the ground of misconduct or irregularity had to be taken by motion to set aside or remit the award under the English Arbitration Act of 1899 within the time limited by O 64 r 14 of the rules of the Supreme Court. No such objection having been taken the award became fully binding on both parties to it as if it had been incorporated in the contract. Any defence going to the root of the award e.g. that the arbitrator had no jurisdiction or that the matter was tainted with fraud—could have been pleaded in the suit but a defence on the ground of irregularity not appearing on the face of the award was excluded by the law by which both parties had agreed to be bound. L. Reference to two arbitrators and an umpire—Subsequent addition, by consent of parties of other arbitrators—Objections raised after the pronouncement of the award to the appointment of additional arbitrators—Estoppel. A reference to arbitration was made under Act No IX of 1899. The reference was to two arbitrators and an umpire. Subsequently the parties agreed to appoint two more arbitrators on either side. The six arbitrators and the umpire proceeded with the arbitration and pronounced a unanimous award. One party then applied for the award to be filed and the other party took objection inter alia to the number of the arbitrators. Held that though either side might have objected in the first instance to the appointment of additional arbitrators it was too late to do so when they had all along acquiesced in the appointment and after the arbitrators had pronounced their award. ABDUL SEANUR v. ss 2 5 8 8 15 and 19—Arbitration—'Submission' by three persons to refer dispute to three arbitrators—One of the parties filing a suit—Court has jurisdiction to stay the suit—Submission not outside the scope of the Act—Award passed under the submission may be filed under the Act—Court may give indirect assistance by staying a suit though it cannot give direct assistance to enforce the arbitration. Under s 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act the Court has jurisdiction to stay a suit where the parties to the suit have by submission agreed to refer the matter in dispute to three arbitrators each party appointing his own arbitrator. A 'submission' providing for a reference to three arbitrators is not outside the scope of the Indian Arbitration Act and an award passed by three arbitrators may be filed and given the status of a decree under s 15 of the Act. Manchester Ship Canal Company v. The words 'a submission to which this Act applies' in s 19 are not limited to submissions which can be enforced under s 8 or s 9 but are intended to provide for the case where a suit is filed in an up country Court in an area to which this Act has not been applied though part of the cause of action has arisen in a Presidency town. That Court would have the power to stay the suit if the submission was one to which the Act applied or in other words if the suit could

The parties to a contract for the sale and purchase of cloth agreed to refer a dispute arising thereout to arbitration under the provisions of the Indian Arbitration Act 1899. A reference was made and an award was pronounced. One of the parties then applied to the District Judge for an order to file the award but on objection taken by the other party the District Judge refused to file it. Held that in the absence of rules framed by the High Court under s 20 of the Indian Arbitration Act the procedure prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure would apply and an appeal against the order of the District Judge would lie under section 104 (1) (f) of the Code. Campbell and Co v. In a case of submission to three named arbitrators all of whom after acting have declined to proceed any further the Court has no jurisdiction to appoint fresh arbitrators in their place under the Indian Arbitration Act. PER SCOTT C J. s 8 (1) (b) of the Indian Arbitration Act does not apply to the case of independent appointments of two arbitrators. In such a case when a vacancy occurs it would ordinarily be filled by the original appointor as contemplated in s 9. s 8 (1) (b) only applies in terms to a single vacancy to be supplied by the parties. s 8 nowhere seems to contemplate the case of two original arbitrators appointed jointly by the parties plus a third of the same class appointed by the two already jointly appointed or by the parties. In short s 8 only applies to certain cases of failure to appoint jointly. Where choosers should but do not concur the Court is enabled to assist them by the selection and appointment of an individual falling in one of the following categories—an (i.e. one) arbitrator an umpire a third arbitrator in the special sense in which that term is used. PER HAYWARD J. It is not in my opinion open to us to extend this special jurisdiction to special contracts not clearly contemplated and expressly mentioned by the Act. In re Smith and Service and Nelson and Sons 2,

Later the Court having fixed the amount of Rs 60 as payable on each account the plaintiff applied to the Court for attachment of the defendant's salary and allowance under the provisions of O XXI r 48 of the Civil Procedure Code 1908. The application was dismissed under s 136 of the Army Act. The plaintiff having appealed it was contended for the defendant that in view of an order made by the Commander in Chief directing that a certain sum be deducted from the defendant's salary for payment to the plaintiff under s 145 (2) of the Army Act (44 and 45 Vict c 58) on the footing that the defendant was a soldier his pay could not be attached under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code 1908. Held upholding the contention that s 145 of the Army Act prevailed over the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code in spite of the repeal of clause (b) from sub s (2) of s 60 by the Repealing and Amending Act of 1914. Held also that the terms of s 4 of the Civil Procedure Code compelled the Court to apply the special rule of procedure provided by s 145 of the Army Act in preference to the general provisions of the Code. DICKWORTH v DICKWORTH (1918) I L R 43 Bom 363

The ship was arrested on the same day and remained under arrest until her release on the 31st January 1912 the action having been dismissed two days earlier on the ground of absence of jurisdiction. The owners of the ship were the appellant company who had their office in Burma. On the 14th June 1911 the appellant company instituted the present suit in the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the Court against the respondent company for the wrongful arrest of the ship. The suit was framed as based on malice or its equivalent but at the hearing the appellant company proceeded on the footing of the suit being one for mere trespass. Held that in the absence of proof of malice or its equivalent a suit for simple trespass will not lie for the arrest of a ship. The Walter D Wallat [1893] P 29 Xenos v Alderley The Evangelismos 17 Moo P C 357 and The Strattoner L P 1 A C 68 referred to. The arrestment of the ship was a judicial act of the Court and an ordinary step in an action in rem. Under the arrest the custody and possession was with the Marshal as an officer of the Court and could not be regarded as a detention by the respondent company. The damage if any suffered from the continuance of the officer's custody and possession was due not to the default of the respondent company but to the law's delay. PERVA CHANDRA KUNDU v EMPEROR (1913) A C 166

Assuming that the High Court in its Admiralty jurisdiction did not acquire jurisdiction over maritime necessities by any previous enactment such jurisdiction would now rest on the Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act 1890 which vests in it the powers described in s 5 of the Admiralty Act 1861. To oust the jurisdiction of this Court under s 5 it is not enough that the owners of the ship should be in fact domiciled in India or Burma this domicile has to be proved to the satisfaction of the Court. Ex parte Michael L P 7 Q B 653 followed. Inasmuch as such proof was not produced before the Court when the order for arrest was made the order for arrest cannot be treated as coram non judice or a nullity. Assuming that an action would lie in the absence of proof of malice or its equivalent the action would be for wrongful seizure under legal process and would be barred by Art 29 of the Limitation Act. It is imperative under O VII r 1 (e) of the Code of Civil Procedure that a plaint should contain the facts constituting the cause of action and when it arose. MADRAS STEAM NAVIGATION CO LD v SHALIMAR WORKS LD (1914) I L R 42 Calc 85 ss 2 152 162 164—Illegal recruits at of cooly—Repatriation at the expense of the employer—Jurisdiction of Magistrate In a case under s 164 of the Assam Labour and Emigration Act for illegal recruitment of coolies the Sub Deputy Magistrate while acquitting the accused made an order that the proprietor of the garden should deposit the expense of repatriation of the coolies in question. Held that the Sub Deputy Magistrate not being appointed by the Local Government within the meaning of s 2 of the Act his order was ultra vires. That the order was also bad on the ground that the Sub Deputy Magistrate did not call upon the employer to show cause against the order there being an acquittal of the accused and nothing to show undue influence or coercion. KING EMPEROR v RUE CHAMAR (1914) 18 C W N 1143

Emigration within the meaning of the Act must be with the idea that the object to be attained or kept in view by the emigrant is arrival in a labour district and labouring there. MANIK RAM AHIR v KING EMPEROR I Pat L J 383 ss 2 (1) and 164—Interpretation clause construction of Cl (a) of sub s (1) of s 2 of the Assam Labour and Emigration Act 1901 does not purport to be a definition of the word emigrate and cannot therefore be construed in too literal a sense as if it were a positive enactment. The clause is merely descriptive. To constitute emigration within the meaning of the Act all that is necessary is (a) that the points of departure and destination should be as required by the Act, i.e. the departure should be from any part of the territories in which the Act for the time being is in force and the destination should be a labour district (b) that the emigrant should be sixteen years of age or upwards and (c) that the emigrant is to labour for hire in a labour district otherwise than as a domestic servant. There is nothing in clause (c) to indicate that in order to constitute emigration within the meaning of s 164 there must be a personal intention present to the mind of the person recruited when he is recruited to go to a labour district to work there for hire. Manik Ram Ahir v King Emperor I P L J 383 not followed Fai Ali v Emperor I L R 37 Calc 27 referred to 2 Pat L J 81

R 57 of the Rules framed by the Chief Commissioner under s 12—R settlement of land previously settled by law—Jurisdiction of Civil Court to examine if Collector had in mind while making settlement the instruction in R 57 as to person to whom preference to be given Under r 57 of the rules framed by the Chief Commissioner under s 12 of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation the previous settlement holder is to be ordinarily given preference in resettling a land previously settled by a lease. In a suit by the previous settlement holder of land for declaration of his right to settlement the Civil Court has jurisdiction to see whether r 57 has been complied with. It is not open to the Civil Court to go into the question of correctness or sufficiency of the reasons and once it appears that the revenue authorities took into their consideration the fact that preference should ordinarily be given to the settlement holder they have a discretion in the matter. The Civil Court has power to see whether the Collector has found any thing for excluding the plaintiff from the settlement and the reasons for such exclusion may appear not only in the Collector's order but in the office report and even in the petition of the parties or in other settlement papers. Jor Gobindo Hajan v Mussir Hazira Bibi 24 C W N 149

ment before he lodged his appeal makes any difference. Where the decree of the Appellate Court was the result of fraud and collusion between the judgment debtor and the original decree holder it is possible that such a plea if made and proved would be a sufficient answer to a suit by the judgment debtor against the assignee of the decree. Money obtained under an invalid process of Court must be treated as money had and received to the use of the person from whom it was realized. A suit for restitution by the judgment debtor was maintainable where he had sought his remedy for restitution by an application made to the Court which executed the decree and it was on the objection of the defendant (assignee of the decree) that he was driven to institute the suit the defendant cannot now be heard to say that the procedure to which he himself successfully objected was the proper procedure. Settappa Goundan v Muthus Goundan 1 L R 31 Mad 268 and Doraiswami Ayyar v Annaswami Ayyar 1 L R 23 Mad 306 followed. Tangi Jogan v Hall 1 L R 33 Mad 203 referred to. Lalla Prasad v Sadiq Hussain 1 L R 21 All 288 dissented from. Covva Datpa v Hanumanthappa (1912) 1 L R 38 Mad 30

in this case was which of two titles to the property in suit was to be preferred that of the appellant under two deeds of sale executed in her favour on 10th July 1907 by the judgment debtor or that of the respondent (decree holder) who purchased the property at an auction sale on 23rd August 1907
in execution proceedings under a decree dated 3rd January 1901 which were instituted by an application for attachment on 16th July 1907. There were two decrees of the High Court at Calcutta.
Original Side against the judgment debtor of 24th August 1896 and 3rd January 1901 and the respondent was transferee of both decrees which were sent to the District Court at Murshidabad for execution. On 13th June 1901 application was made for execution of the decree of 1896 and the proceedings became execution case 8 of 1902 and the execution of the decree of 1901 commenced as above as execution case 16 of 1907. Held by the Judicial Committee (reversing the decision of the High Court) that on the evidence and under the circumstances of the case the appellant (plaintiff) had the better title. The deeds in her favour were not ante dated as alleged and there was no fraudulent transfer to her within the meaning of s 53 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882). The preferring of one creditor to another by the judgment debtor did not make the transfer a fraudulent one. A debtor I L R 40 Cal 849 is contained in s 53 may pay his debts in any order he pleases and may prefer any creditor he chooses. Nor was the private alienation to the appellant void under s 276 of the Civil Procedure Code 1882 as having been made during the continuance of an attachment. The respondent's title rested entirely on the attachment in the execution case 16 of 1907 and that alone was the attachment the continuance of which could avoid the appellant's private alienation but on the facts it did not do so. The respondent could not invoke the attachment in execution case 8 of 1902 to defeat the alienation to the appellant which was made in different execution proceedings. Nor could he with its aid rely on s 295 of the Civil Procedure Code 1882 as entitling him to the benefit of s 276. There were no assets in Court which was essential if s 295 were invoked and the only attachment within the meaning of s 276 was that in execution case 16 of 1907 which he could not employ against the appellant.

of money payable out of jurisdiction by non resident judgment debtor—Court realising money by execution of jurisdiction and going to the Court may be maintained as right on the suit—Court of money paid illegally by Court of its own motion by execution. It is not competent to a Court in execution of a decree for money to attach at the instance of a decree holder a debt payable to the judgment debtor outside the jurisdiction by a person not resident within the jurisdiction of the Court. Where money has been paid to the Court as a result of such attachment the order of the Court directing payment of the money should be cancelled and the parties restored to the position which they occupied before the illegal intervention of the Court. Order passed by Court by usurpation of jurisdiction cannot be allowed to stand on a consideration that a similar order would have been made on the merits by a Court of competent jurisdiction. It is the policy of the law as a question of public order to keep inferior Courts strictly within their proper sphere of jurisdiction. It is imperative that money which has been paid out of Court under an illegal order made without jurisdiction must be brought back into Court. If the money is not returned to Court by the party who took it out the Court should of its own motion proceed to realise it by attachment and sale of his properties and by attachment of his person if necessary. SEENVORA NATH GOSWAMI v. Bill of costs—High Court Original Side Rules Ch XXXVIII r 67—Limitation Summary procedure When an application by an attorney for realisation of costs under the High Court Original Side Rules Chapter XXXVIII r 67 involves an enquiry it should not be dealt with in a summary manner. Art 81 of the Limitation Act (Act IX of 1908) applies to such applications. Nadia Gandhi d Co v Purshottam Sanyal 1 L R 32 Bom 1 Chand Monie v Santo Monie 1 L R 24 Cal 707 Abba Hazi Jhmail v Abba Thara 1 L R 1 Bom 253 referred to. LAHMANI DASSI v DWIVENDRA NATH MURKJEE (1918) 1 L R 46 Cal 249

Held on the unchallenged evidence of the attorney there might be cases where the Court would exercise its discretion under s 59 of Ch XXXVIII of the High Court Rules in ordering payment of costs even if a claim for them was time barred. NARENDRA LAL KHAN v TARUBALA DASI 1 L R 48 Cal 81

Practice—Refusal of attorney to proceed until payment of costs already incurred—Discharge by Attorney—Acceptance of discharge by client—Order for change of attorney—Payment of costs A firm of attorneys refused to proceed further in the conduct of a suit unless their clients paid them as promised a certain sum on account of costs incurred. Held that by so doing the attorneys discharged themselves and the clients were entitled to an order for change of attorney without first paying the costs already incurred to the attorneys on the record. Held further that the mere fact that after the attorneys' refusal the clients instructed them to brief counsel to apply for an adjournment of the suit which instruction the attorneys declined to accept did not amount to a refusal on the client's part to recognise the discharge of the attorneys. Basanta Kumar Mitter v Kusum Kumar Mitter 1 C W N 767 and Atul Chandra Mukerjee v Shree Bhushan Mukerjee 6 C W N 210 followed. MAHESHWAR COAL COMPANY LTD v JATINDRA NATH GUPTA (1912) 1 L R 40 Cal 386

—Petition to set aside an award—Error of law patent on the face of the award—Contract of sale and purchase of cotton—The Bombay Cotton Trade Association Rules 13 and 5—Seller committing breach of contract cannot claim damages against buyer—Arbitrators have no jurisdiction to award damages to defaulting seller—Illegality of the award The respondents agreed to sell to the appellants 200 bales of cotton of specified sample under two contracts which were subject to the Rules and Regulations of the Bombay Cotton Trade Association Ltd. The respondents tendered cotton against the said contracts and on surveys being held at the instance of the appellants arbitrators held that the cotton tendered was inferior in quality and gave allowance of Rs 10 8 0 per candy. The arbitrators' award was confirmed on appeal by the Appeal Committee. Rule 5 of the Association provided that if the final award for inferiority of quality be in excess of Rs 5 per candy the buyer shall have the option either to take the cotton at the allowance fixed by the arbitrators or the Appeal Committee or upon giving notice in writing to the seller and original tenderer to refuse the same in which latter case he may either buy in the market at a reasonable rate on account risk and expence of the seller or invoice it back to the seller at the market rate of the day upon which the final award shall have been made. The appellants accordingly gave the respondents notice that they refused the cotton tendered but did not exercise either of the options mentioned in the rule as the market had considerably fallen. The respondents thereupon claimed Rs 20,000 being the difference between the contract rate and the market rate when the cotton was rejected. The appellants repudiated their liability as the breach was committed by the respondents. The respondents proposed to the appellants that the matter should be referred to the arbitration of the Association under Rule 13. The appellants protested that the matter could not be referred to arbitration and in spite of this protest the Association appointed two arbitrators under the rules to decide the claim preferred by the respondents. The appellants submitted their contentions in writing to the arbitrators who however awarded the respondents claim on the contracts and directed the appellants to pay Rs 20,000 to the respondents. The award was confirmed by the Appeal Board. The appellants thereupon filed a petition to set aside the award contending that the arbitrators had no jurisdiction in the matter as the matter was not referable to arbitration under rule 13 and that accordingly there was an error of law patent on the face of the award. The trial Judge dismissed the application holding that there was no error of law patent on the face of the award and that the error if any was latent which could not vitiate the award. On appeal, Held reversing the decision of the trial Judge (1) that the award of the arbitrators was based upon the erroneous construction of the terms of the contract and Rule 5 of the Rules of the Association (2) that upon

The power of the High Court to grant bail in any case under s 198 of the Criminal Procedure Code is not affected by Act XIV of 1908 but the Court ought in the exercise of its discretion to take into consideration the limitation imposed by s 12 of the latter. The High Court refused bail where it appeared from the record and the Magistrate's explanation that there was cause for further inquiry into the case against the petitioner and that there had been till then no undue delay in the proceedings. Where a police report of a dacoity was submitted to the Sub-Divisional Officer of Diamond Harbour on the 21st April 1909 the date of the dacoity and the case was subsequently withdrawn by the District Magistrate to his own file and on the 20th January 1910 an order was made by the Lieutenant Governor in terms of s 2 of Act XIV of 1908 applying the provisions of Part I to the case—Held that the latter Magistrate had taken cognizance and that the Lieutenant Governor had power to make the order. EMPEROR v SORENDRA MOHAN CHUCKERBUTTY (1910) I L R 37 Cal 412

The extended powers given to the latter by s 498 are not to be used to get rid of the reasonable and proper provision of the law laid down in s 497. The High Court refused bail where a confession by a co-accused implicating himself and the petitioner was materially corroborated as to the latter by other evidence taken at the preliminary enquiry into offences under ss 307 and 337 of the Penal Code ASHRAF ALI v EMPEROR (1914) I L R 42 Cal 25 may use a reasonable degree of force in order to effect the removal of persons bound by the decree and refusing to vacate the same notwithstanding the omission in the writ of words expressly authorizing their removal. Quære Whether the English Common Law or the Civil Procedure Code applies to the writ or warrant in question. In a writ of possession under the former words expressly authorizing forcible removal are not inserted but an order to give possession authorizes such removal if need be and if the Code applies the omission of such words is immaterial. O XXI r 97 of the Civil Procedure Code merely provides an additional or alternative remedy. Where the bailiff proceeded to the premises and on the occupant a wife refusing to vacate pulled or dragged her out of the house and the force used for the purpose caused her when released to fall on the ground whereby she received slight injuries. Held that he was legally justified in the employment of such amount of force and could not be convicted therefor under s 323 of the Penal Code. In such cases it is impossible to calculate or apply with the utmost nicety the degree of force necessary and yet not more than sufficient. Observations as to the practice of bailiffs taking with them as assistants persons unconnected with the Court and as to the time of delivery to them of writs for execution Piecemeal conduct of trials by Magistrates condemned. MASERIE v SANJIVAN DAS (1911) I L R 42 Cal 618

Pledge of cotton by warehouseman to whom it had been entrusted—Pledge to Bank and return of cotton to person who pledged it—No notice by Bank of any other claim—Conversion action for—Contract Act (IX of 1872) s 178—Admissibility of evidence raising defence not pleaded The respondent (plaintiff) purchased certain bales of cotton and entrusted them to the second defendant as a muddadam (or warehouse man) who pledged them to the appellant Bank (first defendant) in whose godowns they remained until they were sold by the second defendant in the course of his business with the Bank with drawn from the godowns and passed out to the second defendant or to his order. In a suit for the cotton the plaintiff claimed delivery of the bales or their value charged the Bank with conversion of the goods and in the alternative if it was held that he was not entitled to such relief he claimed to stand in the shoes of the second defendant and asked that his rights should be ascertained and declared and that the securities deposited by the second defendant with the Bank should be marshalled in his favour. Held (reversing the decision of the High Court and restoring the order of the Trial Judge of the same Court) that the fact that the Bank parted with the cotton deposited with them to or to the order of the person by whom it was deposited without notice of any claim by any other person afforded a complete defence to the action. In this view their Lordships deemed it unnecessary to express an opinion on the construction of a 178 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) on which the Courts below had differed the first Court holding that it protected the Bank and that the pledge of the cotton was valid and the Appellate Court holding to the contrary effect. The defence that the bales had been returned had not been pleaded by the Bank in their written statement but the fact was established during the cross examination of the second defendant as a witness for the plaintiff and proved by the inspection of his books. Objection was taken to the Banks raising the defence and an application to amend the written statement was refused by the first Court. But later on the case a evidence of the return of the cotton was held to be admissible in regard to the alternative claim of the plaintiff. Held that the evidence was rightly admitted having regard to the claim of the plaintiff to marshal securities and that if properly admitted it was admissible for all purposes. BANK OF BOMBAY v. Interest on overdrafts.—Practice of paying interest in a different mode from that agreed on—Compound interest charged without any objection for long time—Implied contra to payment—Evidence Act (I of 187-) s. 92—Refusal to honour cheques.] The appellants carried on business at Bombay as cotton merchants and the respondents were their Bankers. From 1900 the Bank had allowed the appellants firm to overdraw their accounts under an agreement between the parties consisting of a letter in a printed form signed and given by the appellants to the respondents on 1st December annually and providing that interest should be charged at 7 per cent. per annum and to be calculated on the daily balance due in respect of the overdraft, pledging as security the cotton stored by them in the godowns of the Bank. The practice of the Bank as to interest was to strike a balance of each of accounts on the last day of each month.

interest on the amount of the balance in fact compound interest with monthly rests but the appellants though they know it was done never objected until after 1st August 1914. In a suit by the Bank to recover a balance due by the appellants the latter counterclaimed for damages for the dishonouring of two of their cheques. Held that the acquiescence of the appellants for 9 years in the mode of charging interest entitled the respondents to set up an implied agreement on the appellants part to pay it in that way and there was nothing in s. 92 of the Evidence Act to prevent such an agreement being proved. It was found by all the Courts that the respondents were justified under the circumstances at the time in not increasing the appellants' overdraft by honouring the cheques and had rightly refused to do so. HARIDAS RANCHORDAS v. Effect of a blank draft which is not addressed to any specific banker—Elegance of customer leading to payment of forged cheque by banker—Effect of negligence when not the proximate cause of payment. The plaintiffs were a Banking Corporation with their head office at Lahore and branch offices at Amritsar and elsewhere. The defendants were a Banking Corporation having a branch at Bombay. In 1904 the plaintiffs opened a current account with the defendants and sent the defendants a list of the officers of the plaintiffs authorized to sign for the plaintiffs including the name of Madho Ram the manager of the Amritsar office. Madho Ram had acted on occasions previous to this date as the manager of the Lahore office. It was the custom of Madho Ram when leaving the Bank premises for a short time both when acting as manager at Lahore and afterwards when manager at Amritsar to leave with the Accountant blank draft and blank letters of advice ready signed by him for use as occasion occurred. These drafts were not destroyed after his return. On the 2nd of October the defendants cashed a draft presented to them for payment for Rs 10,000 purporting to have been signed by Madho Ram. The defendants had previously received a letter of advice also purporting to have been signed by Madho Ram. The defendants debited the plaintiffs with the payment. The plaintiffs repudiated the draft as a forgery and sued to recover Rs 10,000 from the defendants. The defendants denied that the draft was a forgery. In the alternative they submitted that the forged draft had been paid by them owing to the negligence of the plaintiffs and that the latter were not entitled to recover the amount of the draft from them. Held that it was probable that the draft was one left by Madho Ram when acting as manager of the Lahore office of the plaintiffs but that the plaintiffs were not estopped from contending that the draft was not the draft of the plaintiffs. Held further that it was not incumbent on the plaintiffs to contemplate the perpetration of such a crime as forgery or theft and that the negligent act of Madho Ram was not

Straits See *Pemer's Bankruptcy Ordinance—Debt contracted by a Hindu in Singapore—Adjudication of bankruptcy and discharge by the Singapore Court operating to discharge debt—Non maintainability of a suit in India for the balance of the debt against the bankrupt or his undivided son—Liability of an undivided Hindu son not a joint liability. A Hindu who was domiciled in India but who carried on trade in Singapore was adjudicated a bankrupt by the Supreme Court at Singapore for debts incurred at Singapore and he eventually obtained at Singapore an order of discharge under the Straits Settlements Bankruptcy Ordinance. The plaintiffs who as one of the creditors proved his debt and received two of the dividends due to him was a party to the order of discharge. Under the above Ordinance a discharge operated as an extinguishment of the debt. Held that the extinguishment of the debt by the Bankruptcy Laws of Singapore operated as a discharge of it everywhere and the creditor had no right to sue in India the debtor and his undivided sons for the balance of the debt as if it was still subsisting. Under the Hindu Law a Hindu son is not jointly bound with his father to pay the debts contracted by the father. Hence the said Ordinance under which a discharge of a bankrupt does not discharge a person jointly bound with him does not affect the undivided son. NARAYANAN v. VEERAPPA (1916)

Etquette affecting Council—Cour et of wtine—Retainer acceptance of—Professional ethics The following resolutions of the Bar Council approved— (a) If counsel knows or has reason to believe that he will be an important witness in a case he ought not to accept a retainer thereon (b) If he accepts a retainer not knowing or having reason to believe that he will be such a witness but at the opening or at any subsequent stage before evidence is concluded it becomes apparent that he is a witness on a material question of fact he ought not to continue to appear in the case unless he cannot retire without jeopardising the interest of his client (c) If counsel knows or has reason to believe that his own professional conduct on matters out of which the action arises is likely to be impugned in the case he ought not to accept a retainer (d) If he accepts a retainer not knowing or having reason to believe that his own professional conduct in such matters is likely to be impugned but finds in the course of the case that it is so impugned he ought to adopt the same course of conduct as is mentioned in clause (b) and (e) In either of the cases mentioned in clauses (b) and (d) there is no rule of professional ethics which debar counsel if he continues to act as counsel in the case from going into the witness box and being cross examined

Although the resolutions of the Bar Council are not binding on the Courts the Bar Council is the recognised authority on matters of professional conduct and etiquette affecting counsel and its opinion is of the greatest weight and value. There is nothing necessarily unprofessional in counsel giving evidence in a case in which he appears as such. Selina v Mirza Mohamed Shiro, 9 Bom L R 1044 Cobbett v Hudson I E & B 11 Stones v Byron & Davi & L 393 Deare v Packwood & Doult & L 394 Corta v Peire [1909] A C 549 I C W & A 86 London Lat Bose v Nataraj Dass I L R 27 Calc 498 referred to Curry v Heller I Esp 436 distinguished. Counsel receiving in

In a certain suit counsel accepted a brief containing instructions for him to appear at the trial on behalf of a party and was paid the consultation fee and the fee for attending the trial which were marked thereon. Counsel attended the consultation and subsequently left Calcutta to attend to an urgent professional call having previously returned the brief to the attorney but not the fees. Held that counsel should have returned the whole fee (both for consultation and for attending the trial). It was given to him for the purpose of attending the trial and the consultation was held with a view to his so doing. The practice for seniors to name their juniors or for juniors to nominate their senior is contrary to the traditions of the profession and to its best interests and such a practice ought to be discouraged. It is however quite legitimate for a senior to ask a junior to hold brief for him when he is temporarily unable to attend to a case. In re AN ADVOCATE (1917) I L R 44 Calc 741

Proof of—Circumstantial evidence sufficient— Direct evidence to prove a transaction benami cannot be expected since the whole object of such a transaction is to suppress evidence of the real facts. Benami purchase allegation of—Proof—Subsequent conduct—Surrounding circumstances—Motive—Suspicion only if sufficient to justify finding of benami—Loan given by executor to person who succeeds him as executor after his death—Limitation—Previous statements use of— Subsequent conduct of the parties affords valuable evidence as to whether the person in whose name a conveyance is taken is intended to be the beneficial owner or a mere benamidar. In case of alleged benami purchaser the decision of the Court ought not to be rested on mere suspicion. Reliance in such a case must be largely placed not only upon the surrounding circumstances and the position of the parties and their relation to one another but also upon the motives which could govern their actions and their subsequent conduct. Previous statements, unless used to contradict or discount the evidence of a witness given in the suit cannot be legitimately used and even then the particular matter or point must be placed before the witness as one for explanation in view of its discrepancy with the evidence tendered. The principle that the effect of the appointment of a debtor to the office of the executor is that the debt due from the debtor executor is considered to have been paid to him by himself and that the executor is accountable for the amount of his debt as assets is not applicable where the alleged loan was by a former executor to one who subsequently to his death was appointed executor and the loan was already time barred at the latter date and there was nothing to show that the debt was kept alive up to that date. The principle that the grant of probate operates retrospectively from the date of the death of the testator did not apply here where there was an intermediate executor who created the debt for which the executor who followed him was sought to be made liable as debtor. In a suit for the construction of a will and for the administration of the estate left by the testator the costs in the absence of grounds established in favour of a departure should ordinarily be paid out of the estate. URENDRO NATH NAO v. Procedure Code (Act 1 of 1908) s 66—Object of the section S 66 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1908 lays down that no suit shall be maintained against any person claiming title under a purchase certified by the Court on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff or some one through whom the plaintiff claims The section is clearly aimed at benami purchases at execution sales The clear intention of the section is to stop benami purchases by making it impossible for the real owner to question the benamidar's title Bhishan Dial v. Right of benamidar to sue in his own name—Position of beneficial owner in relation to benamidar—Estoppel—Evidence Act (I of 1872) s 115—Doctrine of feeding the estoppel—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) s 43 The benami system in India under which property is acquired and held and business carried on in names other than those of the real owner has long been a common practice in the country there is nothing inherently wrong in it and it accords within its legitimate scope with the ideas and habits of the people So far therefore as a benami transaction does not contravene the provisions of the law the Courts are bound to give it effect The statement of the rule applicable to such transactions given in Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh 1 L R 37 All 537 1 L R 42 I A 242 followed The benamidar though he has no beneficial interest in the property or business standing in his name represents in fact the real owner and is so far as their relative legal position is concerned a mere trustee for him Held (reversing the decision of the High Court) that an action could be maintained in the name of the benamidar in respect of the property though the beneficial owner is not a party to it the latter being fully affected by the rules of res judicata It was open to him to apply to be joined in the action but whether or not he is made a party a proceeding by or against his representative is in its ultimate result fully binding on him A suit was brought to set aside as invalid not having been made for purposes which made it binding on the reversioners an alienation in 1880 of family property to the predecessors of the defendant by one M in conjunction with her daughter B and her grandson H while M was in possession of the property by virtue of her right of succession to her son S who died in infancy in 1850 H was a predecessor in title of the plaintiffs to whom in 1890 after the death of M the then next reversioners conveyed all their right title and interest in the property now in suit It was contended by the defendants that as H was party to the alienation his successors in title the plaintiffs were estopped from questioning the transaction and the High Court differing from the Trial Judge decided in favour of that contention relying on the general doctrine of equitable estoppel embodied in s 115 of the Evidence Act and also were of opinion that H's purchases from the reversioners accrued to the benefit of H's vendees in consequence of the fact that he had joined with her in conveying the property to the defendants predecessors resting their judgment on the equitable doctrine of feeding the estoppel and on the provisions of s 43 of the Transfer of Property Act Held (reversing those decisions) that s 115 of the Evidence Act did not apply there being absolutely no evidence that the vendees were induced to alter their position in consequence of H's representation contained in the deed of conveyance H was merely a passive instrument in the hands of his elders and his statement could not have materially influenced either the vendors or vendees conduct in the matter The theory that H's subsequent purchase of that property in 1895 from the reversioners should accrue to the benefit of the purchaser from M was based on the assumption that what happened in 1880 created an estoppel against H but that was not the case Moreover H did not acquire the property as a contingent reversioner to M the title on which the plaintiffs brought the suit was based on an independent purchase by H from the rightful heirs GUN NARAYAN v. Purchase—Onus—Benami purchase allegation by decree holder of—Burden of proof—Suspicion and proof difference between Where a decree holder sued for a declaration against a purchaser from his judgment debtor that the purchase was merely a benami conveyance Held that the burden of proof lay on the decree holder and though there were some elements of suspicion in this case the burden had not been discharged In matters of this description it is essential to take care that the decision of the Court rests not upon suspicion but upon legal grounds established by legal testimony Sreemanchunder Dev v. Proof that transfer is benami—Onus In regard to benami transactions Courts of law should not approach them with that scrupulous rigour which in other systems of jurisprudence may demand the existence of the clearest positive evidence that the ex facie owner of a property is a trustee for or holds the same for the interest of another Benami transactions are very familiar in Indian practice and even a slight quantity of evidence to show that it was a sham transaction will suffice for the purpose Still, such a transfer cannot be considered as nothing The paper on which impugnes its apparent character must show something or other to establish that it is a benami or sham transaction The decision of the Court should rest not upon suspicion but upon legal grounds established by legal testimony MANUBAI ALI KHAN v. Evidence Act (I of 182) 116 —No inference against litigant as to contents of documents he considers irrelevant—Opposition of opposing litigant to put them in evidence in proper way A Hindu taluqdar who had two wives and a Muhammadan mistress and had already made substantial provision for the latter purchased a house with his own money in the name of the mistress and registered the deed also in her name He treated the house however as his own during his life time living in it paying for repairs and taxes and receiving rent for it when let as did his senior widow after his death and the mistress had no possession or use of the house In a suit by the senior widow to eject after due notice to quit a tenant to whom she had let the house whose defence was a denial of the plaintiff's title and an assertion that he held under the Muhammadan mistress who claimed title under the deed of sale in her name of which she had obtained possession Held (reversing the decision of the High Court and restoring that of the Subordinate Judge) that on the evidence in and under the circumstances of the case the deed of sale was and had remained throughout a benami transaction The general rule in India in the absence of all other relevant circumstances laid down in Dhurm Das Pandey v Shama Soodri Dubah 3 Moo 1 A 229 held that the contention in these cases is to consider from what source the money comes with which the purchase money is paid followed It is open to a litigant to refrain from producing any documents which he considers irrelevant and if the opposing litigant is dissatisfied it is for him to apply for an affidavit of documents and he can so obtain inspection and production of all that appear to him in such affidavit to be relevant and proper If he fails to do so neither he nor the Court at his suggestion is entitled to draw any inference as to the contents of any such documents It is for the litigant who desires to rely on the contents of documents to put them in evidence in the usual and proper way If he fails to do so no inference in his favour can be drawn as to the contents of them A tenant who has been let into possession cannot deny his landlord a title however defective it may be so long as he has not openly restored possession by surrender to his landlord BIJAS KUNWAR v DEBRAJ PANJIT SINGH (1915)

Under Act IX of 1847 (B C) it must be shown that land has been added to any estate paying revenue directly to Government. Where the Government as owner of the Sunderbans granted a lease of certain lands for a certain term with a covenant for perpetual renewal on a progressive rental and in the lease there was no distinction between rent and revenue and the relation created by it was that of a lessor and lessee and the lessee was not allowed to claim an abatement of rent on the ground of diluvion and in addition to his lease hold interest his other properties moveable and immovable were liable to be sold in the event of the accrual of the arrears of the panna created by the lease. Held—That having regard to the position of the Government as owner of the Sunderbans and to the terms and the conditions of the lease the lessee in the present case was not the holder of an estate paying revenue directly to Government and as such Act IX of 1847 was not applicable and that the relation between the parties was regulated by the contract between them subject to the provisions of Reg. XI of 1825. The entire proceedings confirmed by the Board of Revenue assessing the lands with revenue in the present case under s 6 of Act IX of 1847 were

Some properties of the judgment debtor whose estate was in charge of the Court of Wards was sold in execution of a decree on 15th April 1912. As the Court of Wards would not apply to set aside the sale the judgment debtors themselves applied under s 47 and Order XXI r 90 of the Civil Procedure Code. The application was rejected on 11th January 1913 and the judgment debtors applied on 11th April 1913. The estate was released by the Court of Wards on the 18th June 1914 before the appeal was heard. One of the judgment debtor B had ceased to be disqualified before the sale but as there were unpaid debts of the estate the Court of Wards under s 13A of the Court of Wards Act was authorised to retain possession of the estate. Held that under s 55 of the Court of Wards Act the application to set aside the sale was incompetent. That the release of the estate did not give a fresh start to limitation as the judgment debtor B not being a minor at the time the right to apply accrued was not entitled to claim the benefit of s 4 of the Limitation Act. *UMAKANTA SEN CHOWDHURY v. Institution of suit by manager to save limitation—Subsequent filing of petition of Court of Wards after conclusion of hearing but before judgment—Suit for balances of sale price of garh if suit for rent—Bengal Tenancy Act (I III of 1885) s 193 A manager of an estate under the Court of Wards instituted a suit to have limitation. The suit was for recovery of the balance of the sale price of a garh or forest and was based on a document described as an agreement for settlement of a reserved garh for a certain period at a thicca jammal provided for instalments for payment of rent and giving the defendants among others the right to cut down and sell valuable trees and to grant subleases of such right. The sanction of the Court of Wards was filed after evidence on both sides had been recorded and arguments heard in part. Held that s 55 of Act IX of 1879 which simply lays down that if a manager files a suit to save limitation he shall not proceed with it without the sanction of the Court of Wards is intended for the guidance of managers. It is not a question of jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit has been instituted but it is for the Court to control the action of the manager and there is nothing in the section which prevents the defendants from waiving the stay. To proceed with such a suit is not an assumption of jurisdiction which the trial Court does not possess but is at most an irregularity which does no vitiate the proceedings. That the suit in the present case was a suit for arrears of rent and as such was excepted under s 55 and was maintainable being authorised by the manager. The expression rent has a more extensive meaning than the definition given to it in the Bengal Tenancy Act. JOY CHURN DUTTA v SARAJUBALA DEBI (1919) 23 C W N 876

Cl (b) of s 42 of the Act requires that the landholder should show in the first instance that the land of any particular tenant against whom a claim has been made has been benefited by any scheme or works. The Commissioners report under s 32 of the Act cannot be treated as prima facie evidence in favour of the landholder in a suit to recover drainage charges against tenants. Quære Whether the power of determining any question as to the amount which any tenant is to pay in respect of drainage charges is not intended to be exclusively vested in the Collector and whether a notice under sub s (2) of s 41 would not therefore be a necessary preliminary to the maintainability of a suit to recover such charges from a tenant. SASANTA KUMAR RAY v RAM CHANDRA POY CHAUDHURY (1903) 17 C W N 499

The report of the offence was made by the Outdoor Inspector and it was submitted to the District Magistrate by the Chairman with a recommendation to prosecute the accused. The Inspector appeared before the Magistrate and was examined as the complainant. The document which was submitted by the Chairman to the Magistrate bore an eight anna stamp. It further appeared that the notice against the accused was issued in the authority of the Vice Chairman. There was no written order of delegation of duties or powers by the Chairman to the Vice Chairman which could cover the order made by the Vice Chairman. Held that because the report of the offence made by the Inspector which was submitted by the Chairman to the District Magistrate bore an eight anna stamp it did not follow that it must be regarded as a petition of complaint and that the Chairman was merely in the position of a complainant. That the order or consent of the Commissioners is necessary under s 353 for the institution of a prosecution under the Act is an order or consent by the Chairman as representing the Commissioners which the Chairman can give under s 44. That in the present case the order of the Chairman was an order or consent in writing by the Chairman within the meaning of s 33 and was sufficient. The defendant objected to the assessment and under s 113 of the Bengal Municipal Act (III B C of 1884) applied to the Commissioners to review the amount of assessment. s. 1—register of voters. It is applicable for removal of name of a voter from the register—Rt. 6 and 10—application by the said voter for inclusion of his name in the register—It is 9 District Magistrate's powers. A certain name was entered in the Register of voters prepared under r. 1 of the Bengal Municipal Election Rules. Several applications were made to the Chairman of the Municipality under r. 7 for removal of his name and the said voter too made an application under r. 8 for inclusion of his name in the Register. All these applications were disposed of by the Chairman on the same date. He allowed the applications under r. 7 and directed the name of the said voter to be removed from the register. The said voter thereupon applied to the District Magistrate under r. 10 who restored his name in the register. On appeal it was contended that r. 10 was inapplicable because the name of the said voter was already in the register when he made the application under r. 8 for inclusion of his name therein. Held that the Chairman could not have dealt with the application of the voter in question before he had decided the applications under s. 7 and he had not rejected the application of the said voter as premature. In these circumstances the application might well be regarded as having been presented on the day and after the applications under s. 7 were disposed of although it was on the record prior to before. In that view the Magistrate had power under r. 10 to make an order for the inclusion of the name in the register. Besides r. 29 gives a general power to the Magistrate to decide all disputes arising under the Rules so the Magistrate had power to decide the point under r. 29. SYAM CHAND BASAK v. against moveables first, even when insufficient to satisfy de re S 109 of Act X of 1859 contemplates the case of a single execution creditor and a single judgment debtor it does not specifically refer to the case of a joint and several decree against a number of judgment debtors. Where therefore a joint and several decree has been passed against several judgment debtors and the decree holder elects to proceed against some only of them he is bound to proceed against their person and moveable property before he can apply for execution against their immovable property. But he is not bound before so applying to proceed against the persons and moveable properties of the other judgment debtors. The decree holder must first take out execution against the moveable property of the judgment debtor against whom he wishes to proceed even when the moveable property of the judgment debtor is insufficient to satisfy the decree in full. When once the moveable property of the judgment debtor has been exhausted the decree holder can proceed against his immovable property and he is free to do so in successive applications and it is not obligatory on him to seek out and proceed, upon each of such application, against such moveable properties as may have come into the judgment debtor's possession in the interval. The amra proceeded to the land on the 20th December 1910 and showed the survey to the notice which stated that the survey was to be completed by the 27th June. They forcibly resisted him and were eventually convicted of offences under s 147 of the Penal Code. Held that the accused were not entitled to resist the amra in the absence of the time which appeared upon his warrant had expired. Held also that the law did not require the amra to show any notice to the proprietors. The latter part of s 45 of the Bengal Survey Act 1875 does not require the publication of a proclamation previous to the demarcation of land under that section. The proclamation required by s 6 refers only to a survey carried out under ss 4 and 5 of the Act. JUDGES PAUL & KING EMPEROR 2 Pat L J 16 rent under s 50 sub-s (1) (b) of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) on the ground that a part of the land leased had been washed away. The appellant denied their right to a reduction relying on the terms of the lease and on s 179 which provides that nothing in this Act shall be deemed to prevent a proprietor or a holder of a permanent tenure in a permanently settled area from granting a permanent mukarrari lease on any terms agreed between him and the tenant. The land was granted by the Government in 1880 to the appellant a predecessor at a rent increasing for a period of years after which it was liable to survey and re-assessment and the proprietary right in the grant was to be under conditions generally applicable to owners of estates not permanently settled. Held that the appellant had failed to establish that the land was in a permanently settled area and that consequently the respondents were entitled to a reduction of rent under s 50 sub-s (1) (b). KHETRAMONI DAS v JIBAY KRISHNA KUNDU AND OTHERS (1910) I L R 48 Cal 473

— Occupancy right—On destruction of patta—Jote Raj judicatio—Issue determined also relating to a full party—Civil Procedure Code (Act of 1908) s 11—Bengal Rent Act (X of 1879) s 6. In 1861 a zamindar granted to the appellant a predecessor in title an ijara settlement for 10 years on an annual rent of the patta and kashiyat provided as to part of the land namely char land for the possession of which the zamindar was then suing them as follows: that the zamindar creating a jote of it and fixing Rs 1300 as the yearly rent should include it in the ijara rent that after the expiry of eight years a fair rent should be settled in the zamindar's ny shere that until a fair rent was settled the yearly rent of Rs 1300 should continue. In 1910 occupation of the char land having continued without a fresh rent being settled the zamindar after notice to the appellants sued them for possession. Held that upon the true construction of the ijara the appellants had not a permanent right of occupation of the char land and the zamindar was entitled to possession. Jardine Skinner & Co v Surai Soorliji Deb L R 51 4 181 followed. A jote is a general term and is not necessarily equivalent to a raiyati jote it is little suited to the recognition of a pre-existing right. In 1877 the zamindar had sued for possession of the char land and the tenants had pleaded (i) an occupancy right and (ii) that two suits were premature no attempt having been made to settle a fresh rent. The trial Judge made a decree dismissing the suit on the ground that there was no occupancy right but that the suit was premature. Upon an appeal by the zamindar to the High Court the tenants filed a cross objection to the finding that there was no occupancy right. The High Court affirmed the decree on the ground that the suit was premature and upon the cross objection affirmed the finding that there was no occupancy right. Held that the absence of an occupancy right was not a necessary condition against the appellants since the tenants had succeeded upon the other plea but that it created a paramount duty on the appellants to replace the finding and that they had failed to perform that duty. MIDNAPUR ZAMINDARI COMPANY LTD v JABESH N (1920) 18 45 Cal 400

It is only in cases where the terms of the lease creating the tenancy are ambiguous or in cases where there is no written lease and it is not clear what the original purpose of the tenancy was that the Court should look into the subsequent conduct of the parties and surrounding circumstances to determine the nature of the tenancy Once however the original grant is clearly shown to be a lease an unambiguous in its terms or by other evidence where there is no written lease the mere fact that the tenants subsequently sublet the land would not alter the character of the tenancy There is nothing to prevent the landlord and tenant notwithstanding the existence of an unambiguous lease to alter the original nature of the tenancy by agreement and there may possibly be cases where subsequent conduct may be set up as evidence of such agreement But where no such agreement is set up and it is clearly proved that the land was originally acquired by the tenant for cultivating it himself or by hired servant or by members of his family
the character of the tenancy is not affected by

Where the original area of the lands taken was considerably more than what could be cultivated by the tenant himself or by members of his family or by hired servants or with the aid of partner and the tenant himself was not a member of the cultivating class and where subsequent settlements were also of large areas and the total area held by the tenants exceeded 1300 bighas—Held that the circumstances led to the conclusion that the lands were taken for the purpose of settling tenants on them and that the lease was a tenure. Where a lease stated 'you shall enjoy the jungle lands on bringing the same under cultivation and on causing the same to be held in jote by other persons'—Held that there was nothing in these words to render it improbable that it was intended that the land should be brought under cultivation by establishing tenants thereon. MIDNAPUR ZEMINDARY CO. Tenure holder or raiyat —Reclamation lease if necessarily raiyat lease—Raiyat used loosely for all tenants—Korfa if means under raiyat only—Suit to establish plaintiff's status as raiyat—Under tenant if necessary partly. Casual mention of the tenants as raiyats in judgments in suits in which no issue had been framed or question raised as to the status of the tenants cannot be regarded as the recognition by Courts of the tenants' status as raiyats. The word raiyat is sometimes used in official documents to mean tenants in general. A korfa tenant is not necessarily an under tenant of a raiyat. He is a sub-lessee whether of a talukdar or of a raiyat. The reservation by the chakdars of certain portions of the land for their own cultivation did not militate against the conclusion that they were tenure holders. The definition of tenure holder in s 5 (1) of the Bengal Tenancy Act merely formulates the pre-existing law and the insertion of the words 'bringing it (the land) under cultivation by establishing tenants in it' introduced no change in the law. The section subject to s 19, applies to tenancies created before as well as after the Bengal Tenancy Act. In a suit to establish the status of the plaintiffs as raiyats the under tenants are proper but not necessary parties. In proceedings taken to prepare the Record of Rights for the land covered by the lease the defendant was entered as a tenure holder but on his objection the Assistant Settlement Officer recorded him as a settled raiyat at a fixed rent.

BENGAL TENANCY ACT (VIII OF 1885)— contd

s 5 (1) (f) (b) (5) s 103B—contd

The lease was an ordinary reclamation lease of the land permanently to the lessee at a fixed rent to make it fit for cultivation according to your will and you shall hold the same by cultivating it or having it cultivated and you shall be competent to make such other arrangements or adopt such other convenient steps as you consider necessary for cultivating the same. In a suit brought under the provisions of s 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) for rectification of the entry by recording the defendant as tenure holder—Held on the construction of the Act that in determining the status of a tenant whether he is a tenure holder or a raiyat what has to be considered is (a) the purpose for which the land was acquired and (b) the extent of the tenure or holding. Fixity of rent was no criterion for the determination of that question for a tenure may be held at a fixed rent equally with a raiyat holding. The statutory presumption under s 5 sub s (5) applied to the defendant as holding more than 100 acres and the purpose appeared to be that the land should not be cultivated by the personal agency of the defendant himself. Here the land was leased to a man of means a resident of another place for the purpose of reclaiming the land and rendering it fit for cultivation the agency to be employed for cultivating it being left to his discretion. The Courts were right in looking at the attendant circumstances to judge of the purpose for which the lease was acquired and to determine the status of the defendant. The presumption under s 103 B that an entry in a Record of Rights finally published shall be presumed to be correct until it is proved by evidence to be incorrect was fully rebutted by the circumstances referred to by the majority of the Courts in India in arriving at the conclusion that the defendant was a tenure holder and not a raiyat. DEBENDRA NATH DAS v. —s 5 (1) (2) (5) 19—Lease before the Act—Land partly cultivated by tenant if necessarily raiyat—Reclaiming lease land taken to be cultivated by settling tenants area exceeding 100 bighas—Evidence of conduct if admissible when lease unambiguous—Tenants recorded as raiyat without contest. s 5 (5) of the Bengal Tenancy Act applies to tenancies created before the Act. The Bengal Tenancy Act which was intended to regulate the relations of the various classes of the agricultural community applies and was intended to apply to tenancies in respect of agricultural land whether created before or after the passing of the Act. Where a prajagiri settlement was made of land in area far in excess of what is usually held by a raiyat and the full rent was payable after a period—a term which usually finds place in leases of tenures—Held, that the word prajya means a tenant—and the presumption that the lease was a tenure applied and was not negatived by the fact that by the terms of the lease the lessee undertook to reclaim jungle in the hope of acquiring a jungleburi right in future and was to continue to hold and enjoy the lands from year to year by bringing the land under cultivation by settling tenants. The definition of a tenant as contained

BENGAL TENANCY ACT (VIII OF 1885)— *contd*s. 5 (1) () (5) 19—contd

in the Bengal Tenancy Act (s. 5 sub s. (1)) introduced no new law and in any case the Act applies to a tenancy created before the passing of the Act. Held that the language of the lease being consistent only with the interest granted thereby being a tenure evidence of the subsequent conduct of the parties was inadmissible. The rule is that evidence may be given to explain but not to contradict documents the meaning of which is doubtful and such evidence may consist of proof of the mode in which property has been held and enjoyed thereunder. But where the meaning of the words in the document is unambiguous the subsequent acts of the parties are not admissible to construe it whether the document be ancient or modern. Where in a proceeding under Reg. VII of 1822 held in 1877 it was clear that there was no dispute as to the status of the tenant within a 14 and no official proceedings were incorporated in the rule-dari of settlement the mere fact that the tenant was recorded as a rayat does not preclude the Government from contesting his claim as such especially as at the time of the record the sharp distinction which now exists between rayats and tenure holders was not so well recognized. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. Its effect—Presumption applicable to a tenancy existing before the commencement of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Cl. (5) of s. 5 does not create any new rights or purport to affect any right created before the commencement of the Bengal Tenancy Act. It simply furnishes a mode of proof of the character of tenancies of certain descriptions. If the area held by a tenant exceeds 100 standard bighas and a question arises as to the status of such a tenant the Legislature lays down that the tenancy is to be presumed to be that of a tenure holder but the presumption thus raised is rebuttable. The clause is consequently a provision not of substantive but of adjective law. It lays down a presumption and changes the burden of proof. Whereas in the absence of the presumption the party who affirmed that the tenancy was of particular description would have to give evidence in support of his contention the presumption where it applies relieves the party relying thereon from the obligation to furnish such proof in the first instance. There is no valid reason why the presumption should not be applied to a tenancy which existed before the commencement of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The presumption embodied in s. 5 clause (5) does not incorporate a novel principle into our law but merely codifies what had been a recognized doctrine under the old law. The only difference caused by the adoption of the presumption is s 6 and 7—Permanent tenure held at fixed rent—Enhancement of rent by compromise if makes rent enhanceable under the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) ss 6 and 7. A permanent tenure the origin of which could be traced back to 1818 was held under a lease in which it was stipulated that there shall be no increase or diminution of the rent of Rs 17 pice. In 1880 there being litigation the tenant for the time being entered into a compromise with the zemindar by which he agrees to pay an enhanced rent of Rs 108 13 12 gias held that from the mere fact that the rent had been once enhanced it did not follow that it could be enhanced again. That although by mutual agreement the rent was enhanced from Rs 17 to Rs 108 13 12 the tenure which was identical with that which had been traced to 1818 continued to be subject to the provision against increase in the original lease. PANANUS DAS MOHANTA v THE MIDNAPUR ZEMINDARY CO LD (1912) 18 C W N 725

2—Rent enhancement of—Part of tenure created before Permanent Settlement but separated by assignment and held at proportional rent by assignee—Confirmatory sanad if creates new tenure. When a part of a tenure existing at the date of the Permanent Settlement was assigned subject to confirmation by the landlord a sanad granted by the landlord in favour of the assignee confirming the transfer and allowing the assignee to hold his purchased share on payment of a proportionate share of the original rent did not create a new tenure and the rent payable was not liable to enhancement except in the circumstance specified in clauses (a) and (b) to s 6 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. MOOKERJEE J—It is well settled that the continuity of transferable tenur is not affected by subdivision or by consolidation. Uday Chandra Aarji v Arjunmoy Chandra Ray 1 Ind P 36 Cal 287 s c 13 C W N 410 commented on CHANDRA KANTA CHAKRABARTI v PAM KRISHNA MAHALA WARIH (1916) 20 C W N 1002 reclaimed and included in the lease subject to the same stipulation and in this way the same rate of rent prevailed for over 60 years though the total rent went on increasing with the increase in the area and it appeared that during this time there was one instance of transfer and several of succession. Held that the proper inference to be drawn was that the rate of rent was permanently fixed. Robert Watson & Co v Radha Nath Singh 1 C L J 472 referred to. That the rate being fixed by contract no enhancement could be allowed under s 7 Bengal Tenancy Act. The plaintiff's suit was for ejecting B. Held that the effect of the purchase by the plaintiff which must be determined with reference to s 22 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act was to vest the holding in the purchaser subject to the limitation that the occupancy right ceased to exist and not that the holding itself ceased to exist and A continued to be an under raiyat under the purchaser. It contained no provision as to the heritability or

Pro. dure Code (Act V of 1908) O XXI r 12—1pp of s may be limited to specific grounds—Jurisdiction of Appellate Court—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) s. 50 105 and 105—Enhancement of rent for increase of area within specified boundaries—Increase of area proof of In a suit for enhancement of rent on the ground of any increase in area the landlord must prove the area for which rent has been previously paid as well as the area now held by the tenant and that such area is in excess of the original area. Where the former, a landlord proved that lands were once measured according to a known standard that the rent was assessed on that measurement that the area as well as the rent payable was entered in the khilafat and that the area of the lands measured by the same standard is in excess of the original area. Held that unless it is established that the rent payable was a consolidated rate for lands within specified boundaries irrespective of the precise quantity the landlord was entitled to claim additional rent. Go v. the mere fact that boundary of the land mentioned in the Kabul pat does not exclude the operation of s 52 Bengal Tenancy Act. In settling additional rent for increase of area it is open to the Settlement Officer in consideration of possible errors in the original measurement to allow the enhancement at a somewhat reduced rate. Itahi Narain Sen v. Sri Lax Chandpa Bhatia (1911) 15 C W N 921

*La land a tenant—In encroachment by tenant—Where possession for over twelve years—Tenant is bound to pay additional rent. A tenant is entitled to hold the land of his landlord upon which he has encroached a part of his original holding if more than 12 years before the landlord's suit he denied the landlord a right to any separate rent from him in respect of the land and has treated in a portion of his claim appropriated the entire crop and continued in possession. The landlord's part from s 2 of the Bengal Tenancy Act cannot recover additional rents in respect of such land. Jahan Chandra Mitter v. Tapan Kumar Chakraverty (1913) 17 C W N 235 referred to. Tarun Chandra Ghose v. Ganendra Nath Roy (1912) 16 C W N 235*

*Enhancement of rent—Account of excess area—If the landlord has proved shifting of area. In a suit for enhancement of rent on the ground that the tenants are in possession of land proved by measurement to be in excess of the area for which rent has been previously paid the burden of proving an increase in the area for which rent has been previously paid is on the landlord who may discharge the burden in two ways:—(i) By proving that the tenant is in possession of excess land outside the boundaries of land originally settled with him for instance land obtained by encroachment or alluvial increment. (ii) By proving that at the original settlement of the land the rent was fixed at a rate per bigha or other unit of measurement or at differential rates according to the quality of the land and so forth and that in fact and substance the agreement was that the tenant should pay at that rate or at those rates for all the land of which he was in possession according to its true area and by further proving that the existing rent is less than the rent payable under such agreement. Proof by the landlord of the existence of excess area shifts the burden of proof from the landlord to the tenant. Durkpad Chandra Koley v. Hari Nath Singh (1918) 22 C W N 826*

The expression at the time the measurement upon which the claim is based was made in s 52 (6) of the Bengal Tenancy Act refers to the measurement upon which the area in excess or deficit as the case may be is found out before section 71 (67a) considered. *Nilmam Kari v. Lea granted by rayat who represents himself to be a tenant holder or rayat at fixed rate effect of—Les or and leave colluio between to evade Statute effect of—Estoppel Where a lease purporting to be of a permanent character is granted on the face of the document by a rayat (not being a rayat holding at a fixed rate) to an under rayat the lease is not operative as a permanent lease between the rayat and the under rayat—Registration of such lease being in violation of the statutory prohibition contained in s 85 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act is null and void in law. But as the tenancy of an under rayat may be created without a written lease the grantee in such a case is an under rayat and holds otherwise than under a written lease and his tenancy is liable to be terminated in the manner provided by a 49 (b) of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Till the tenancy has been terminated the grantor cannot treat him as a trespasser. Where the lease purporting to be of a permanent character is granted by a person who on the face of the document professes to be a higher status than that of a rayat (for example that of a tenure holder or a rayat holding at a fixed rate) the grantee when his title as permanent lessee is challenged by his grantor may invoke the aid of the doctrine of estoppel and plead that the grantor cannot be permitted to prove the falsity of the recitals in the document (on the faith of which he took the lease) so as to enable him to derogate from his grant. Where the lessee purporting to be of a permanent character is granted by a person who on the face of the document professes to have a higher status than that of a rayat (for example that of a tenure holder or a rayat holding at a fixed rate) and the grantee invokes the aid of the doctrine by Estoppel in answer to a challenge of his title as permanent lessee by his grantor. Quere Whether such plea may be defeated by the grantor on proof that they had conspired by false recitals to evade the provisions of the statute. *CHANDRAKANTA NATH v. 1 —Sale of part of a holding of an incumbrance An incumbrance must imply a limitation of the rights of the tenant and not a total extinction of them. A sale of a portion of a non transferable occupancy holding is not an incumbrance within the meaning of s 86 sub ss (f) and (7) of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Jogeshwar Maumdar v. Abed Mahomed 3 C II 13 distinguished. TAMIZDRI KHAN v. KHODA NAWAZ KHAN (1903) 14 C W N 229

2 —Non transferable holding transfer of portion of—Collusive surrender by transferer to landlord—Landlord if may eject transferee Where after transferring a portion a rayat surrenders the whole of his holding to the landlord. Held that if the surrender be collusive the tenancy subsists and so long as the tenancy subsists the landlord is not entitled to eject the transferee of a portion of the holding. Quere Whether a purchaser of a portion of a holding is not protected under sub s (6) of s 86 Bengal Tenancy Act. Tamizuddin Khan v. Khoda Nawa Khan 14 C II 13-29 commented on. Gagan Chandra Choudhury v. Jit Chand Saha 17 C II 608 distinguished. ASKAR ALI v. GOVIND MOHAN CHOWDHURY (1913) 18 C W N 601

3 —Non transferable rayat holding—Sale of a portion by rayat—Subsequent surrender of same by him—Landlord if may eject transferee—Fiduciary knowledge Per TEJENDR J.—Irrespective of fraud collusion or knowledge a landlord who accepts from a rayat the surrender of a portion of the holding after the same had been sold by him is not entitled to eject the transferee. The rayat's rights in the portion having been extinguished by the surrender or grant to the landlord the latter took nothing. Sale of a part of a holding may be reasonably argued to be an incumbrance or limitation of the rayat's rights in the whole and should therefore operate to prevent a surrender whether of the whole or the part. Per RICHARDSON J. (contra) On the authorities sale of a part of a rayat's holding is not an incumbrance within the meaning of cl (6) of s 86 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. On the authorities the landlord (apart from fraud) has the right to re-enter if the whole or a part of a non transferable rayat's holding be relinquished or surrendered by the rayat after the same has been sold by him. DASTUR ALI v. PAM KUMAR GORE (1918) 22 C W N 972

4 —Fiduciary knowledge of non transferable rayat's holding if may be ejected by landlord in whose favour rayat surrenders the portion after sale A rayat who has sold a portion of his non transferable occupancy holding has parted with all his rights in the portion in favour of the purchaser and has no interest in it to surrender. Moreover surrender may be looked upon as a transfer or grant and whatever binds the rayat binds the landlord in whose favour he surrenders. The landlord cannot on accepting a surrender of the part of the holding sold by the rayat sue to eject the transferee.

5 ———— A le of portion of non transferable rights. Surrender by rent collector as a condition of title by him of re-leased land. Surrender by him of part of his non transferable holding which prior to such surrender he had sold and took a new settlement of the remainder. He was entitled to eject the purchaser from the portion sold. TAMSUNG v. PROJENPA KISOR LAL CHOWDHURY (1914) 22 C W N 967

6 ———— Surrender by occupancy raiyat of portion of holding sold by him. Landlord in possession. An occupancy raiyat having sold a portion of his holding surrendered his tenancy in respect of the portion sold to his landlord who thereupon sued his vendee for possession. Held that the vendor having transferred a portion of the holding had nothing left in him in that portion to surrender. ANANDA MOHAN POY CHOWDHURY v. GURUDATTA Saha 2 C W N 966 (191) followed. 7 ———— Surrender of portion of occupancy holding sold by raiyat of lands transferred. A surrender by a raiyat of a part of his holding which he has already sold to another is not binding on the transferee. KAROM MOHAN PAKI v. SKEETH KILANUDH 17 C W N 1101 (1919) SKEETH TAMSUNG v. PROJENPA KISOR LAL CHOWDHURY 2 C W N 967 (1913) ANANDA MOHAN POY CHOWDHURY v. GURUDATTA Saha 22 C W N 966 (191) and DASTAR ALI v. PAKI KUMAR 24 C W N 571 (1919) considered. Apart from authority a person who has parted with his interest in property cannot deal with that interest by surrendering it in favour of the landlord and he cannot confer upon the landlord a higher right than he could have passed to any other person by assignment. It would be different in the case of the surrender of the entire holding because then the tenancy would cease to exist and the landlord would be in a position to re-enter on the land. SAILFISH CHANDRA BASU v. UNISH CHANDRA RUDRA (1919) 24 C W N 573

8 ———— Non transferable occupancy holding transferred. Recognition what amounts to a receipt granted by a raiyat whether amount to a receipt of transfer. A raiyat did without leave the landlord took possession of the 15 bighas which he had not parted with and let the other 6 bighas to two other persons. In a suit for possession by the latter against the purchaser the latter admitted that there was no right of transfer in the village but pleaded that (1) certain root receipts and (2) a letter from one panchayat to another stating that the rent would be paid by him (the defendant) amounted to a recognition of the transfer. Held that these documents did not amount to a recognition of the transfer. PER CHAMBER C J.—It is not within the scope of the authority of a panchayat or rent collector to consent on behalf of his master to the transfer of an occupancy holding. This is an important act to be performed only by a person having at least some of the powers of a manager. The case does not lie on the landlord to show that his panchayat had no authority to consent to a transfer. PER KINGSFORD J.—The transfer of 5 bighas out of 8 bighas amounted to a division of a holding and a distribution of the rent which under a 86 of the Bengal Tenancy Act 1885 was not binding upon the landlord because not made with his express consent in writing. A W N WYATT v. SEGOBIN SARU 1 Pat L J 414

9 ———— Occupancy raiyat transferring a portion of the holding if may destroy the transfer by subsequent surrender of the whole or that portion of the holding. Equitable bar to such action—Bengal Tenancy Act if excludes application of equitable doctrines—Donee of power if may derogate from grant by its exercise. An occupancy raiyat who has transferred part of his non transferable holding is not competent to surrender to his landlord the portion so transferred either by surrender of that portion alone or by surrender of the whole inclusive of such portion. This follows from the principle which is a wide application that no one is permitted to defeat or derogate from his own grant a principle the application of which is not excluded by the terms of s 86 of the Bengal Tenancy Act since that Act does not purport to be a complete code even in respect of the law of landlord and tenant and does not profess to incorporate the general principles of the law of contract and the doctrine of equity jurisprudence in so far as they may have to be applied in the determination of disputes between landlord and tenant. 10 ———— Surrender of raiyat's interest by Hindu widow whether effects merger—No letting to new tenant effect of. A Hindu widow has not an unqualified right or power to surrender the entire raiyat's interest in a raiyat's holding to which she succeeds as heir of her husband in the absence of proof of legal necessity or pious purpose. If the power of surrender conferred by s 86 of the Bengal Tenancy Act 1885 is applicable to a Hindu widow who for the time being may be a raiyat of a holding such power of surrender can only operate to effect the interest which she has in the raiyat's holding and no more. A Hindu widow may without necessity and irrespective of the provision of the Bengal Tenancy Act as to the power of surrender transfer or assign her limited interest in a part of the property to which she succeeds as a Hindu widow to a stranger and such assignment or transfer is valid during the continuance of the widow's life. Such a contract is not void but voidable and until avoided or set aside it is binding and operative as against the widow at the instance of such stranger or transferee.

Where suits under s 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act were not heard by the revenue officer but were transferred to a competent Civil Court for trial under the first proviso to that section Held that the mere fact that they were transferred to a Court which in its ordinary jurisdiction might have been passed a decree for possession could not widen the permissible scope of these particular suits. NEELMANI KUMAR v KEDAR NATH GHOSH (1913) 17 C W N 750

It is the duty of the Settlement Officer to enter in the record of rights the rent payable at the time the record of rights is in course of preparation. When therefore it appears to him that the landlord has evicted the tenant from a portion of the land of his tenancy he is correct in showing that no rent is payable by the tenant to the landlord for the lands recorded as in his possession. DWILENBOVATH PAX CHOWDHURY v ARTABUDDI SARDAR (1916) 21 C W N 492

Where in such a suit the plaintiff being absent the Court received the evidence of the defendants expressed an opinion on the merits but ultimately made an order of dismissal for default under r 8 of O IX of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the order was as it could only have been made under r 8 of O IX. Its scope and operation To attract the operation of s 109 of the Bengal Tenancy Act it is essential to establish that the civil suit has for its subject a matter which has already formed the subject of an application under s 100. The introduction of s 109A has not altered the scope of s 100 which must be construed on the same lines as before the introduction of s 109A. It cannot be held under s 100 that a matter has been the subject of an application under s 100 whenever it might if the defendant had so chosen have been raised and decided under s 105 read with s 109A. In view of the provision of s 111B of the Bengal Tenancy Act that a suit shall not be instituted in any Civil Court for the decision of certain cases within three months from the date of the certificate of final publication of the record of rights the proper course for the Court when such a suit is brought within that period is to reject the plaint and r O VII r 11 cl (d) of the Civil Procedure Code. Land let out to tenant claimed as zerai—Tenant's admission in labuhyat if admissible. The new sub s (2) (a) to s 120 which shows that any other evidence that may be produced does not include an agreement or a compromise between the landlord and the tenant. Confirms the view taken in the case of Sher Bahadur v Macken 7 C W N 460 that a statement made in a labuhyat executed after the 2nd March 1883 that the land is zerai was not admissible not on the ground that it was not included in the expression any other evidence that may be produced but for the reason that when the Legislature expressly made evidence of letting before the 2nd March 1883 admissible in proof of the character of the land they must be intended to exclude evidence of letting after the 2nd March 1883. Where therefore the only evidence to prove that land let out for a term of seven years expiring on 4th June 1909 was crut was a recital to the effect in the labuhyat dated the 10th September 1903. The petitioner was a usufructuary mortgagee from a co sharer landlord who was interested in the property to the extent of one fourth the opposite parties being entitled to the remaining three fourths share. The petitioner as usufructuary mortgagee brought a suit for rent against the tenant under s 148A of the Bengal Tenancy Act and joined the proprietors of the three fourths share as also the mortgagor as parties defendants. The co sharers did not enter appearance and the plaintiff obtained a decree for rent and applied for execution under sub s (1) of s 158B of the Bengal Tenancy Act whereupon the co sharers appeared and objected that the execution could not proceed under s 158B. The objection was overruled by the Court of first instance but the lower Appellate Court directed the first Court to hold the rule not under sub s (2) of s 158B of the Bengal Tenancy Act but in accordance with the Code of Civil Procedure. Held that the term "landlord" means a person immediately under whom a tenant holds and the term "tenant" is defined to mean a person who holds land under another person and is or but for a special contract would be liable to pay rent for that land to that person, and a usufructuary mortgagee is consequently a person immediately under whom a tenant holds and is in the position of a landlord and is entitled to sue for rent in his character as such. That the co sharer landlords are the entire body of persons who are entitled to collect rent and a usufructuary mortgagee from one of the proprietors is in the position of a co-sharer landlord within the meaning of s 158B, sub-s (1) cl (1) of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Question of title if to be decided in suit under—Appeal—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) s 153—Suit framed as for determination of title s 149 of the Bengal Tenancy Act provides a very simple and expeditious machinery for the purpose of protecting a tenant against the harassment of litigation consequent on rival claims of title to the reversion of the tenant's interest. Sub s (3) of a 149 of the Bengal Tenancy Act contemplates a suit which culminates not in a decree but in an order of a limited kind an order restraining payment out of the money. It is not necessary to decide the question of title in issuing an injunction under that section. In a suit brought under s 149 sub s (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act in which the plaintiff keeps within the terms of the section and asks only for the relief contemplated by it no question of title can be decided. It would be otherwise if the suit be framed as one for determination of the Plaintiff's title. Semble An appeal would not lie under s 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act against an order under s 149 sub s (3) of the Act. TIRTHABASI SINGH v PUKHA CHANDRA NAG (1912)

Suit for rent by lessee contested by tenant—Denial of lessee's title—Appeal Where the plaintiff claiming to have derived title under a lease from defendant No 3 the landlord sued the tenants on the land for rent but the tenants contested his claim on the ground that the lease given to him by defendant No 3 was invalid though defendant No 3 himself did not appear or oppose plaintiff's claim and the lower Appellate Court sustained the tenants' plea and dismissed the suit. Held by JENKINS C J (agreeing with RAY J COXE J contra) that the decree decided a question relating to title to land or to some interest in land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto within s 153 Bengal Tenancy Act and an appeal lay. Held per COXE and RAY JJ—An ex parte decree for rent obtained by the plaintiff against defendants in a previous suit is res judicata in a subsequent rent suit unless the defendants can establish that the relationship of landlord and tenant established by the decree ceased since the passing of the decree. GUMAR ALI v SAMIRUDIN SIKHRI (1913) 18 C W N 33

2 Commutation order by Revenue Court if bars trial of tenant's title in Civil Court—Jurisdiction of Revenue Courts—Question as to amount annually payable Where the landlord sued to recover rent at an annual rate of Rs 30 the price stated in the tenant's labuliyat of the paddy payable by the tenant as rent and the letter on the strength of a commutation order made under s 40 of the Bengal Tenancy Act alleged that the rent was recoverable at the rate of Rs 13 6 6 a year. Held that the decision of the lower Appellate Court upholding the tenant's plea was a decision on a question of the amount of rent annually payable within s 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Apurba Krishna Roy v Ashutosh Dutt 9 C W N 122 approved. A proceeding under s 40 is founded on the assumption that the tenant whose rent is sought to be commuted is an occupancy raiyat. A dispute as to the status of the tenant cannot be finally decided by the Revenue Court in such a proceeding so as to make such decision conclusive between the parties in the Civil Court. The tenant being found in this case to be an under raiyat. Held that the order under s 40 made by the Revenue Court was without jurisdiction. Lalla Saligram Singh v Mohunt Ramgiri 3 C W N 311 distinguished. KALI KRISHNA BISWAS v PAM CHANDRA BAIDYA (1915) 19 C W N 823

4 ———— Question of title raised but not decided by Munsif exercising final Jurisdiction—Appeal to District Judge if held—District Judge deciding question of title in appeal—second appeal if lies In a suit to recover arrears of rent (the amount in claim being less than Rs 50) the defendant objected that the Plaintiff was his tenant. The Munsif who had final jurisdiction under s 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act—declined to go into the question of title but dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff had failed to prove realisation of rent from the defendant in previous years. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge and also preferred an application for revision under the proviso to s 153. The District Judge overruled the defendant's objection in the appeal that no appeal lay under s 153 and found for the plaintiff on the merits. Held that no appeal lay to the District Judge from the decision of the Munsif as no question of conflicting title was decided by it and the decision of the District Judge to the contrary was erroneous in law. That a second appeal lay against this decision. Kalipada v Shikhar Basini 23 C L J 235 overruled. Held per SANDERSON C J That an appeal lay from the decision of the District Judge which decided a question of conflicting title under s 103 Bengal Tenancy Act. Bhagabati Deui v Nanda Kumar Chuckerbutty 12 C II N 830 explained. Per MOOREHEAD J—Where jurisdiction is usurped by a Court in passing an order against which an appeal would lie if it had been passed with jurisdiction an appeal against the order cannot be defeated on the ground that the order was made without jurisdiction. Bhagabati Deui v Nanda Kumar Chuckerbutty 12 C W N 835 Abdul Hossain v Kashi Shahu 1 L R 27 Cal 367. Meenakshi Vaidya v Subramanyam Sastry L P 141 A 160 and Ranjit Misser v Pamudar Singh 16 C L J 77 discussed. that she is a raiyat of the land and that the defendants are her under raiyats and liable to pay rent to her and the defendants deny that they are under raiyats under the plaintiff but plead that their father had purchased the land from the heir of the admitted previous raiyat of the land and that they had been holding the land as the raiyat of the landlord and both the Courts below found that the plaintiff was in possession for a large number of years and that the defendants failed to prove that they ever held the land as raiyat of the landlord. Held that a second appeal was not barred under s 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act as the Courts below decided a question of title to land between parties having conflicting claims thereto. The appeal was dismissed there being concurrent findings of fact of the Courts below. BADUA v SARLI (1910)

6 ———— Second Appeal whether his tenant claiming mafi as jeth riyat—Meanings of jeth riyat and mafi Where in a rent suit valued at less than Rs 100 the tenant claimed Rs 300 as mafi on the whole rent on the ground that he was a jeth riyat and the District Judge allowed the mafi and the landlord preferred a second appeal. Held that no second appeal lies under s 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act as it does not involve a question of the amount of rent annually payable by the tenant. Jeth raiyats have to perform certain duties under the landlord as for example calling tenants for the collection of rent and such similar duties and for that they are allowed by the landlord by way of wages and instead of payment in cash a riyat from the total rent instead of payment in cash. Mafi is not rent because it is a sum of money payable by the landlord to the tenant whereas rent is money payable by the tenant to the landlord and mafi is a set off against the rent. SARFAT HOSAIN v WAIZUDDIN (1910)

7 ———— Rent decree—Order in execution passed by officer not specially authorised if appealable—Ex parte decree set aside on deposit—Money deposited to be applied in satisfaction of decree ultimately passed in landlord's favour A decree for rent was passed by an officer empowered to exercise final jurisdiction in the matter under s 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Held that the action is no bar to an appeal from an order passed in execution of the decree by an officer not so empowered. Whether an appeal lies or not must be determined with reference to the qualification of the officer who passes the order against which the appeal is preferred. SUBO PARLAPAY v BISHEN PARGASH NARAIN (1911) 15 C W N 760

8 ———— Rent suit—Decree as to amount of mafi due to tenant—Appeal In a suit for the recovery of rent the amount of which was not disputed a question arose as to whether the defendant was entitled to a deduction from the rent by way of mafi. The first Court allowed the defendant's claim to mafi and decreed the suit. On appeal the District Judge held that the defendant was entitled to a deduction for mafi. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court. Held that the mafi was not the rent allowed section and the decree should be executed under s 158B sub (1) cl (e) of the Bengal Tenancy Act. That r 14 of O XXIV of the Civil Procedure Code had no application to the execution proceedings in the present case. That the result of the decision of the District Judge was that the Court of first instance had to proceed to sell the tenure in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure which it had no jurisdiction to do and to refuse to sell the tenure in accordance with s 158B of the Bengal Tenancy Act which it had jurisdiction to do and the circumstance that this result followed from an erroneous interpretation of the scope and requirements of ss 143A and 158B of the Bengal Tenancy Act was clearly no bar to the exercise of the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court. BROHMANAND NATH DEB v HEM CHANDRA MITRA (1914) 18 C W N 1016

— ss 148A 158B and 188—Suit for rent by co-sharer—Frame of suit The essential principles underlying s 148A of the Bengal Tenancy Act 1885 are (1) that the suit should in form be for the whole rent and in substance for the separate share of the rent in arrears (2) that the whole body of landlords are impleaded with the allegation that the plaintiff has not been able to ascertain what if any rents are due to the former. PANDURAN BRONX v IARDIF BRON

— Question of title if to be decided in suit under—Appeal—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) s 153—Suit framed as for determination of title s 149 of the Bengal Tenancy Act provides a very simple and expeditious machinery for the purpose of protecting a tenant against the harassment of litigation consequent on rival claims of title to the reversion of the tenant's interest. Sub s (3) of s 149 of the Bengal Tenancy Act contemplates a suit which culminates not in a decree but in an order of a limited kind and an order restraining payment out of the money. It is not necessary to decide the question of title in issuing an injunction under this section. In a suit brought under s 149 sub s (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act in which the plaintiff keeps within the terms of the section and asks only for the relief contemplated by it no question of title can be decided. It would be otherwise if the suit be framed as one for determination of the Plaintiff's title. Semble. An appeal would not lie under s 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act against an order under s 149 sub s (3) of the Act. TIRTHABAYAN SINGH v PURVA CHANDRA NAG (1912)

The existence of such a protected interest as a right of occupancy is a matter specially within the knowledge of the person claiming it and the onus under s. 106

Evidence Act is on him. The proposition that as soon as there is conflict of evidence the question of onus disappears presupposes not only the existence of evidence on both sides but also consideration of both by the Court so that where the Court of Appeal below dismissed the plaintiff's suit on the ground of his failure to discharge an onus wrongly placed on him and ignoring altogether the evidence adduced by the defendant the High Court on second appeal interfered. HARI MOYI DEBI v MOTI SNEKH (1912) 16 C W N 773

2—Suit to annul incumbrance—Burden of proof—Separated share of tenure dealt with as distinct tenure. When a share in a tenure has been duly and effectually recognised by both landlords and tenants as a separated share and as constituting a distinct tenure the purchaser of such a share at a sale for its arrears acquires the rights of a purchaser of an entire tenure within the meaning of s 159 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The burden is on the purchaser of a tenure at a sale for its arrears to prove that the interest sought to be annulled was an incumbrance within the meaning of cl (a) of s 161 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and if he proves this he starts his case sufficiently and the burden shifts upon the defendant to prove that he has a protected interest within the meaning of s 160. Durga Prasanna Ghose v Kali Dass Dutt 9 C L R 449 Colinda Nath Shaha Chowdhury v Roly I L R 13 Calc 1 Narmada Sundari Devi v Tarip Mollah 9 C L J 490 distinguished. SOMIR JAMA v MOHABHARAT BAKTU (1910)

3—Suit for rent of holding against one of several heirs of the rayat—Decree rent decrees and sale if passes whole tenure—One tenant when representative of the rest—Question of fact. Although under s 43 of the Contract Act a landlord may bring a suit for the whole rent of the holding against one of several rayats, all the tenants of the holding must ordinarily be joined as parties in order that the decree and the sale in execution of it may pass the entire holding and not merely the right title and interest of the judgment debtor. Where however one of a number of tenants is put forward by the rest as their representative he can be regarded as the sole tenant for the purposes of a suit for the arrears of rent within Ch XIV of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Whether one of several tenants can be regarded as a representative of the rest must depend on the circumstances of each case and is largely if not essentially a question of fact. Doolar Chand Sahu v Chabel Chand L R 6 I 47 distinguished. CHAKRABARTY DASGI v TRIGUNA NATH SARKAR (1913)

The words any other right or interest created by the tenant on his holding or in limitation of his own interest therein in s 161 (7) refer to some right which is ex dem genere with the words 'lien subtenancy easement' in the same subsection. Per MULLICK J—A purchaser of a part of non-transferable occupancy holding is entitled to deposit the arrears under s 170 (3) of the Act. The word interest in s 170 is a wider term than incumbrance and includes rights other than those falling within the limits of s 161. A transferee who is liable to be ejected by the auction purchaser after the sale has an interest voidable on the sale. The interest referred to in s 170 is not limited to an interest valid against the landlord. MAHADEO LAL & LANGAT SINGH 2 Pat L J 437

— s 159 to 187—The word incumbrance as used in ss 159 to 161 of the Bengal Tenancy Act includes statutory title and interest acquired by a trespasser by adverse possession of a part of the lands of the defaulting tenant or holding and such incumbrance cannot be annulled in any manner other than what is provided in s 167. At the time when the Bengal Tenancy Act was passed the term incumbrance had a well recognised meaning in connection with provision in statutes in pari materia and since the Bengal Tenancy Act came into operation the word incumbrance has been interpreted to include a statutory title and interest acquired by a trespasser by adverse possession of a part of the lands of the defaulting tenant or holding. ISAAC CHAN, DRA BAKSHI & SAFATILJA SIKDAR 26 C V P 703

2 Date of sale meaning of—Notice if means express notice. The words "date of sale" in s 167 of the Bengal Tenancy Act means the date on which the sale of the holding or tenure has actually taken place and not the date of the confirmation of the sale. If the purchaser has had knowledge or intimation of an encumbrance that would be sufficient notice of it within the meaning of s 167. When the purchaser of an occupancy holding at a rent sale had intimation that persons other than the judgment debtor were cultivating the land. Held that the lower Appellate Court was justified in holding that he had notice of the encumbrance these persons had on the holding. YUSUF GAZI v. ASHRAF MOLLAH (1912) 17 C W N 440 with one A claimed to be darputindars of the mouzahs in suit having objected that A had not been joined as a party the suit was dismissed by the subordinate Judge inter alia on the ground of non joinder of N but on the plaintiff's application to the High Court at the hearing of their appeal from the decision of the Subordinate Judge A was ordered to be made a party defendant to the suit which was remanded to the lower Court. A did not appeal against the decision of the High Court. Held that N was not at any time a necessary party to the suit so far as the other defendants were concerned and they were not prejudiced by the fact that A was added as a defendant when the suit was in appeal and the omission to make an original defendant did not make the suit bad for non joinder as against the other defendants who were the appellants before the Privy Council. That the plaintiff having proved that the notices of annulment of incumbrances were served on the defendants in the manner prescribed for a writ of summons in the Civil Procedure Code the notices were duly served in accordance with Government Rules made in that behalf. *ANANDA GOPAL GOSSAIN v. Sale of an under tenure under—Effect of the sale in case the landlord ceased to be the sole landlord at the date of sale—If the sale passes the under tenure to the purchaser free of incumbrances—Effect of this cessation partial or entire of the interest of the landlord on his right to enforce realization of arrears of rent by sale of the tenancy—Propriety of applying isolated dicta from judicial precedents to cases where the facts are different in essential particulars. Plaintiff obtained in February 1903 a rent decree against an under tenure holder and applied for execution of the decree in accordance with the special procedure prescribed in Chap XIV of the Bengal Tenancy Act. In January 1909 one half share of the plaintiff's interest as superior landlord was sold in execution of a mortgage decree. In February 1909 the defaulting under tenure was sold in execution. The defendants declined to deliver up possession to plaintiff purchaser on the allegation that they were in possession as holders of a subordinate under tenure lawfully created by the defaulter. In 1911 plaintiff brought the present suit to eject the defendants who pleaded that the plaintiff having ceased to be the sole landlord at the date of the sale (February 1909) the sale was not one under the Bengal Tenancy Act but only a sale of the right title and interest of the judgment debtor under the Civil Procedure Code. Held that where the decreeholder continued to be the sole landlord at the date of the application for execution of the decree and in his character as landlord decree holder took the necessary steps for the sale of the under tenure in conformity with statutory provisions the effect of the execution sale was to pass the under tenure to the purchaser even though the decree holder had lost his interest as landlord before the actual sale. The legal effect of the sale depends upon the character of the proceeding in execution duly taken and not upon the relative situation of the parties at the moment of the sale. Held further that to apply isolated dicta from a judgment of the Judicial Committee

5 Annulment of incumbrances—Procedure to be strictly followed—

Service of notice entry in old rent list if a fictitious proof of—Single suit for rent of entire taluk after same was split up—Consequent sale of rent due. The destruction of valuable incumbrances is a very severe measure which the law allows only if a certain procedure is strictly followed and when a party wishes to enforce that severe measure he must show that he has strictly followed the procedure laid down. An entry in the order sheet that notice has been served is not sufficient proof of service of notice. Where it appeared that what was formerly one taluk was split up into several different rent taluks a sale of the entire taluk in execution of a decree obtained in a single suit for rent due upon the entire taluk was not a sale for arrears of rent within the meaning of the Bengal Tenancy Act. *PRAFULLA NATH JACOBE v. 6 Possession—Incumbrance set up in written statement—Suit if maintainable where plaintiff was not aware of incumbrance before suit. Where the purchaser at a rent sale sues in ejectment he came aware of the existence of an incumbrance in favour of the defendant only when the latter set it up in his written statement. The Court granted a decree for possession in plaintiff's favour subject to the reservation that the incumbrance would stand good if not annulled within one year of the plaintiff's knowledge thereof. GOPINATH BISWAS v. BADHA SHYAM PODDAR (1920) 24 C W N 657

7 Suit by purchaser at rent sale for annulment—Incumbrance set up in written statement—Notice annulling incumbrance given thereafter—Suit if maintainable. Where a purchaser at a rent sale did not become aware of the existence of an incumbrance until after the same was set up by the defendants in his written statement and notice of annulment under s. 167 was in consequence given subsequently to the institution of the suit. Held that the suit could not fail because notice of annulment was not given prior to the institution of the suit. Gopinath Biswas v. Padhashyam Poddar 24 C W N 657 (1901) followed. *FAIR v. Annulment of incumbrance—Purchaser of a holding in execution of a mortgage decree if has a subsisting incumbrance at the date of a subsequent rent sale of the holding—S. 161 incumbrance means of. In execution of a mortgage decree D purchased the interest of one of the tenants of a holding the whole of which holding was subsequently purchased by P in execution of a rent decree. Held that after the sale in execution of the mortgage decree the mortgagee who purchased at the sale became the owner of the property and he could not maintain that his mortgage still remained an incumbrance thereon which P was bound to annul under the provisions of s. 16 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

A mokurati tenure was sold for arrears of rent and purchased in the name of the plaintiff who was proved to be the benamidar for one of the judgment debtors. On the Collector refusing to issue notices under s. 167 Bengal Tenancy Act for annulling incumbrances on the application of the plaintiff he sued for a declaration that he had power to annul the incumbrances under s. 167 and that the Collector was bound to issue and cause notices to be served. Held that this was not a case where the Courts should be led to give equitable relief by directing a public servant to exercise his powers under s. 167 Bengal Tenancy Act and the suit was rightly dismissed. That even assuming that the Collector should have issued notice on the requisition of the person in whose name the sale certificate stood the Court had to consider whether it would in equity be right to require him to do the specific act in question seeing that thereby the law prohibiting purchase by the judgment debtor would be defeated. *MOHAMMEN SIDDIQ v. rejecting an application to have the sale set aside was reversed. A copy of the decree of which execution is sought is not necessary for an application for execution. The authority of a pleader in a case does not terminate with the decree but extends to execution proceedings. A fresh vakalatnama is not therefore necessary for the purposes of execution proceedings. Where therefore an application under s 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act to set aside a sale in execution of a decree for rent was rejected by a Munsif who had final jurisdiction in the case under s 153 on the ground that the amount deposited was short. Held that the application was in order as in fact made by the judgment debtor though it was stated in a note appended thereto that the tenants had long before the sale transferred the holding to a stranger and that the money had been furnished by the purchaser. When therefore after the deposit the judgment debtors withdrew the application to set aside the sale with the consent of the decree holder. Held on the application of the purchaser that the Court should have set aside the sale. 6 Orissa—Sale for arrears of rent—Application to set aside sale—Effect of non-payment of the 5 per cent provided by the section On the sale of his holding in execution of a decree for arrears of rent the judgment debtor applied to an officer of the Court for a statement as to the amount which he was bound to deposit in Court under s 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act 1885 in order to have the sale set aside. On ascertaining from the Officer the amount that was due under the decree together with poundage fees and charges, he deposited the total amount so ascertained in Court. He did not however deposit any sum to cover the 5 per cent of the purchase money payable to the auction purchaser under the provisions of s 174 (1). The Court set aside the sale. Held that the order setting aside the sale was without jurisdiction and that the High Court had in its discretion to set aside the order of the District Court refusing to review the order to set aside the sale. To be a valid deposit under s 174 the deposit must be made within 30 days from the date of the sale. Held further that it was not the duty of the Court officer to inform the judgment debtor of the amount to be deposited under s 174 and that in supplying the information sought for by the judgment debtor the Officer was not acting as an officer of the Court. ss 178 (1) (d) 191—Lease to tenure holder containing covenant not to excavate tank—Sub lease to raiyat without covenant—Excavation of tank by raiyat found an improvement—Suit for damages for breach of covenant who liable—Nominal damage—Is it damage Where a lease created in favour of certain tenure holders contained a covenant by the latter not to excavate a tank but a tank was nevertheless excavated by a raiyat who had taken from the tenure holders a sub lease which did not impose any similar restrictions on the raiyat. Held that s 178 sub s (1) cl (d) of the Bengal Tenancy Act being controlled by s 194 the tenure holders might have effectively inserted a restrictive covenant against excavation of tanks in the sub lease granted to the raiyat. That for the breach of the covenant the tenure holders were liable but not the raiyat between whom and the superior landlord there was neither privity of contract nor privity of estate. That although the tank was found to have improved the land and the plaintiff thus suffered no damage in fact he was entitled at least to nominal damage (which is not necessarily small damage) in vindication of his legal right—the breach of the covenant not appearing to have been deliberate in which case vindictive damages might have been. Med a v Comet [1900] 4 C 177.

Legitimate purpose and scope of—Governs relations of landlord and tenant only—Special limitation—Dispossession sufficient to deprive tenant of right of suit In determining what Art 3 of Sch III of the Bengal Tenancy Act means the purpose and scope of the Act which governs the relations of landlord and tenant only must not be left out of sight. It was not the design of the Act to deprive a tenant of the rights that he otherwise possess against a third person between whom and himself there was no relationship of landlord and tenant. It was only intended to deal with such rights as existed between landlord and tenant. To deprive a tenant of his right of suit there must be a plain dispossession within the meaning of Art 3 of the Schedule. KRISHNA CHANDRA BAGDI v SATISH CHANDRA BASERJI (1915) 20 C W N 872

Suit for possession of land by raiyat or under raiyat—Relationship of landlord and tenant—Special rule of limitation when applies The plaintiff's suit was for recovery of possession of a holding governed by the Bengal Tenancy Act which had vested in her on the death of her husband. The plaintiff's aunt who came to live with her after the death of plaintiff's husband brought the defendants on to the land to assist in its cultivation. The defendants by their conduct compelled the plaintiff to leave the holding and take shelter somewhere else. In the plaint there was a suggestion of collusion on the part of the plaintiff's landlord. Held that as between the plaintiff and the defendants there was no relationship of landlord and tenant so that as between them the special law of limitation embodied in Art 3 Sch III of the Bengal Tenancy Act did not apply. There having been in fact no dispossession by the landlord the mere suggestion that the landlord had a hand in the ouster did not bring the suit within Art 3 Sch III of the Act. BASANTA KUMAR v NANDA PAM KAIBARTA DAS (1913) 17 C W N 1149

Will—whether devise by will amounts to an alienation—Alienation not expressly limited to transactions inter vivos—

Alienation meaning of The devise by will of an unrecognized subdivision of a bhag is an alienation contravening the provisions of the Bhagdari Act. JAYAR JIJIBHAI HARIBHAI HANSJI (1915)

*Civil Procedure Code (Act VII of 1859) s 424—Suit against Government—Notice—Mortgage of a narwa—Collector declaring the mortgage invalid—Suit against Collector without notice* The plaintiff filed a suit against the Collector of Kaira to obtain a declaration that an order passed by that officer under s 3 of the Bhagdari and Narwadari Act (Bombay Act V of 1862) declaring some mortgages in plaintiff's favour null and void was inoperative. No notice was given to the defendant as provided for by s 424 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1852. Held that the notice required by s 424 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1852 was necessary to be given for the declaration was a distinct act of the Collector done in the exercise of a statutory power and therefore in his official capacity. Per Curiam—The true test of an action for the purpose of s 424 is whether the wrong complained of as having been done by the public officer sued amount first to a distinct act on his part and secondly whether that act purported to have been done by him in his official capacity. Both these elements must combine to render necessary the giving of notice under s 424 as a condition precedent to suit. CHITAGALAL K. MOREDAS v THE COLLECTOR OF KAIRA (1910)

In 1901 on accounts being taken part of the property was sold to pay part of the mortgage debt while the balance of the debt was secured by a fresh mortgage of the house in suit. The deed of mortgage contained a covenant in the following terms—If there should be any hindrance or obstruction concerning the house or if the house should be taken out of your possession then we and our property and our heirs and representatives are liable for any loss you may suffer and for your moneys advanced. Ever since 1897 the defendants held the house as plaintiffs tenants under yearly rent notes the last of which was passed on 20th June 1903. At the termination of the last rent note that is in July 1909 the defendants refused to surrender possession to the plaintiff. On the 9th November 1910 the plaintiff sued to recover possession of the house or in the alternative Rs 749 as compensation. The defendants contended that both the mortgage and rent notes were void under the Bhagdari Act and that the suit was barred by limitation. The lower Courts upheld these contentions and dismissed the suit. The plaintiff having appealed—Held (i) that the mortgage as well as the rent notes were void under the provisions of Bhagdari Act 1862 (ii) that so far as the contract of mortgage was concerned the consideration failed absolutely and the money advanced by the plaintiff being money received by the defendants for the plaintiff's use the suit to recover it was barred under Article 62 of the Limitation Act (iii) that although the mortgage was void under the Bhagdari Act it was open to the plaintiff to claim under the covenant contained in the mortgage deed (iv) that the plaintiff's possession from February 1897 to July 1909 gave him an absolute title to the limited interest as mortgagee and so justified his claim under the covenant for compensation for disturbances (v) that the claim under the covenant was within time for the breach of the covenant did not occur till 1909 when the defendants refused on demand to surrender possession. JAYENDRA JORADHAI v GORDHAN NARSI (1914)

Lords forming part of road ways in village—Ownership of Government—Bhagdar has no right to tether cattle on such lands The plaintiff a bhagdar owned a house in a village which was bhagdari. In front of his house lay a piece of open ground which was part of a way or lane leading directly from the main public road to the collection of houses situate round about the plaintiff's house. It was open to the villagers and used by them freely upon all occasions. Draver of the bill an alien—Bill drawn against goods consigned from an enemy port by an enemy steamer—Shipping documents signed by an alien—Acceptance of the bill by a British subject—Acceptance unqualified and unqualified—War breaking out after acceptance—The enemy steamer arriving at Bombay before the outbreak of war but subsequently harbouring in a neutral port to evade capture without discharging cargo—The Royal Proclamation dated 5th August 1914 warning persons not to obtain goods from the German Empire—Bill dishonoured by non payment on due date—Shipping documents tendered by the holder of the bill—Proclamation dated 19th December 1914 authorising British subjects to obtain goods from an enemy steamer in neutral port—The Negotiable Instruments Act (XXI of 1881) ss 32 and 43—Property in the goods vests in the acceptor though the bill of lading remains with the holder of the bill of exchange to secure the price—Consideration does not fail if the acceptor is put in a position to take delivery of the goods. The plaintiffs were a British bank carrying on business in London Bombay and elsewhere. The defendants were a firm of merchants British subject carrying on business in Bombay. On the 24th June 1914 one G. A. a German residing in Hamburg drew a bill of exchange upon the defendants in favour of the plaintiffs for £6,000 payable at thirty days sight to the order of the plaintiffs—value received—which the drawee was to place to the account of the drawer as advised. The bill purported to be drawn upon the defendants against 50 bales of goods per SS Lichtenfels a German steamer. The bill was presented to the defendants for acceptance with the shipping documents relating to the bales of goods mentioned in the bill and was accepted by them on 30th July 1914 payable at the office of the plaintiffs in Bombay. The SS Lichtenfels reached Bombay just before the outbreak of war between Great Britain and Germany (i.e. 4th August 1914) and in order to evade capture left Bombay and took shelter in the neutral port of Maracaibo. The bill was presented for payment on the due date with the shipping documents for the 50 bales attached but was dishonoured by non payment. On the 1st December 1914 a Proclamation was issued by which all British subjects residing or carrying on business in British India were authorized to make payments for the purpose of obtaining their cargoes in neutral ports to the agents of shipowners resident in an enemy. The plaintiffs filed this suit on the 30th September 1913 to recover the amount due on the bill contending that the defendant's acceptance was unqualified and absolute and that as the shipping documents for the goods mentioned in the bill of exchange were tendered at the time of presentation for payment they were entitled to payment according to the terms of the bill and the acceptance. The defendants contended that the acceptance was qualified subject to the condition that the defendants should be put in a position to get the delivery of the goods referred to in the bill of lading and that owing to the outbreak of war and the King's Proclamation published in Bombay on the 7th August 1914 warning persons not to obtain goods from any person resident in the German Empire the shipping documents ceased to be any consideration for the acceptance. Held (1) that in either view of the acceptance the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed inasmuch as if the acceptance was unqualified the defendants were bound to pay on due date and if the acceptance was qualified they were bound to pay at or after maturity when the money was demanded after the Proclamation of December 1914 where under consignees were permitted to take delivery of goods from enemy ships in neutral ports and (ii) the consideration for the acceptance did not fail as the last mentioned Proclamation permitted performance before it was too late of the condition alleged. *Morrisshaw & Co. v. defendants shipped certain goods to London firms in enemy vessels destined ultimately to enemy ports. These goods were covered by bills of exchange drawn in Calcutta on the said firms with their addressee given in the bills as London.

They were then discounted with and endorsed to the plaintiffs in Calcutta. The bills of exchange reached London one on the day war was declared and the others on a date subsequent thereto.
The endorsees duly presented the bills for acceptance. They were returned dishonoured by the drawees after 12 days in respect of the first bill and after 3 days in respect of the rest of the bills.
Held that the bills were foreign instruments and were made payable in a different place from that in which they were made and endorsed. S 135 of the Negotiable Instruments Act therefore applied and the Law of England determined what constituted dishonour and what notice of dishonour was sufficient. Held also that any further slip in the performance of the contract was rendered impossible by the outbreak of war and the acceptance of the bills by the drawees would have amounted to a trading in goods destined for enemy ports and would come within the meaning of the (King's) Proclamation and therefore the drawees were under no obligation to the drawers to accept the bills. Held also that the further performance of the contract having become impossible and there being no obligation on the drawees to accept the plaintiffs were not bound to give notice of dishonour. Held

BILL OF EXCHANGE—contd

also that the giving of notice of dishonour was an important part of the treatment referred to in s 42 and in the circumstances of the case where such notice of dishonour became unneces-

the drawees more than the customary time could not bar the plaintiffs from recovering on the bills. The section assumed that the bill was capable of being accepted or dishonoured by the drawer and did not cover the bills in this case.

Birt tenure in Oudh—Under proprietary right—Bankats birt—Dahyak, Settlement decree In 1802 the owner of a village in Oudh granted it by way of birt to get it cultivated the future rent to be at the rate for hinkats prevalent in the taluqa and subject to the prevalent rebate (dasaundh or dahyak). In 1871 a Settlement Court decreed upholding the birt holder's possession and occupation as an under proprietor under Circular No 2 of 1861 upon the condition that the taluqdar could alter the rent in accordance with the practice before the annexation the birt holder being entitled to deduct a dahyak of 10 per cent and to be paid it if he refused a patta. It was alleged that the birt holders were out of possession between 1871 and 1879 but regained possession in 1880. They had since 1900 been paying a rent of Rs 500 less 10 per cent dahyak. Held that the birt holder was an under proprietor the alleged interruption of possession not affecting the rights under the deed of 1802 and the decree of 1871. Further that the taluqdar could not capriciously enhance the rent which must be at the rate prevalent in the taluqa and that in case of dispute it was wholly within the cognizance of the Revenue Court to determine whether the proposed rent was so. Birt tenure in Oudh—Under proprietary right—Bankati birt—Dahyak—Settlement decree. In 1802 the owner of a village in Oudh granted it by way of birt to get it cultivated the future rent to be at the rate for bankati prevalent in the taluqa and subject to the prevalent rebate (dassundh or dahyak). In 1871 a Settlement Court decreed upholding the birt holder a possession and occupation as an under proprietor under Circular No 2 of 1861 upon the condition that the taluqdar could alter the rent in accordance with the practice before the annorment the birt holder being entitled to deduct a dahyak of 10 per cent and to be paid it if he refused a patta. It was alleged that the birt holders were out of possession between 1871 and 1879 but regained possession in 1880. They had since 1900 been paying a rent of Rs 500 less 10 per cent dahyak. Held that the birt holder was an under proprietor the alleged interruption of possession not affecting the rights under the deed of 1802 and the decree of 1871. Further that the taluqdar could not capriciously enhance the rent which must be at the rate prevalent in the taluqa and that in case of dispute it was wholly within the cognizance of the Revenue Court to determine whether the proposed rent was so. The distinction between bankati birt and bishunpirt birt discussed. Parmeshwar Dutt v Mohammed Abul Hasan Khan 14 Oudh cases 335 distinguished. RAJA MUHAMMAD ABUL HASAN KHAN v LACHMI NARAIN from time to time approve. In order to satisfy the requirements of s 21 (1) (c) of the Indian Universities Act and pursuant to the Regulation of the Senate the Wilson College erected three buildings known as hostels for the use of its students numbering two hundred in all. In addition to the students a European Professor and an Indian Superintendent resided in the first and second hostels and a European Superintendent and an Assistant Superintendent resided in the third hostels all of them being on the staff of the College. Resident students of the College paid an additional fee of Rs 23 for each of the two terms in a year over and above the fees they paid along with non resident students. Pursuant to s 140 (c) of the City of Bombay Municipal Act 1883 the Municipal Commissioner caused the three hostels to be assessed for payment of general tax leviable on all buildings in the city. The defendant contended that the hostels must be exempted from the general tax as they were buildings exclusively occupied for charitable purposes within the meaning of s 143 (1) (a) of the City of Bombay Municipal Act and that the additional fee of Rs 23 paid by the resident students was not rent within the meaning of s 143 (2) (d) of that Act. The points of difference between the parties were stated in the form of a case for the opinion of the Court under s 90 and O XXVI of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held (i) that inasmuch as the hostels were erected and maintained by the College as part of the general educational scheme of the country the object of the hostel being the advancement of learning the portions occupied by the resident students were exempt from taxation as they were exclusively occupied for charitable purposes within the meaning of s 143 (1) (a) of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (ii) that the extra sum paid by resident students was not paid as rent within the meaning of s 143 (2) (d) of the City of Bombay Municipal Act but was an additional fee paid by them for the advantages derived by them and more attention paid to them for looking after their social moral and physical welfare than to the non resident students of the College who paid a less fee (iii) that the portions occupied by one Superintendent in the first and second hostels and one in the third hostel were exempt from taxation as residence for such members in the hostels was compulsory for the proper discharge of their duties of supervision and physical welfare of students as required by s 21 (c) of the Indian Universities Act (iv) that the portions occupied by a Professor and Assistant Superintendent were ordinarily liable for taxation under s 140 (c) of the City of Bombay Municipal Act unless it was shown that the duties of the Professor and Assistant Superintendents were such as to make their presence on the premises absolutely necessary. *The University of Bombay v. Building—Directly over or directly under—Construction The words directly over or directly under in s 251 A clause (a) of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bom Act III of 1888) should be understood in the restricted sense of immediately over or immediately under so that in effect under this section a water closet may be built so as to be vertically over or under any part of a building provided that a bath room intervenes. Where it is not suggested that a word bears any technical sense in the context in which it occurs the construction must proceed upon the general rule that statutes are presumed to use words in their popular sense. *Commissioner of Excise v. The Municipal Corporation sued to obtain a declaration that the Railway Company could not lawfully maintain their lines of railway across the street in question without either obtaining permission granted by the Corporation and confirmed by the Government under s 293 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act or acquiring the land required for the level crossing under the Land Acquisition Act 1894. Held that the statutory authority under s 7 of the Indian Railways Act was established and that the application of s 293 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act was excluded by the words notwithstanding anything in any other enactment for the time being in force in the first mentioned section. Held further that where a railway company wished to lay a line of railway upon and across a street it was neither necessary nor appropriate to proceed under the Land Acquisition Act for the acquisition of the land because if the Government under s 7 of the Act were to direct the Collector to take order for the acquisition of the land he would make his award and take possession and the land would then vest absolutely in Government for the railway company free from incumbrances and would then cease to be a portion of the street and the railway company would be unable to exercise the power given to it of constructing the rail

By s 297 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act the Municipal Commissioner may prescribe a regular line on each side of a public street and if the line is so prescribed that any land not vesting in the Corporation falls within it the Commissioner may by s 299 take possession of it on behalf of the Corporation the former owner receiving compensation under s 301. Ss 297 to 301 are headed in the Act Preservation of regular line in public streets. By s 298 the Commissioner has power to acquire any land required for widening, extending or otherwise improving any public street subject to the payment of compensation under the Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894). In 1909 the Commissioner prescribed a line on one side of a public street so that land belonging to the appellants fell within it and having served them with notice took possession. The Commissioner wished to acquire the land for the purpose of widening the street in connection with a contemplated bridge carrying the street over certain level crossings. The appellants contended that the procedure under ss 297 299 and 301 was inapplicable and the proceedings ultra vires and that the land could only be acquired subject to payment of compensation under the Land Acquisition Act 1894. Held that the powers given by ss 297 and 299 of the Act could be exercised although the motive of the Commissioner who acted in good faith and in the discharge of his duties, was not to preserve the regular line of the street and that consequently the compensation payable to the appellants was to be calculated according to s 301 of the Act and not under the Land Acquisition Act 1894. NAEMA v BOMBAY MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER (1915) and entered upon the land of the plaintiff which lay within the said fresh line. Subsequently having been informed of the previous line the Commissioner obtained authority to prescribe a fresh line as previously irregularly prescribed and subsequently again entered on the part of the plaintiff's land within that line. Both the said line prescribed in 1903 and the subsequent line prescribed in 1909 were prescribed for the purpose of widening the said street for the purpose of enabling an overbridge to be built on it. The plaintiff contended that as the object of the Commissioner in prescribing the line of the street in both cases was to widen the street his action was illegal and that the lines prescribed were not made the regular lines of the street. Further that in any event the Commissioner should be ordered to take up the plaintiff's land and pay for it up to the line prescribed in 1903 the only legal line of the street at the date when the Commissioner first entered the plaintiff's land. Held that subject to the provisions of s 297 of the Municipal Act the Commissioner might prescribe a line of a street whether in substitution for a previous line or not and that his action would not be invalid merely because it had for its object the widening of the street. Held also that the headings of clauses are not to be relied on. Held further that Essa Jacob v Municipal Commissioner of Bombay I L R 25 Bom 107 is no longer an authority since the amendment of the Act in 1906. MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER FOR THE CITY OF BOMBAY v MICHENER PESTOVJI (1911)

culated at the same rate for 2½ 16 square yards for his ejection and for possession of the land over which he was required to set the line of the street forward, both Courts in India treating the matter as a case of set off decreed the appellant a suit but without interest or costs and the Trustee's suit against the appellant for Rs 5032 and for his ejection if he did not pay that sum. Held that on the construction of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (III of 1888) and of ss 41-42 of the Improvement Trust Act (IV of 1893) there was nothing to indicate that the building line of the street must once indicated remain by reason of that original indication and not be open to change or putting forward should experience suggest this to be for the best. s 297 of the Act of 1888 and the practice of the Municipality under it confuted there being any such suggestion and it was clear the Trustees were not prohibited from prescribing a fresh line. Nor was there anything to indicate that the street taken over to be formed is anything different in dimension from the street to be handed back when formed. s 41 of Act IV of 1893 (as to taking over a street to be formed) and s 45 (2) (as to handing the formed street back) are correlative to each other, and what is to be re-vest in the Municipality is just that which when formed as a street had been the subject of that interim divestiture to the Trustees as the street forming authority. The strip of the old street remained under the jurisdiction and was in all respects as before the property of the Municipality and when the appellant was required to put forward his building over it s 301 of the Act of 1888 expressly applied and the order of the Commissioner to set forward the building was a sufficient conveyance to the owner of the said land. The site between the old street and the new one of the appellant's properties became his in ownership and was still his. The title of the Trustees to it failed and with it failed their suit whether for declaration or ejection. Held also that while the Act III of 1888 makes provision for the compulsory expropriation of an owner it makes no provision whatever for payment by the owner in respect of what may be called compulsory impropriation. The right or duty of set off failed it was not justified by law. Held further that the appellant was entitled to interest on his decree and also to his costs. Unless there be something in the contract of parties which necessarily implies the opposite the date when one party enters into possession of the property of another is the proper date from which interest on the unpaid price should run. On the one hand the new owner has possession use and fruits and on the other hand the former owner parting with those has interest on the price. Municipal Commissioner—Notice disobedience of—Private streets—Leveling and draining of—Liability of owners of several premises—Owners of building sites—Buildings constructed by lessees on the sites—Premises what are—Construction of statutes. The owner of a large plot of land subdivided it into a number of building sites which he arranged on either side of a private street which was projected to run through the plot. Those building sites were let to lessees (of whom the applicant was one) for a period of thirty years at the end of the period the lessee was to remove the building put up by him unless the lessor purchased it. Under the terms of the lease the lessee was to contribute ratably to the expenses of making repairing etc all ways roads etc. The applicant was one of those lessees. He built a house upon one of those sites and let it to tenants from whom he received rent. The Municipal Commissioner of Bombay issued a notice to the applicant under a 305 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) calling upon him to level, metal drain and light the public street in front of his building. The applicant failed to comply with the notice for which he was prosecuted under a 471 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act 1888. He contended that he was not the owner of the premises within the meaning of a 305 of the Act. The Magistrate overruled the contention and convicted him. Held that the mere owner of the land who had let it out under a building scheme for building purposes was not the owner of the property because the property contemplated by s 305 necessarily embraced buildings whether erected or to be erected and the Legislature regarded him as the owner of the premises who had the right to receive rent in respect of that property. The word premises occurring in a 305 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) must be presumed to have been used by the Legislature in its legal sense as referring to the particular kind of property which forms the subject matter of the group of immediately preceding sections of the Act. That group (ss 302-307) has reference to streets made for the use of buildings or building sites. The dominant idea running through the ss 302-304 is that of buildings either erected or projected. That is the kind of property dealt with in what has gone before a 305 and therefore that is its prima facie. It is a primary rule of interpretation that a word having a popular meaning ought to be construed in that sense. One exception to that rule is that unless there is something to the contrary in the context words of known legal import are to be considered as having been used in their technical sense where the law has attached that sense to them. EMERSON v RAMCHANDRA BHASKAR MANTRI (1910).

carrying sullage from houses on either side of the lanes. Under the provisions of a 30a of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) the Municipality issued a notice calling upon owners of the houses to level metal drain and light the lanes in question. The owners having failed to comply with the notice the Municipality prosecuted them contending that the notice was properly issued since the sewer laid in the lanes did not make them public streets and the street did not include houses on either side of the streets. Held that the lanes in question having been severed since 1833 they were public streets and s 30a of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) had no application. Held further that the term street as used in the Act included houses on either side of the street. EMPEROR v. He failed to comply with the requisition and a prosecution was instituted against him. The Magistrate viewed the premises and having so viewed them but without hearing any evidence acquitted the accused as the premises did not appear to him to be in a filthy condition. Held that the premises having appeared to the Commissioner to be in a filthy condition the notice was validly issued under s 377 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act 1888 and that there having been a non-compliance with the notice the offence was complete. Held further that the Magistrate was wrong in acquitting the accused on the sole ground that the premises did not appear to him to be in such a condition as to justify the issue of a notice under s 377 S 3 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act 1888 enacts that the only condition precedent to the valid issue of a requisition is that it shall appear not to the Magistrate but to the Commissioner that the premises are in the condition specified in the section. EMPEROR v. The suit was heard by that Judge for some days and then the defendant filed an application in the Court of the District Judge for transfer of the suit to another Court. The District Judge transferred the application to the Assistant Judge for disposal. The Assistant Judge heard the application and ordered that the suit be transferred to the District Court for trial. The plaintiff having objected that the order of the Assistant Judge was without jurisdiction. Held setting aside the order that under the provisions of the Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869) Part V the limit of the Assistant Judge's jurisdiction for the purpose of hearing suits is Rs 10 000 and that in case of suits and applications when the value of the subject matter does not exceed Rs 5 000 an appeal in appealable cases lies to the District Judge. The Assistant Judge is therefore not a Judge of co-ordinate jurisdiction to the District Judge. He is therefore not a Judge of the District Court and the order complained of was not made by the District Court which alone had jurisdiction. S 24 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) empowers the District Court to withdraw any suit and try and dispose of it. The suit with drawn being for a sum exceeding the jurisdiction of the Assistant Judge he could not try and dispose of it. ants Nos 3 to 12 contended that s 42 was not applicable inasmuch as the embezzlements by the paid servants of the Municipality would not amount to misapplication of the Municipal funds within the meaning of the section. The lower Court overruled the contention and decreed the suit. The defendants Nos 3 to 12 having appealed to the High Court. Held confirming the decree that the operation of s 42 of the Bombay District Municipalities Act (Bombay Act III of 1901) was not restricted to misapplications made by any Councillor or Councillors but it applies to any misapplication by whomsoever made. Per BATHCHELOR J — The context in which the word misapplication occurs indicates that the word is employed rather in the broad and popular sense than in the narrow or etymological sense. There is no requirement that the misapplication must be by the Councillors themselves or by any specified persons whatsoever and the use of the passive word happened seems to suggest also that the scope of the section extends to a misappropriation of the Municipal funds by a Municipal employee provided only that the misapplication was facilitated by the Councillor or his neglect of their duties. Per HAYWARD J — Any diversion of funds however caused from their proper purposes would be covered by the wide term misapplication and it is in that wide sense that the term has been introduced into s 42 of the Act. It has purposely not been restricted to a misapplication to which a Councillor shall have been a party but has been applied expressly to a misapplication which shall have happened through or been facilitated by gross neglect of duty by a Councillor that is to say which has happened by any other agency through the gross neglect of a Councillor. MUNICIPAL COUNCILLORS : SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA (1915) I L R 40 Bom 166

The southern boundary of the tank was an embankment. In reclaiming the bed of the tank the Municipality utilized a part of the embankment and made provision to prevent the flow of water. In the month of June 1907 there was a sudden and extraordinary heavy rainfall at Hubli which practically overflooded the whole Municipal area and a quantity of goods in the plaintiff's Ginning Factory which was to the south of the tank was washed away or damaged. Thereupon the plaintiffs brought a suit against the Municipality to recover damages alleging negligence on the part of the defendants in carrying out the reclamation work. The defendants denied the plaintiffs' allegation and answered that the damage to the plaintiffs' goods was the result of the abnormal heavy rain in June 1907 and that no precautions on the part of the defendants could have averted the damage. Held that the suit was not maintainable. The plaintiff disregarded the condition and built upon the specified space. Thereupon the Municipality having thereat the demolition of the house the plaintiff brought the present suit for an injunction restraining the Municipality from doing so. Held that under s 96 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (Bom Act III of 1901) the Municipality was empowered to prescribe the location of the building in relation to any street existing or projected as they think proper whereas in the present case they had prescribed the location of the building in relation not to the existing street but to a street which might come into existence in the future. The object of the Municipality in imposing the condition was not for the purposes of sanitation or ventilation but to get a set back which could not be obtained under s 92 of the Act. If the condition of the permit were complied with the plaintiff would have to give up or keep vacant or unproductive a considerable portion of her land and the Municipality would have the opportunity of paying compensation for it at any time they might feel disposed to do so which would be contrary to the provisions of s 92 which contemplates that when a set back is determined upon compensation should be paid to the owner and that the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction as prayed. Queen Empress v Veerammal I L R 16 Mad 230 referred to. BAI FATMA v RANDEE MUNICIPALITY (1914)

On the 3rd July 1903 the plaintiff applied to the Ahmedabad Municipality for permission to reconstruct his house building balconies on its two sides. On the 20th July 1903 the Municipality issued a permission note giving the plaintiff permission to rebuild his house and informing him that as regards the building of the balconies his application was placed before the Managing Committee and that until the permission was granted he must not do any work in that respect. The plaintiff not having heard from the Municipality he built the balconies. On the 4th August 1904 the Municipality called upon the plaintiff to remove the balconies and his application to the Municipality to reconsider their decision having failed he brought a suit against the Municipality for an injunction restraining them from removing his balconies. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed. Permission to build a privy granted under sub s (2)—Subsequent order by the Municipality revoking the permission—Legality of the order The plaintiff applied to the Municipality on December 1 1913 for permission to build a privy on his own land. The permission was granted by the Municipality on 22nd December under sub s (2) of s 96 of District Municipalities Act 1901. On January 8 1914 the Municipality acting on the resolution of the Managing Committee gave notice and passed an order to the plaintiff not to build the privy until further orders. The plaintiff having sued for the cancellation of the order of January 8 1914 as ultra vires. Held that the order was not legal in the absence of any power to cancel the permission once granted under sub s (2) of s 96 of the District Municipalities Act 1901. Emperor v Kareem Ranjan 19 Bom L R 65 followed. ITHAL DHOONDEV v THE ALIBAG MUNICIPALITY (1918) I L R 42 Bom 629

Building an Olla in front of a house—Permission of the Municipality not obtained—Olla an additional structure—Permission necessary The plaintiff raised an Olla in front of his house without previously obtaining permission of the Municipality as required by clause (1) of s 91 of the District Municipalities Act (Bom Act III of 1901). The defendant Municipality served the plaintiff with a notice to remove the Olla. The plaintiff having sued for a permanent injunction restraining the Municipality from removing the Olla alleging that the Municipality's notice for its removal was illegal and ultra vires. Held dismissing the suit that in raising the Olla the plaintiff was seeking to add to an existing building which he could not do without asking for permission of the Municipality under clause (1) s 96 of the District Municipalities Act 1901. IRAM GANI MUNICIPALITY v PRADESH DANODAR (1919) I L R 44 Bom 198

— ss 113 122—Suit against Municipality for reinstating a stone removed by it—Plaintiff's adverse possession—Municipality creature of the statute—Duties of Municipality—Municipal District—Encroachment—Obstruction to safe and convenient passage—Notice of removal—Justification by reference to statutory powers In a suit brought against a Municipality to restrain them from obstructing the plaintiff in re-instating a stone which was imbedded in his olla in its original position the lower Appellate Court found that the stone had been in situ for twelve years therefore the Municipality had no right to interfere with it as there had been adverse possession for the statutory period of the portion of the street occupied by the stone. On second appeal by the Municipality held that the Municipality was the creature of the statute with duties inter alia to preserve the passage along public streets. It mattered not for the Municipality whether the encroachment had been in existence for 12 years or more. Under s 113 of the District Municipal Act (Bom Act III of 1901) the Municipality might on proof that the encroachment objected to was an obstruction to the safe and convenient passage along a street by written notice require the owner to remove it. Section 122 of the Act empowered the Municipality to remove the encroachment which might have been put up after the place had become a Municipal District. In the present case the Municipality having failed to justify their action by reference to the said statutory powers the decree was confirmed. DAKORE TOWN MUNICIPALITY v TRAVADI ANUPRAM (1913) I L R 38 Bom 15

— s 15—Mutalik Desai Vatan—Presumption in grants—In Vatan grant is usually of the soil—In Inams and Saranjams grant is usually of the royal share of the revenue—Construction of grants The village of Rajgoh Khurd was granted to the plaintiff's ancestor in 1731 A D by a Maratha Ruler for maintenance in return of service. The grant was expressed to be Koolbab and Koolkanoo (i.e. all taxes and assessments) but exclusive of the (Haks of) Ilakdars and Inamdars. In 1858 the Inam Commissioner continued the Inam to the grantee's descendants on the same terms. The Inamdar accepted a settlement in 1884 in respect of village lands agreeing to pay to Government a fixed amount in lieu of service. A question having arisen whether the grant was of the royal share of the revenue or of the soil also. Held that the grant in question was a grant of the soil. Jasvinder Pandit v The Collector of Puna (1873) 10 Bom H C R 471 followed. In the case of Vatan property the distinction between grants of the royal share of the revenue and grants of the soil which is admissible in the case of Inams and Saranjams cannot be conveniently made without detriment to the statutory restriction on the Vatanar a power of alienation and should not be made unless it is clearly justified by the terms of the settlement. In the Presidency of Bombay in the case of Iname and Saranjams the ordinary presumption in the absence of any indication to the contrary is in favour of the grant being limited to the royal share of the revenue and clear words are necessary to indicate grant of the soil. The words ordinarily used to indicate a grant of the soil are water grass wood (trees) stones mines and hidden treasures but the absence of these words cannot be treated as necessarily establishing that the grant is of the royal share of the revenue only. Where a whole village is mentioned in a Sanad evidencing a settlement under s 15 of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act (Bombay Act III of 1874) it is for the party alleging that a particular survey number of that village is outside the scope of that settlement to prove it. AMRIT VAMAN v HARI GOVIND (1919) I L R. 44 Bom. 237

s 3 cl (19)—Village of Ghatkooper—Kowl (lease) for 99 years—Alienated village—Agricultural lease—Buildings erected by occupiers on their respective lands—Extra assessment levied by Government—Right to levy extra assessment not parted with under the Kowl Tha kowl (lease) of the village of Ghatkooper in the Thana District granted by Government on the 31st December 1845 for 99 years provided inter alia that the grantee should pay to Government annually a fixed sum with respect to the land which had already been under cultivation and that as to waste lands the grantee should bring them all into cultivation within 40 years, and on the expiration of that period the full assessment according to the prevailing usage of the country should be collected annually from the grantee on such quantity as might remain waste out of the present waste entered in the public accounts. The Kowl further provided that in respect of the abovenamed village you (grantee) are to consider yourself as a farmer thereof. You are therefore to exercise the authority vested in farmers by Chap VI of Reg XVII of 1827 or such as may hereafter be vested in them by any new enactment shall also be exercised by you and in the event of your acting contrary to the abovesaid enactments you will be subject to such penalties as are now or may hereafter be provided for by Regulations. Subsequently some of the occupants of the village having built upon their respective lands Government levied extra assessment from them under the provisions of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bom Act V of 1879). The grantee under the Kowl himself claimed the right to levy extra assessment on the ground that the village was an alienated village within the meaning of cl (19) of s 3 of that Code and was therefore not liable to the provisions of the Code. He therefore applied to Government for a refund either wholly or in part of the extra assessment collected by them and the Government having refused to grant his request he brought a suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council praying (i) for a declaration that (a) the extra assessment imposed by the defendant upon lands appropriated for building sites in the village was illegal (b) the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bom Act V of 1879) was not applicable to the village and (c) the resolution of Government to the effect that the Kowl was agricultural was erroneous (ii) that the defendant be restrained by a permanent injunction from levying the extra assessment (iii) that in the event of its being found that the Government were entitled to levy the assessment it be declared that the plaintiff was entitled to receive the same and (iv) that the amount if any received by the defendant on account of such assessment be awarded to him. The Court dismissed the suit. Held on appeal that having regard to the terms of the Kowl it was a lease of the revenues of the village on certain conditions. The object of the lease was agricultural and Government never parted with their rights so far as the right to build was concerned. The lowl was no more than a lease. The Government parted with their rights as lessors in favour of the grantee as lessee and imposed upon him certain conditions none of which brought the contract within the definition of the term alienated village in cl (19) of 3 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bom Act V of 18/9). The clause in the lowl that the grantee was to consider himself a farmer of the village and was to exercise the authority vested in farmers by Chap VI of Peg XIII of 1827 or such as may be hereafter vested in them by any new enactment shall be exercised by you and you will be subject to such penalties as are now or may hereafter be provided for by Regulation brought the village within the operation of the provisions of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bom Act V of 18/9). Interpretation of The land in suit was situated in an unsurveyed alienated village. The defendant was an Inamdar of the village. The land was entered in the Inamdar's khat book in the name of the plaintiff's father who had mortgaged it with possession to one Joti. In 1900 plaintiff's eldest brother passed a Pajnama to the defendant Inamdar relinquishing the land in suit. In 1903 the Inamdar entered into possession after redeeming the mortgage. The plaintiff having sued to recover possession of the land the defendant contended that the Pajnama extinguished the interest of the plaintiff in the land and therefore the action in ejectment could not be sustained. A question having arisen whether the Pajnama was admissible in evidence for want of registration and whether it extinguished the rights of the plaintiff's family in suit land. Held that the Pajnama did not come within the exemption of a 90 of the Registration Act and was inadmissible for want of registration and therefore the rights of the plaintiff's family had not been extinguished was only when a survey settlement had been introduced or when powers contemplated in section 83 of the Land Revenue Code had been introduced or when powers contemplated in a 88 of the Land Revenue Code had been given to the Inamdar that he was entitled to receive notices of relinquishment under a 74 of the Land Revenue Code and only such areas were exempt from registration under a 90 of the Registration Act. The plaintiff was a Kadim Inamdar of certain lands in a village. He was a grantee of the soil and not merely of the royal share of the revenue. The pleader in the mojussil is not merely an advocate—he is the confidential legal adviser of his client and does for him those things which in the Presidency towns are often done by solicitors. For legal advice for the prosecution of legal proceedings in all their stages the client depends on the pleader. This dependence makes the position of the pleader peculiarly onerous and binds him to give exclusive attention to the interests of the client throughout any proceedings in which he is engaged. In winding up proceedings a single pleader must not represent two different creditors whose interests are known to conflict. A pleader must not accept a vakalat nama when he knows that he cannot act for his client throughout the proceedings. A pleader in defending himself against charges of professional misconduct made certain statements. He was dealt with under the disciplinary jurisdiction for making them. It was contended in his behalf that the statements made by him in defence must be regarded as having been made by an accused and were therefore protected. Held overruling the contention that the pleader was within the Court as a pleader and was responsible as such for the statements made by him. GOVERNMENT PLEADER v BHAGUBHAI DALABHAI (1912) I L R 36 Bom 606

— s 15 cl 3—Usufructuary mortgage of 1869—Agreement to pay the debt after fixed period—Suit by mortgagee after the expiration of the period for the recovery of the debt by sale of mortgaged property A usufructuary mortgage executed in the year 1869 contained the following agreement—The amount of Rs 1500 is borrowed on the said premises. We three of us shall after paying off the said amount of debt after fifteen years from this day redeem our premises. Perhaps any one of us three might within the period pay off at one time the amount of rupees according to his share. You should allow redemption of the premises proportionately after receiving the amount and you should pass a receipt for the monies received. In the year 1900 the mortgagee having brought a suit for the recovery of the mortgage debt by sale of mortgaged property, the first Court allowed the claim but the Appellate Court reversed the decree and dismissed the suit on the ground that where in the case of a usufructuary mortgage the mortgagor agrees to redeem by payment of the principal after a stated period the mortgagee has no higher or better right than he has under a simple usufructuary mortgage. Held on appeal by the plaintiffs that the mortgage in suit was governed by clause 3 s XV of Regulation V of 1827 and there being nothing in the terms of the agreement between the parties which either expressly or by implication indicated that the property should not by means of a suit be applied in liquidation of the debt the suit would lie. BOMBAY RENT (WAR RESTRICTIONS) ACT (BOM II OF 1918)

— s 2—Tenant and subtenant—The Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest Act 1915, s 6 Geo 5 ch 97 A godown which was in a dilapidated condition was being reconstructed by its owner at considerable expense. During the reconstruction of the godown, the plaintiffs leased the same from the owner at a monthly rent of Rs 300 for a period of twenty-three months commencing from 23rd December 1916. The godown became ready for occupation in February 1917 and the plaintiffs commenced paying rent from 22nd February 1917. The plaintiffs sublet the godown to the defendants for Rs 275 per month from 22nd February 1917 and the defendants entered into possession on that date. The defendants paid rent to the plaintiffs at the rate of Rs 275 per month up to 15th March 1918 but thereafter they refused to pay the stipulated rent contending that Rs 110 was the standard rent which they were liable to pay under the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions) Act II of 1918. The defendants paid rent at the rate of Rs 110 upto 27th July 1919 which the plaintiffs took under protest. On 29th April 1920 the plaintiffs sued the defendants claiming rent at the rate of Rs 275 per month from 13th March 1918 to 20th March 1920 after giving credit for the amount paid by the defendants and further rent at Rs 300 per month as being the standard rent of the premises the plaintiffs having given notice to the defendants that they would claim Rs 305 as standard rent from 21st March 1920. Held on the facts of the case that the godown in question was for all practical purposes a new godown and the standard rent for the same was the rent at which it was first let after the 1st of January 1916. Held further that the standard rent must be taken to be Rs 305 per month at which the godown was first let to the plaintiffs by its owner and not Rs 275 at which it was sublet by the plaintiffs to the defendants. The only object of including in the definition of landlord a tenant and in the definition of tenant a subtenant is to extend the benefits of the Rent Act to subtenants but it was not intended that the standard rent was to be determined by different standards between the original landlord and the tenant and between the tenant and the subtenant. Otherwise the tenant while himself getting the advantage of the Rent Act would be able to profiteer as between himself and the subtenant. GHANESH UMESHJI v KESHAVJI v KESHAVJI DALJI

By the lease the plaintiffs became entitled to the premises for twenty years at a rent of Rs 6500 per annum for the first ten years and Rs 7000 for the second ten years with an option of renewal for another seven years at the same rent the plaintiffs acquiring the benefit of all subsisting tenancies. The plaintiffs object in taking the lease was to utilise the fourth floor as an office for their firm. At the date of the lease the said floor was held by the defendants on a monthly tenancy. On the 18th of February the owner of the house at the instance of the plaintiffs gave the defendants notice to quit on the 31st of March as the plaintiffs tenancy was to commence on the 1st of April. The defendants failing to quit on the due date the plaintiffs filed the suit for possession of the fourth floor on the 10th of April 1918 the day on which the Bombay Rent Act (II of 1918) came into force. The plaintiffs submitted that they were entitled to the relief claimed inasmuch as the premises were bona fide required by them for their own occupation and that the defendants were trespassers sometime before the Bombay Rent Act came into force. The defendants contended that under the general scheme of the Rent Act and the policy of the Legislature they could not be ejected. The Court of first instance dismissed the plaintiffs' suit as being repugnant not only to the policy of the Rent Act but to the express intention of s 9 of that Act. The services. In 1836 by an adjudication passed by the Inam Commissioner under Bombay Act XI of 1832 it was declared that the lands were to be held by the Inamdar free from payment of land revenue. In 1861 Fakarudin's widow Pachhabai alienated the lands and transferred the Khatibgiri right to plaintiff's father. Thereafter the plaintiff enjoyed the lands free from assessment and performed the services as Khatib until 1911 when an order was passed by the Commissioner directing that the full one-sixth rent be recovered from the plaintiff and be paid to defendant No 3 as long as he officiated as Khatib on behalf of the Inamdar. The plaintiff sued for a declaration that the Commissioner's order was invalid and not binding upon him and also claimed the right to officiate as Khatib. The defendants contended that the jurisdiction of the Civil Court was ousted under s 4 (a) of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act 1876 and the suit was not saved by clause (k) of the proviso to that section nor by s 5 (a) and (b) of the Act. Held that the plaintiff's claim being a claim to hold land wholly or partially free from payment of land revenue under an adjudication duly passed by a competent officer under Bombay Act XI of 1832 was cognizable by the Civil Court under clause (k) of the proviso to s 4 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act. The fact that the plaintiff claimed as an alien did not take the case out of the proviso. Held further that the claim to perform the services as Khatib apart from the claim to hold the lands exempt from the payment of land revenue was although in form a claim covered by the first part of the second paragraph of s 4 (a) of the Revenue Jurisdiction Act 1876 in substance a matter between private parties and might be treated as falling under s 5 (b) of the Act notwithstanding the suit was against Government and was thus cognizable by Civil Courts. FAKARUDIN : THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA

Under s 12 of the Revenue Jurisdiction Act 1876 Government can file a question for the decision of the High Court when investigating any claim or objection which before 1863 may have been excluded from the cognizance of a Civil Court. In 1818 the British Government granted by a Sanad some villages in Chikodi and Manowlee as Inam Dikma la pa to be enjoyed from son to grandson etc from generation to generation. Shortly afterward the talukas of Chikodi and Manowlee were ceded by the British Government to the Maharaja of Kolhapur. In 1821 the Paja of Kolhapur granted some more villages in the said talukas to the same grantee. In 1842 a* treaty was concluded between the British Government and the Maharaja of Kolhapur. One of the articles of the treaty provided that the Raja of Kolhapur promised to continue to the grantee his lands and rights and the British Government guaranteed enjoyment of those villages to the grantee for life provision being made that the rights of the grantees and descendants as founded on Sanad or custom should not be prejudiced by the cessation of the said guarantee. As the Raja did not keep his promise not to molest the grantee the British Government made in 1827 a further treaty with the Paja of Kolhapur by which it was provided that the latter should give back to the former the said talukas in the same state in which he received them and that as the Raja had never consented to annul and hence the grantee by seizing his villages and other property it had been deemed necessary to extend the guarantee of the British Government to his descendants and the Raja accordingly engaged never to molest them. Thereafter in 1828 a question having arisen with regard to the villages granted by the Paja in the said talukas it was declared by the Government that the same should be allowed to remain in possession of the grantees as if the grant was made with the concurrence of the British Government. In 1863 on the introduction of the Summary Settlement the Government was of opinion that no prima facie case had been made out for excluding the grantees' lands from the benefit of the Summary Settlement on the ground of their being held on political tenure and the Summary Settlement was accordingly applied to the grantees' lands with his consent. It was contended nearly sixty years afterwards that the lands in question being either lands held under a treaty or under political tenure were excepted from the provisions of the Bombay Summary Settlement Act 1863. Held (1) that at the time of Summary Settlement the land in question were not held under a treaty for neither was it shown that the original title was under a term of treaty which remained in force nor that the treaty of cession guaranteed title (2) that the title of the grantees to the lands in question originated in the Sanads of 1819 and 1821 and that when the two talukas were given back by the Paja to the British Government in 1827 the existing rights of the grantee under the Sanads remained undisturbed pleno jure and were so recognised by the British Government (3) that the grant was specifically descended in the Sanad as Dikma la pa and there was no hint to show that it was a Jaghir or held under political tenure (4) that therefore the Bombay Summary Settlement Act 1863 was properly applied to the lands in question. Cool v Spry (1892) 1 C 5 and Sheikh Sultan v Ali v Sheikh Ilyas (1891) 17 Bom 431 in quibus In re WASUDEV HANUMANT PANDIT (1900)

Where A and B members of a joint family (of which B was the karta) carrying on a joint family business entered into a contract of under brokerage and X subsequently died but B and the other party to the contract went on dealing with each other as if the contract subsisted. Held per CURRIE that X's death did not terminate the contract. Per MOOKERJEE J Where there are two joint agents and one of them dies upon his death the contract of agency terminates only so far as is concerned but not as regards the surviving agent. The rights and liabilities of coparceners in a joint Hindu family cannot be determined by exclusive reference to the Indian Contract Act but must be considered also with regard to the general rules of Hindu Law according to these rules the death of one of the coparceners does not dissolve a family partnership. PACHAULI & LUCHMOPADYAY (1916) 20 C W N 708

Agricultural tribe — Suit for pre-emption—Sanction The sanction contemplated in s 3 of the Bundelkhand Alienation of Land Act 1903 applies to a voluntary transfer and there is no provision in the Act which entitles an intending pre-emptor to get the sanction of the Collector to bring a suit for pre-emption. Therefore a Court is not entitled to grant a decree for pre-emption to a person who is not entitled to purchase the property in question not being a member of the agricultural tribe within the meaning of s 3 of the Bundelkhand Alienation of Land Act. SHRI PRANANATH WARRI (1910) I L R 37 All 662 rights—Rights of purchaser The policy of the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act is to prevent persons who are not members of an agricultural tribe from acquiring property and the provisions of s 3 apply to all permanent alienations even though they are brought about by the exercise of the right of pre-emption. Property in Bundelkhand was mortgaged and subsequently the equity of redemption was sold by the owners to a certain person from whom it was pre-empted. The Collector however did not sanction the sale but ordered the name of the purchaser to be recorded as a usufructuary mortgagee. Later the mortgagees sold this very property to the plaintiff. He brought this suit to redeem it from the defendant who was in possession as a prior mortgagee. Held that the plaintiff had a right to redeem the property from the defendants inasmuch as the ultimate right of redemption remained in the representatives of the original mortgagee. This right they were entitled to transfer to the plaintiff. RAM NATH v. HARANI (1911)

So where a mortgage had been executed by a member of an agricultural tribe in a form not permitted by the Act and a preliminary decree for sale has been passed thereon without opposition on the part of the mortgagee or based on his status as a member of an agricultural tribe it was held that the Court to which application for a final decree was made was not merely justified in taking but was bound to take action under s 9 of the Act. Held also that the Hindu Ohoos of the Jalaun district are a subdivision of the Ahir caste and therefore members of an agricultural tribe within the meaning of the above mentioned Act. *HAKKA PRASAD v. The Collector took action under the Act with regard to one set of defendants but as to the other set decided that they were not members of an agricultural tribe. Held that this finding left the Civil Court no option but to continue the proceedings as on it and pendently of the provisions of the Bundelkhand Alienation of Land Act 1903. *GOVIND RAO v. The mortgagee took advantage of the provisions of the Bundelkhand Encumbered Estates Act. The mortgagee took no steps under the Act to realize the amount due to him on his mortgage. The sub mortgagee did prefer a claim but it was rejected and he did not appeal against the special Judge's order rejecting it. The sub mortgagee was ejected from the mortgaged property and thereafter his sons sued the mortgagee on his covenant claiming damages on account of his ejection. Held that the suit was not barred by reason of anything contained in the Bundelkhand Encumbered Estates Act 1903. *GATA PRASAD v. Resumption by Government of land in—Cantonment Code of 1836 and 1850—Ownership of land in Poona Cantonment—Suit by Government for ejectment of tenant from premises within Cantonment limits—Private ownership in Cantonment claim to—Presumption of ownership—Po season effect of—Right of Government to resume land In a suit for ejectment of the appellants from premises within the limits of the Poona Cantonment the Government as plaintiffs claimed that the land belonged to them and was merely held by the defendants on military or cantonment tenure which entitled them to resume it at their pleasure subject to compensation for buildings which the tenants might have erected thereon. The defendants claimed the land as their private property on the ground that their predecessors in title were owners of the land at the time the cantonment was established and that nothing had happened since to vest the title in the Government and while admitting that they were subject to military jurisdiction and to the Government right of appropriation contended that they were entitled to compensation on a basis of private ownership and not as mere licensees. They also contended that being in actual possession of the land the onus was on the plaintiffs to rebut the presumption of ownership in fee attaching to the possession of land whether in a cantonment or elsewhere. The title of the defendants was based on a document dated 27th August 1864 by which one Bevis a Purser in the Indian Navy certified that for the consideration therein mentioned he handed over to Dorabjee Pestonjee all claim he had to the house and out houses and premises generally marked 23 Staff Lines, Poona Cantonment. This document was enforced as sanctioned by the Brigadier General Commanding. Held on a consideration of the mode of delimitation of the Poona Cantonment

the regulations affecting it the arrangements made with the owners of the lands taken to indemnify them for the loss they sustained by being deprived of their rights of occupancy and the other circumstances of the case (i) that even if the defendants established that their house was built at or before the time the cantonment was made there was still a strong probability that they were duly compensated for the change in their position as owners to that of licensees (ii) that from the regulations as summarised in Aitchison's Cantonment Code of 1936 and Jameson's Cantonment Code of 1930 it was clear that, though permission to occupy ground was frequently given especially for the building of officers' houses or bungalows such permission carried with it no sort of proprietary right and the buildings were liable to expropriation at a price to be fixed by the authorities and the permission of the Commanding Officer was necessary even for the letting or sale of the house so built. It was therefore impossible to say that mere possession or occupation of the bungalow on this site afforded any presumption what so ever that the defendant as one of their joint tenants in title were owners in fee. The presumption was altogether the other way and was strengthened by an examination of the history of the site itself which showed that the defendants' predecessors in title did not regard the property as differing in its tenure and terms from other property in the cantonment. The defendants were therefore mere licensees and the land had been lawfully resumed by Government at KANUNGSU ADESHI GHASWALA v SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA (1911) I L R 33 Bom 1 15 C W N 919

The consignee took no steps regarding delivery of the goods on arrival and the defendant company after landing the goods handed them over in the usual course to the Port Commissioners. The defendant company thereafter posted a notice of arrival addressed to N W Freeman 1 q Calcutta which was delivered by the post office to one Nigel W Freeman. The latter through his agent gave a letter of indemnity to the defendant company and the agent without production of the bill of lading obtained from the defendant company a delivery order on the Port Commissioners for the good and wrongfully took delivery of the same. CASH ALLOWANCE

————— Failure—recovery of cash allowance suit to recover—Limitation Act (XV of 1877) Sec II Arts 131 6th The plaintiff the manager of the temple of Shri Laxmi Narayan Dev at Hubhal sued to recover from the defendants (the managers of the temple of Shree 3 adbhushwar at Banarasi a sum of Rs 90 as arrears of a cash allowance (pratik) which the former was entitled to receive from the property of the latter. The defendants admitted the title of the plaintiff to the allowance but pleaded limitation as to the arrears for two out of the six years. The lower Courts applied Art 131 of the Limitation Act 1877 and allowed the whole of the claim. On appeal. Held that the claim was properly allowed. A cash allowance of the nature as in the present case is according to Hindu law mbandha or immovable property where it is annually payable the right to payment gives to the person entitled a periodically recurring right as against the person liable to pay. The right to any amount which has become payable stands as to such person on the same footing as the aggregate of rights to amounts which are to become payable and which have become actually due. But where there are more than one person entitled to the payment as co-sharer and the payment is made to one of them by the person liable to pay the co-sharer receiving the amount holds it minus his share on behalf of the rest as money held and received for their use though as to him with reference to the aggregate of rights it is mbandha or immovable property in the nature of a periodically recurring right. The important question is who is the person sued and what is it that is sued for? If what is sued for is the establishment of a title to the right itself then Art 131 applies whether the defendant is the person originally liable to pay or is a co-sharer who has received payment from that person. If on the other hand what is sued for is the amount of arrears which has become actually payable to the plaintiff then there is a distinction between the person originally liable to pay and a co-sharer of the plaintiff who has actually received payment from that person. Art 131 applies in that case.

Regulation 11 of 1897
1897 s. 1—On a question—Civil Court jurisdiction—Suit to be declared Ayya of Hiremath and to restrain defendant from so styling himself. The plaintiff sued to obtain a declaration that he was entitled to the fees and privileges appertaining to the Hiremath at Kamalapur by reason of his title to be called the Ayya of that Hiremath and to obtain a perpetual injunction to restrain the defendant from using the name of Ayya of Hiremath. The plaintiff's complaint was that the defendant had assumed a name to which the plaintiff had the exclusive right and that that assumption would enable as it had enabled the defendant to attract to him all a large number of the plaintiff's follower and thereby appropriate to himself fees which would otherwise have been paid to the plaintiff. Held that it was a question to a caste office and to be entitled to perform the honorary duties of that office or to enjoy certain privileges and honors at the hands of the members of the caste in virtue of that office. It was a caste question not cognizable by a Civil Court. Held also that the fact that there had been no allegation of any specific damage by reason of the assumption by the defendant of the name of Ayya of Hiremath and also the admission that after all the result of the assumption of that name would be merely to enable some of the followers of the plaintiff to go over to the defendant showed that what the parties had been fighting for was merely a question of dignity under the cover of a religious office. If the Court were to interfere in such cases it would be merely assisting one party at the expense of the other and compelling the caste or the sect to follow one spiritual leader in preference to another. GADIGERA v BASAYA (1910) I L R 34 Bom 455

questions—Application of Indian Trusts Act (11 of 1887) s. 5 and 6 to creation of trusts of caste funds—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) s. 101
As a result of disensions in a Hindu caste a suit was filed by the plaintiff a trustee of certain caste funds and member of the Managing Committee against the defendant a co-trustee and the President of that Committee. The plaintiff prayed for a declaration that he had the right to inspect all books and documents of the Mahajan Managing Committee Sub Committee and Trustees and for an injunction restraining the defendant from interfering with him in the exercise of such right. The only two documents about which there was any real controversy were the minutes of the Sub Committee and the correspondence file of the Mahajan. Held that as trustee of the Dorasai and Sadharan funds the plaintiff had no right either in law or by virtue of any caste rules to the roving inspection claimed. Pank of Bombay v Suleman I L R 32 Bom 466 44 referred to. Held further that the Mahajan fund of this caste being a purely secular fund the Indian Trusts Act applied and the plaintiff could not claim to have been made a trustee of that fund merely by virtue of a caste resolution and his own letter of acceptance. Held further on the evidence that there had been no express demand addressed by the plaintiff to the proper quarter and no refusal by the defendant such as would be necessary to enable a suit of this character to succeed. Held further that where rights to property are not involved all matters of external management must be left to the decision of the caste. The question in dispute was in reality a question between the caste and a section apparently a small section of the caste led by the plaintiff and as such it was outside the Court's jurisdiction in accordance with the decision in Vemchand v Sataichand I L R 5 Bom 85. Lalji Shami v Wajji Wardhaman I L P 19 Bom 507 referred to and distinguished. 4. ———— Omission to sue for portion of claim—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) O II r 2—In 1908 the plaintiff sued the defendant Company for damages for Rs 1900 for having dismantled a building situated on certain land which was stated to belong to the plaintiff in certain undivided shares. In that suit the plaintiff alleged that the defendant Company had not only dispossessed the plaintiff from his share the property by denying the plaintiff's title thereto but had wrongfully appropriated the material of the same on such demolition as aforesaid to the prejudice of the plaintiff's right—the work of dismantling having been commenced and completed in October 1908. The plaintiff in his plaint in that suit asked the damages as for the value of the plaintiff's share in the building but asked for no relief in respect of the recovery of possession of the said property. The Munsif gave the plaintiff a decree for Rs 1900 and the decision was ultimately affirmed on appeal. In a suit brought by the plaintiff in 1914 against the same defendants for the recovery of separate possession of the said property after declaration of title thereto and after partition of the same by metes and bounds. Held that the cause of action in the present suit is the same as in the former suit and that the plaintiff is by O II r 2 precluded from suing for the relief which he now claims. KHARBAH COMPANY LTD v DURGA CHARAN CHANDRA (1919) I L R 46 Cal 640

The Central Provinces Government Wards Act (XVII of 1885) applies to the superintendence by the Court of Wards of the estates of Hindu joint families as well as to the separate estates of Hindus and others situate within the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces. The two managing members of a Hindu joint family governed by the Mitakashara law and zamindars of the family estate of Bahera Khedi in Hosangabad which had become overburdened with debt applied under the above Act to the Deputy Commissioner as the Court of Wards for the directors to as sume superintendence of the joint family estate with a view to liquidate the debts. Held that in making the application they acted within their power and authority as managing members and in the exercise of all the members of the joint family and that inasmuch as no member had in the property any equitable interest Shri Gajulak v. Akhal Singh I L R 7, III 49 I P 201 d 120 and Appurva Rama v. Sivaiah II L R 14 75 what was taken over by the Court of Wards on a summary representation of the estate was the property of all the members of the joint family. The Chief Commissioner had power to annul the assumption by the Court of Wards of the whole of the joint family property where the application was made by the managing members only or by all the members of the family and the estate of the Court of Wards in dealing with the property after having of it was assumed to be the interest of all the members. The sanction of the Chief Commissioner to a mortgage of such property as required by s 18 of Act XVII of 1885 may be an implied sanction. By the terms of a mortgage made in 1891 by the Court of Wards in favour of the respondents (plaintiff) on the security of the joint family estate the mortgagor mortgaged (1) 10000 way repayable with interest by annual instalments of Rs. 10000 extending over more than 10 years and in the event of Rs. 30000 becoming overdue the Court of Wards covenanted to recover such sum by sale or otherwise of sufficient of the mortgaged property. If it was found impossible to continue to manage the estate the Court of Wards was either to sell up the entire property and devote the proceeds to the liquidation of the debt, or make over the estate to the mortgagees in satisfaction of their claim. In the event of the management being relinquished before the debt was liquidated in the ordinary course the Court of Wards was to liquidate the debt remaining due by the sale of such portion of the property as might be necessary. The sum borrowed was applied to pay off the debts on the property. Only Rs. 10000 was repaid up to 1893 and since then no instalment had been paid, the Court of Wards owing to unforeseen circumstances finding it impossible to pay more, either of principal or interest and in March 1900 the Court of Wards after giving the mortgagees notice that the relinquishment by it of the management had been sanctioned, offered to make over to them the mortgaged property in satisfaction of their claim excepting the cultivating rights of sur land which are to be reserved for the maintenance of the ward, which the mortgagees declined as not being in compliance with the terms of the mortgage deed. In June 1900 the Court of Wards relinquished the management of the estate without selling it or transferring it to the mortgagees. In a suit brought in 1904 on the mortgage for sale and recovery of the amount due Held (affirming the decisions of the Courts in India) that on the terms of the mortgage and under the circumstances of the case the whole sum payable on the mortgage had become due on the relinquishment of the management by the Court of Wards and the usual decree for sale was granted. GILLASPIE v. s 65A—Gaonthia, permanent rights conferred by validity of—protected Gaonthia power of to surrender a name—Ill rise possession Held that there is nothing in the incidents of the tenure of a protected Gaonthia as set out in s 65A of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act 1891 which in any way suggests that a Gaonthia is not entitled to relinquish his rights. Held further that the suit was not barred by limitation because possession could not be adverse to a person who was not himself entitled to claim present possession and so long as the Gaonthia tenure subsisted the Gaonthia was not entitled to a full possession of any part of the village. Therefore the possession of the defendants did not become adverse to the plaintiff until the tenure was relinquished in 1907. for the district to assume superintendence of the joint family estate with a view to liquidate the debts. Held that in making this application they acted within their power and authority as managers, members, and in the interest of all the members of the joint family and that no one has no member had in the property any definite undivided share. [Caribulah v. Akhalik Singh I L R 39 Cal 40 L J 1014 1015 and 1016 and 1017 and 1018 and 1019 II Moo 111 112] what was taken over by the Court of Wards on assuming superintendence of the estate was the property of all the members of the joint family. The Chief Commissioner had power to sanction the assumption by the Court of Wards of the whole of the joint family property while the application was made by the managing members only or by all the members of the family and the acts of the Court of Wards in dealing with the property after charge of it was a valid bound the interest of all the members. The sanction of the Chief Commissioner to a mortgage of such property as required by s 18 of Act XVII of 1893 may be an implied sanction. By the terms of a mortgage made in 1891 by the Court of Wards in favour of the respondents (plaintiff) on the security of the joint family estate the mortgage money (Rs 10,000) was repayable with interest by annual instalments of Rs 10,000 extending over more than 9 years and in the event of Rs 30,000 becoming over due the Court of Wards consented to recover such sum by sale or other means of sufficient of the mortgaged property. If it was found impossible to continue to manage the estate the Court of Wards was either to sell up the entire property and devote the proceeds to the liquidation of the debt, or make over the estate to the mortgagees in satisfaction of their claim. In the event of the management being relinquished before the debt was liquidated in the ordinary course the Court of Wards was to liquidate the debts remaining due by the sale of such portion of the property as might be necessary. The sum borrowed was applied to pay off the debts on the property. Only Rs 16,000 was repaid up to 1893 and since then no instalment had been paid the Court of Wards owing to unforeseen circumstance finding it impossible to pay more either of principal or interest and in March 1900 the Court of Wards after giving this mortgagees notice that the relinquishment by it of the management had been sanctioned offered to make over to them the mortgaged property in satisfaction of their claim excepting the cultivating rights of the land which are to be reserved for the maintenance of the ward which the mortgagees declined as not being a compliance with the terms of the mortgage deed. In June 1900 the Court of Wards relinquished the management of the estate without selling it or transferring it to the mortgagees. In a suit brought in 1901 on the mortgage for sale and recovery of the amount due. Held (affirming the decisions of the Courts in India) that on the terms of the mortgage and under the circumstances of the case the whole sum payable on the mortgage had become due on the relinquishment of the management by the Court of Wards and the valid decree for sale was made. construction of s 45 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act (XI of 1898) sub s (1) and (6) —

Held in this case that a Conciliation Award dated 28th February 1905 was a fresh contract or origin of rights between the parties which although it came into existence in consequence of registered mortgages of 1861 and 1884 and transactions under them was both for the purposes of enforcement and for the purpose of the application of s 45 sub s (6) the transaction between the parties which was the foundation of their rights The transfer made or decreed by the proceedings in suit could not therefore be said to be in pursuance of the mortgage As documents expressly providing for the transfer of the right to occupy the land as a proprietor without subs (6) the mortgages would have been saved from the operation of sub s (1) But that sub section was applicable in this case and therefore not withstanding the terms of the award which by virtue of the agreement of reference became the agreement of the parties the mortgagor could not so transfer his rights to occupy the land as to divest himself of his right as an occupancy

Held that having lost his case under s. 47 the plaintiff could not again bring a suit in a Civil Court for the same relief. such conspiracy A makes or has in his possession or under his control an explosive substance they may if the Court thinks fit be charged and tried together under s 120 B Indian Penal Code and s 4 (b) of Act VI of 1908. If all the known conspirators named in the charge are not placed on their trial at the trial of each (separately) without the others is not vitiated. Emberger v Laht Mohan Chuckerbutty I L R 8 Cal 59 15 C B 293 explained. If the accused have committed an offence under s 4 (b) of the Explosive Substances Act 1908 in pursuance of a criminal conspiracy it is open to the Crown to prosecute them for such offence irrespective of the question of the ultimate design of the alleged conspiracy coming under s 121A Indian Penal Code (which charge requires previous sanction under s 196 Criminal Procedure Code). In order to justify the inference of guilt the inculpatory facts must be incompatible with the innocence of the accused and irreconcilable of explanation upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that of his guilt. R v Hodge & Lewis C C 1 referred to. The presumption of innocence (in criminal case) is not more than that if the commission of a crime is directly in issue in any proceeding it must be proved beyond reasonable doubt. The whole doctrine when drawn out is that a person who is charged with a crime must be proved guilty, that according to the ordinary rule of procedure and of legal reasoning procurator pro reo is granted so that the accused stands innocent until he is proved guilty, and secondly that this proof of guilt must place all reasonable doubt. In a charge of conspiracy general evidence of the existence of the conspiracy may first be given before particular facts are proved to show that one or more of the accused took part in it. P v Sidney 9 St Tr 817 Queen Corcoran & Coe 2 B & L 284 1 St Tr 281 48 P & H 111 3 B & Ald 566 followed. Under the law in England facts similar but not part of the same transaction as the main fact are not in general admissible to prove either the occurrence of the main fact or the identity of its author except (after evidence abunde on these points has been given) to show the state of mind of the parties with regard to such fact & knowledge of its nature or his intent. In general whenever it is necessary to rebut even by anticipation the defence of accident mistake or other innocent condition of mind evidence that the accused has been concerned in a systematic course of conduct of the same specific kind as and proximate in point of time to that in question may be given. P v Holt (1860) Bell 280 8 Cor 411 to the contrary is no longer authority. R v Smith 0 Cor 804 92 L T 908 and Emperor v Debdandra Proad I L R 8 Cal 559 15 C B 293 referred to. s 4 of Act VI of 1908 substantially reproduces the provisions of s 3 of 46 and 47 Viet Chap 3 (Explosive Substances Act 1883) consequently the expression unlawfully and maliciously may be interpreted in the sense in which it is familiarly used in the criminal law of England. Unlawfully thus signifies not for a lawful object and maliciously signifies intentionally and without justification or excuse or claim of right. The Queen v Clemens [1898] 1 Q B 556 19 Cor 18 Miles v Hutchins [1903] 2 A B 714 90 Cor 555 referred to. Reg v Ward I Cor

The term explosive substance as used in s 4 (b) of Act VI of 1908 includes any part of an apparatus machine or implement intended to be used or adapted for causing or aiding in causing any explosive substance and by means thereof does not mean by means thereof alone. P v Charles J. Cor 499 referred to. The inference of fact may legitimately be drawn that the explosive substances made and possessed by Saania were intended for use in British India. It is the duty of the prosecution not so much to secure a conviction as to place all the available evidence in the case fairly and fully before the tribunal by which alone the guilt or innocence of the accused is to be determined. Pan Jai sen Roy v King Emperor I I L 12 Cal 1 19 C B 293 followed. Reg v Holden 8 C C P 600 referred to. The proof of the case against the prisoner must depend for its support not upon the absence or want of any explanation on the part of the prisoner. But upon the positive affirmative evidence of his guilt that is given by the Crown. But if there is a certain appearance made out against a party if he is involved by the evidence in a state of considerable suspicion he is called upon for his own sake and his own safety to state and to bring forward the circumstances whatever they may be which might reconcile such suspicious appearances with perfect innocence. Pegina v Irot 4 St Tr 281 48 P & H 111 3 B & Ald 566 followed. While it is not necessary to prove manual possession of the explosive substance by the accused it must be proved that it was in his power or control. Possession to be punishable must also be possession with knowledge and intent. The mere fact that the other accused were in the room does not show they were in possession of all or any of the things contained therein. When the evidence at the disposal of the prosecution is insufficient to secure a conviction for the crime committed it is inexpedient even though it may be lawful to prosecute the accused for a conspiracy the proof whereof really rests on the establishment of that very crime. Reg v Boulton 12 Cor 37 and Emperor v Laht Mohan I L R 8 Cal 559 15 C B 293 referred to. A man a guilt is to be established by proof of the facts alleged and not by proof of his character; such evidence might create a prejudice but not lead a step towards substantiation of guilt. In India as in England the accused are entitled in cross-examination to elicit facts in support of their defence from the prosecution witnesses wholly unconnected with the examination in chief. In the course of cross-examination of this character the defence are entitled in view of the generality of s 143 of the Indian Evidence Act to ask leading questions. Under s 154 the Court has the discretion to permit the prosecution to test by way of cross-examination the veracity of their own witnesses with regard to the (unconnected) matters elicited by the defence in cross-examination. The defence is not entitled to elicit from individual prosecution witnesses whether he was a spy or an

Duty of judge. Leads of charge. The object of the heads of charge is to inform the High Court should occasion arise of what direction the Judge gave in law to the jury and the nature of his summing up of the evidence not only for the prosecution but also for the defence. The heads of charge are not intended to be an exhaustive detail of every particular which the Judge may have addressed to the jury. The Judge is not bound to address himself in every particular and in every detail to every suggestion put forward by the defence. It is the duty of the Judge fairly and candidly to point out the main and salient features of the case from the point of view of the prosecution and of the defence respectively. In doing so he is entitled to take into consideration the speeches made upon both sides. If in substance it can be seen from the frame of the heads of charge what were the directions which the Judge gave to the jury and that they were right and proper then there can be no ground of complaint even though the phraseology and form adopted might be open to question. More informal reason or form is not sufficient to invalidate. ERNATH SAMAT 1 Pat L J 317

Practice—Dissolution of partnership—Assets in hands of receiver—Judgment creditor—Solicitor's lien for costs The rule at common law that a solicitor is entitled to a lien for his costs on property recovered or preserved by his exertions has always been followed by this Court and where there are assets of a partnership in the hands of a receiver appointed in a partnership suit the solicitors engaged in that suit are entitled to ask for a charge on those assets in priority to the creditors of the partnership. Ridd v Thorne [1902] 2 Ch 341 followed. Where a plaintiff has obtained a decree against a partnership firm the available assets of which are in the hands of a receiver appointed in a previous partnership suit his proper course is not to issue execution against those assets but to ask the Court for a charging order and to undertake to deal with the charge according to the order of the Court. Kenney v Attrial 34 Ch D 345 followed. *A. CHARITABLE INAMS

Resumption of by Government—Patta granted to one of the previous trustees—Suit by representative of another trustee for share—Effect of resumption—Distinction between resumption and enfranchisement of personal or service inams Where the Government resumed certain lands which were held previously as charitable inam and after imposing an assessment granted a patta to one of the persons who were the trustees thereof prior to the resumption. Held that the representative of another trustee had no right to claim a share in the land, as against the trustee to whom the patta was given. The principles regulating the ownership of enfranchised lands in cases of enfranchisement of personal or service inams afford no guidance in cases of resumption of charitable inams. In cases of enfranchisement there is a change not of ownership of the land but of the tenure on which it is held. In cases of resumption the land previously the property of the trust is at the absolute disposal of the Government who can grant it to anyone who becomes the owner subject to the obligations ordinarily attached to ryotwari tenure. Gunnayyan v Kamakshi Ayyar I L R 26 Mad 339 and Pingala Lalshimpatti v Bom-maveddipatti Chalamayyar I L R 37 Mad 434 distinguished. PUNNIAH v KOTAMMA (1916)

When the act is done after mutual discussion when the minority had an opportunity to record their dissent it will be the act of the whole body otherwise it will be the act of the majority alone and will not bind the minority. Teramith v Lalitha I L R 6 Mad 270 referred to. Willinson v Mallin 2 Tyrwhit 511 referred to. A company or body of persons will be estopped from questioning the validity of an act done by some only of such body or company only when such persons are held out as clothed with authority to do the act. Where such persons have not unlimited power to act for the body but only the right to act within certain limits the stranger entering into the transaction has to find within such limits the power to transact. Where the remedial right does not accrue until the majority have after consultation signified their will on a question by some or the majority of the trustees without consulting the others will not be maintainable. When the right to the relief claimed has accrued to the joint trustees the institution of a suit by some only without having consulted the remaining trustees even where they have not perversely refused to join cannot be a ground for dismissing the suit. Although the interests of the co trustees is joint and indivisible it is fully represented when they are all on the record on one side or the other. Peria Karuppan v Valayutham Chetti I L R 29 Mad 392 referred to. The question whether a charitable trust if otherwise valid, is vitiated by the rule against perpetuities is left open, but the preponderance of authority is for the proposition that the doctrine of cyprus is applicable only in wills and not in deeds. Brudenell v Fives 1 East 410 Pitt v Jackson 2 Bro C C 51 Adams v Adams 2 Comp 651 referred to. Between the applicability of the cyprus doctrine and the failure of a charitable trust for the non satisfaction of a condition precedent the distinction is that in the former there is the breakdown of the machinery required to carry out validly created charitable trust and in the latter there is the initial failure of the conditions essential to bring the trust into existence. Yates v

Stevedores though named by the charterers are the agents of shipowners and not of the charterers—Dunnage improper and insufficient—Shipowners ordinary liability for bad storage and insufficient dunnage—Shipowners specific liability for shortage and sweepings under the charter party. The plaintiffs chartered the defendant company's steamer Abydos for the carriage of cargo of rice in bags from Akyab a seaport in Burma to Bombay. The plaintiffs under the charter party were empowered to sublet the whole or part of the cargo and they sublet about one fourth of the cargo space to other shippers. The charter party expressly provided inter alia that 'nothing herein contained shall exempt the ship owners from liability to pay for damage to cargo occasioned by bad stowage by improper or insufficient dunnage that the charterers stevedores at loading port to be employed at market rate but not exceeding owner's contract rate that all mats and requisite dunnage to be provided by the steamer that all sweepings to be delivered to the charterers at port of discharge and that the steamer to be responsible for any proved shortage. The bill of lading contained a special exception that the lumps were not responsible for loss or damage caused by insufficient packing torn mended or chafed weak or fragile bags and bunging wraps not for usual and reasonable wear and tear of packages. During the voyage the ship experienced heavy weather for at least two days and throughout encountered average monsoon weather with south westerly squall. On the cargo being unloaded at Bombay it was found that 710 bags of the plaintiffs were damaged that there was a shortage to the extent of 400 cwt and that the sweepings collected amounted on the whole to about 5·6 cwt. On the evidence adduced in the case it was found that the damage was to a certain extent caused by improper lashing of the dunnage at the port of loading. The plaintiffs sued in respect of (i) damage (ii) shortage and (iii) sweepings. The defendants contended that the loading and stowage of the cargo as well as the lashing of the dunnage was within the discretion and control of the stevedores as the plaintiffs agent and not as the defendants agent and that in respect of shortage their liability was excluded by the bills of lading. Held (i) that the shipowners would be prima facie liable for the damage caused by bad stowage or improper or insufficient dunnage and that their liability would not be modified by a clause in the charter party empowering the charterers to name the stevedores as the stevedores were the agents and paid servants of the ship owners for the purpose of discharging the duty of the shipowners in loading the cargo. Harris v Best Pyle & Co 63 L T 76 followed. (ii) that the defendants were liable in respect of the shortage as the prevailing contract between the ship owner and the charterer was the charter party and not the bill of lading. 4 ———— Village Chaulidari Act (Beng. VI of 1870) ss 14 49 50 51 52 53—For or resumption and assessment of chaulidari chakaran lands—Zamindars' estate in Orissa—Peculation VII of 1870 s. 33—Regulation VIII of 180 s. 41—Peculation I of 193 s. 8 cl (1)—Onus of proof In these appeals the Judicial Committee (affirming the decision of the High Court) held on a consideration of the history of Orissa and of the legislation applicable to its settlement and the nature of its zamindari estate that the Government were under the circumstances not entitled to resume and assess with revenue as being chaulidari chakaran lands within the meaning of the Village Chaulidari Act (Bengal Act VI of 1870) certain lands forming part of the estates of the respondents (the zamindars of Suloda and Madhupur) in Orissa with whose ancestors' settlements had been made in 1803 and sanads granted by which statutory confirmation was given by s. 33 of Bengal Regulation VII of 180, and in respect of which estates the revenue was settled in perpetuity. The history of chaulidari grants as set out in the judgment of Lord King down in the case of Joykishen Hookerjee v Collector of East Burdwan 10 Moo I 116 referred to. The respondents in discharge of the duties imposed on them by their sanads to maintain peace and order within their estates (the manner in which they were to carry out such duties being impliedly left by the Government to the zamindars as there was no machinery provided for the purpose in the legislation previous to 1870) retained in their service a large number of chaulidars whom according to the custom of the country they remunerated by grants of land in lieu of wages. A register of these chaulidars was kept in the zamindari office and in the appointment of the chaulidars in more than one instance the Government Police Officer had a voice. But the records showed that the zamindars often changed the lands held by these men and resumed what they considered to be in excess of their requirement. Bengal Act VI of 1870 was extended to Orissa in 1879. In suits by the respondents against the Secretary of State for a declaration that the Act did not apply to the lands in question. Held that the onus was on the appellants to show that when the zamindars were confirmed to the respondents' ancestors such confirmation was subject to reservations in respect of any land which gave the Government the power of resuming and assessing it and that onus had not been discharged. The power of resumption was reserved by Government in the old Regulations in respect of lands which had been set apart by the zamindar with their permission or under their authority. In Regulation I of 1793 the word used is appropriated in Regulation XIII of 180; the expression assigned is employed but in both statutes the characteristics of the grants under which the lands were held depended on the implied authorisation of the Government which excluded them from consideration in the adjustment of the jama of the mahal. In the present cases the appellants had failed to show that any parcel of land was not taken into account in fixing the rent respectively payable by the respondent nor that there was any obligation on the part of the respondents to make such grants. The only obligation on them was to maintain peace and order within their zamindari. They entertained the services of chaulidars for whose maintenance they allotted from time to time certain lands of their own free will. The mere fact that some appointments were made with the approval of a Government official could not alter the nature of the grants. The word assigned in the definition section of Bengal Act VI of 1870 means land assigned by Government or appropriated under their authority or with their permission. Not only did the form of the transferring order in Schedule C of the Act clearly show that the expression assigned is applied to lands assigned by Government for the maintenance of the chaulidars and in respect of which they received the right to resume and transfer to the zamindar subject to an additional assessment but the resolution by which the Act was extended to Orissa leaves no possibility of doubt what the Government understood the Act to mean. In the orders passed a distinction is made with regard to chaulidari holdings in the temporarily settled tracts and those situated in permanently settled estates. With regard to the latter it is declared that on resumption the holdings should be included in the estates within which they lie and form part of its assets in the future. Nothing can be clearer that the Act was designed to deal with lands which although lying within a mahal did not form part of its assets which was not the case with the respondents' zamindars. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v KIRTIBAS BHUPATI HARI CHANDAY MAHAPATRA (1914)

alternative for a decree declaring that the defendants were bound to pay rent and for an assessment of adequate rent. The lands in suit were formerly chakaran lands which were resumed by Government and settled with plaintiff's vendor on 7th September 1898. The plaintiff obtained his title to the lands by purchase of his vendor's interest at an auction sale in execution of a decree in 1907 or 1908. The defendants who held the lands as chaukidari chakran lands at the time of the resumption continued to hold them ever since without taking any settlement either from the plaintiff's vendor or the plaintiff. In 1902 the plaintiff's vendor sued the defendants in the Small Cause Court for compensation for use and occupation and obtained decrees against them. The plaintiff brought his suit on the 10th September 1909. Held that once the chakran lands were resumed and settled with the plaintiff's predecessor or the latter had the right to take khaj possession of the lands and the mere omission of the plaintiff's predecessor and of the plaintiff after him to assert that right would not amount to acquiescence on the part of the plaintiff which would alter the status of the defendants from that of trespassers to that of tenants and the plaintiff was entitled to bring his suit within 12 years from the date of resumption by Government and settlement with the plaintiff's vendor. RAJ KRISHNA PURBA v. Whether upon resumption by Government chaukidari chakran lands are for all purposes covered from the zamindari or not they form part of the zamindari before resumption and a mortgage of the zamindari executed before the resumption would cover such lands upon transfer of the resumed chakran lands to the zamindar. There is an accession to the mortgaged property within the meaning of s 70 Transfer of Property Act. Semble. that the vendee was not estopped from claiming the chakran lands under a subsequent settlement thereof from the zamindar. By accepting a deed of conveyance in fee and going into possession a grantee is not estopped to deny the title or seizing of the grantor unless he claims under the deed. Rup Chand Ghose v. Sartes or Chandra 10 C W N 747 sc 1 L P 33 Calc 915 3 C L J 699, referred to. The doctrine of estoppel does not extend to mere descriptive matters or statements or recitals which are immaterial and not contractual or essential to the purposes of the instrument. To give a recital to that effect it must be shown that the object of the parties was to make the matter recited a fixed fact as the basis of their action. The statement in question in the present instrument did not create an estoppel as it was essentially a collateral statement not concerning the direct purpose of the deed. When in pursuance of an agreement for a lease the intended lessee has taken possession though the requisite documents had not been executed the position is the same as if the document had been executed. Provided specific performance can be obtained between the same parties in the same Court and at the same time as the subsequent legal question falls to be determined. Where a putnidar took possession of resumed chakran lands on the footing that they were included within the putni and he was entitled to hold them upon payment of such rent as might be assessed and there were negotiations between him and the zamindar regarding the chakran lands, and the putnidar settled the lands with the defendants who bona fide accepted a raiyati lease from him. Held that the plaintiff who purchased the putni and then took settlement of the chakran lands from the zamindar with full knowledge that the defendants were in occupation as cultivating tenants was not entitled to rent and treat the defendants as trespassers. Enad Lal Pakrashi v. 8 ——— Zamindar's title under s 50. The suits which gave rise to this appeal were brought to recover khaj possession from the appellant the registered proprietor of extensive zamindaris in the Birbhum District of Bengal of chaukidari chakran lands resumed by Government and transferred to him under the provisions of the Village Chaukidari Act (Beng Act VI of 1870). The plaintiff in each suit (respondents) was the putnidar or dar putnidar of the village within the boundaries of which the land in each suit was situated. It was objected that the appellant had no such interest in the chaukidari chakran lands as could be conveyed in a putni lease. Held (on a consideration of the nature of chaukidari chakran land the provisions of the Bengal Permanent Settlement of 1793 the Regulations of that time so far as they deal with chakran lands and the true meaning and effect of Bengal Act VI of 1870) that the zamindar obtained or retained in the chaukidari chakran lands situated within the territorial boundaries of a village comprised in his zamindari an interest capable of being made the subject of a putni lease. The settlement of 1793 recognizes and proceeds on the footing that the zamindars are the actual proprietors of the land for which they undertake to pay the Government

revenue and it is clear that since the settlement they have had a prima facie title to all lands for which they pay revenue such lands being commonly referred to as malguzari lands. see 1st Mad Sein v. Doorga Persaud Tewari 15 Mo 1 A 599 On the Regulations of the Permanent Settlement the leading authority is Joyks in Moolerjee v. Collector of East Burdwan 10 Mo 1 A 16 in which Lord King down said that the effect of the settlement was to divide chakaran lands into two classes i.e. thanadari chakaran lands that is land held on service tenure by police officials and all other chakaran lands. The former class were by Bengal Regulation I of 1843 s. 8 cl. 4 made resumable by Government. The Government relieving the zamindars from the duty of maintaining a police establishment. The latter lands were in fact shortly afterwards resumed and became Government land, the title of the zamindars being extinguished by such resumption. As to all other chakaran land whether held by public officers or private servants in lieu of wages they are dealt with by Regulation VIII of 1843 s. 41. From ss. 37 to 41 inclusive it appears that whatever may be the case with regard to the private lands of the zamindars or with regard to chakaran lands the services for which were pure & personal to the zamindar it was clear that thanadari and chaulidari chakaran lands the services for which involved the performance of duties in which the public was interested had not as a rule been taken into account for the purpose of increasing the revenue. The effect of a resumption by the Government of chaulidari chakaran lands under the provisions of Bengal Act VI of 1870 is that after the assessment is complete the Collector is under s. 60 by order in the scheduled form to transfer to the zamindar subject to such assessment and by s. 61 such order operates to transfer the land to the zamindar subject to all contracts thereby made in respect of under and by virtue of which any person other than the zamindar may have any right to any land portion of his estate or tenure in the place in which such land may be situate. Those words are wide enough to include and in their Lordships' opinion do include the rights of a putnidar under a putni grant by virtue of which the putnidar is lessee of the zamindars' interest in the lands resumed and also the rights of a dar putnidar under a dar putni grant. Not only therefore does the Act recognize the existing title of the zamindar to the lands resumed but the estate taken by the zamindar under the order of transfer is in confirmation and by way of continuance of his existing estate and when the zamindar or those through whom he claims has or have entered into contracts affecting his existing estate the rights of third parties under those contracts are preserved. *RANJIT SINGH BARADUR v. 10 — Resumption — Putni lease—Transfer to landlord—Suit for recovery of possession with mesne profits—Village Chaukidari Act (Beng VI of 1870) s. 61 Where A obtained a putni of two villages from Z paid a bonus and the annual rent was fixed in perpetuity and where within the lands comprised in the putni were some chaulidari chakaran lands which were subsequently resumed by Government and transferred to Z who settled the same with tenants and where A the putnidar instituted a suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession with mesne profits. Held that on equitable grounds the putnidar and the zamindar must be placed in the position they would have occupied if the chaulidari chakaran lands had been resumed before the putni was created. The assets of the lands would then have been taken into account in settling the amount of putni rent which would have represented the assessment due to the State as also a fair share of the profits. Held also that mesne profits were to be calculated on the basis of the rent payable by the tenants to the zamindar and not on that of the actual value of the land produce. *RANJIT SINGH v. Held that the plaintiff could not contend that the defendants who were brought on the land by his grantor were trespassers and the plaintiff's suit in ejectment must fail. *RANJIT SINGH BARADUR v. alternative for a decree declaring that the defendants were bound to pay rent and for assessment of adequate rent. The lands in suit were formerly chakaran lands which were resumed by Government and settled with plaintiff's vendor on 7th September 1898. The plaintiff obtained his title to the lands by purchase of his vendor's interest at an auction sale in execution of a decree in 1907 or 1908. The defendants who held the lands as chaukidari chakaran lands at the time of the resumption continued to hold them ever since without taking any settlement either from the plaintiff's vendor or the plaintiff. In 1902 the plaintiff's vendor sued the defendants in the Small Cause Court for compensation for use and occupation and obtained decrees against them. The plaintiff brought his suit on the 10th September 1909. Held that once the chakaran lands were resumed and settled with the plaintiff's predecessor the latter had the right to take khas possession of the lands and the mere omission of the plaintiff's predecessor and of the plaintiff after him to assert that right would not amount to acquiescence on the part of the plaintiff which would alter the status of the defendants from that of trespassers to that of tenants and the plaintiff was entitled to bring his suit within 12 years from the date of resumption by Government and settlement with the plaintiff's vendor. RAJ KRISHNA RUDRA : PHAISE DOME (1913) 19 C W N 478

6 ————— Mortgage of zamindari before resumption and transfer—Accession to mortgaged property upon transfer—Chakaran lands if become new estate. Whether upon resumption by Government chaukidari chakaran lands are for all purposes severed from the zamindari or not they form part of the zamindari before resumption and a mortgage of the zamindari executed before the resumption would cover such lands upon transfer of the resumed chakaran lands to the zamindar. There is an accession to the mortgaged property within the meaning of s 70 Transfer of Property Act. See Bhambhani Chaukidari chakaran lands upon resumption form a separate estate for one purpose only i.e. as being hypothecated for the chaukidari assessment. that the vendee was not estopped from claiming the chakaran lands under a subsequent settlement thereof from the zamindar. By accepting a deed of conveyance in fee and going into possession a grantee is not estopped to deny the title or seizing of the grantor unless he claims under the deed. Raj Chand Ghose v Sarfraz Chandra 10 C W N 747 s.c. 1 L R 33 Cal 915 3 C L J 622 referred to. The doctrine of estoppel does not extend to mere descriptive matters or statements or recitals which are immaterial and not contractual or essential to the purposes of the instrument. To give a recital to that effect it must be shown that the object of the parties was to make the matter recited a fixed fact as the basis of their action. The statement in question in the present instrument did not create an estoppel as it was essentially a collateral statement not concerning the direct purpose of the deed. When in pursuance of an agreement for a lease the intended lessee has taken possession though the requisite documents had not been executed the position is the same as if the document has been executed provided specific performance can be obtained between the same parties in the same Court and at the same time as the subsequent legal question falls to be determined. Where a putnidar took possession of resumed chakaran lands on the footing that they were included within the putni and he was entitled to hold them upon payment of such rent as might be assessed and there were negotiations between him and the zamindar regarding the chakaran lands and the putnidar settled the lands with the defendants who bona fide accepted a ryot's lease from him. Held that the plaintiff who purchased the putni and then took settlement of the chakaran lands from the zamindar with full knowledge that the defendants were in occupation as cultivating tenants was not entitled to rent and to treat the defendants as trespassers. Binal Lal Palrathi v Kalu Pramanik 1 L R 20 Cal 708 Upendra Narayan v Protap Chandra 8 C W N 320 Jonab Ali v Rukibuddin 9 C W N 571 s.c. 10 C L J 303 referred to. 8 ————— Zamindar's title under s 60. The suits which gave rise to this appeal were brought to recover khas possession from the appellant the registered proprietor of extensive zamindaris in the Burdham District of Bengal of chaukidari chakaran lands resumed by Government and transferred to him under the provisions of the Village Chaukidari Act (Beng Act VI of 1870). The plaintiff in each suit (respondents) was the putnidar or dar putnidar of the village within the boundaries of which the land in each suit was situated. It was objected that the appellant had no such interest in the chaukidari chakaran lands as could be conveyed in a putni lease. Held (on a consideration of the nature of chaukidari chakaran land the provisions of the Bengal Permanent Settlement of 1793 the Regulations of that time so far as they deal with chakaran lands and the true meaning and effect of Bengal Act VI of 1870) that the zamindar obtained or retained in the chaukidari chakaran lands situate within the territorial boundaries of a village comprised in his zamindari an interest capable of being made the subject of a putni lease. The settlement of 1793 recognizes and proceeds on the footing that the zamindars are the actual proprietors of the land for which they undertake to pay the Government.

revenue and it is clear that since the settlement they have had a prima facie title to all lands for which they pay revenue such lands being commonly referred to as malguzari lands. see Icklad Sen v Doorga Persaud Tewari 1 Mco 1 A 49. On the Regulations of the Permanent Settlement the leading authority is Joyks v Mookerjee v Collector of East Burdwan 10 Mco 1 A 16 in which Lord Kinnear said that the effect of the settlement was to divide chakaran lands into two classes viz. tharadari chakaran land that is land held on service tenure by police officials and all other chakaran lands. The former class were by Bengal Regulation I of 1793 s 8 cl 4 made resumable by Government the Government relieving the zamindars from the duty of maintaining a police establishment. These lands were in fact shortly afterwards resumed and became Government land the title of the zamindars being extinguished by such resumption. As to all other chakaran lands whether held by public officers or private servants in lieu of wage they are dealt with by Regulation VIII of 1793 s 41. From s 37 to 41 inclusive it appears that whatever may be the case with regard to the private lands of the zamindars or with regard to chakaran lands the services for which were purely personal to the zamindar it was clear that tharadari and chaukidari chakaran land the services for which involved the performance of duties in which the public was interested had not as a rule been taken into account for the purpose of increasing the revenue. The effect of a resumption by the Government of chaukidari chakaran lands under the provisions of Bengal Act VI of 1810 is that after the assessment is complete the Collector is under s 20 by order in the scheduled form to transfer to the zamindar subject to such assessment and by s 51 such order operates to transfer the land to the zamindar subject to all contracts thereby made in respect of under and by virtue of which any person other than the zamindar may have any right to any land portion of his estate or tenure in the place in which such land may be situated. Those words are wide enough to include and in their Lordships' opinion do include the rights of a putnidar under a putni grant by virtue of which the putnidar is the co-owner of the zamindar's interest in the lands resumed and also the rights of a dar putnidar under a dar putni grant. Not only therefore does the Act recognize the existing title of the zamindar to the lands resumed but the estate taken by the zamindar under the order of transfer is in confirmation and by way of continuance of his existing estate and when the zamindar or those through whom he claims has or have entered into contract affecting his existing estate the rights of third parties under those contracts are preserved. RANJIT SINGH BAHADUR v KALI DAS DEBI (1917) 1 L R 44 Cal 841

13 Limitation—Act 1877 Sec II
Arts 113 and 144—Suit by putnidar to recover rights in and to obtain a settlement of chaulkidari chakaran lands on resumption by Government and transfer of them to amindar—Suit for possession or for specific performance—Whether rights were contractual—Transactions creating real right—Village Chaulkidari Act (Beng VI of 1870)
s 51 In suits brought by the respondent claiming to recover and obtain as settlement of certain chaulkidari chakaran lands in villages of which the appellant was the zamindar it was contended that the suits were barred by limitation and that question depended on whether they were suits for specific performance and governed by Art 113 (three years) or for possession and governed by Art 144 (twelve years) of the limitation Act.
 There was no doubt that under the ruling of the Board in Ranjit Singh v. Kali Dan Debi 1 L R 41 Calc 841 L R 41 I A 117 the putnidar had on resumption of the lands by the Government and transfer of them to the appellant such rights in the land as he claimed. Held that it did not follow that because such rights originally arose by virtue of a grant declared to be a contract within the meaning of s 51 of Bengal Act VI of 1870 they are therefore rights contractual in the sense that the contract by its terms creates or regulates the personal obligations and duties of the grantor in the circumstances that had arisen which were not contemplated and necessarily not referred to at the time the grants were made. On the resumption of the lands by the Government the rights of the putnidar were those conferred on him by the estate and interest created by the putni leases and it was these rights which were kept alive by s 51 of Bengal Act VI of 1870. The suits were not suits for specific performance of a contract nor was the application of Art 113 of the Limitation Act in any way suitable to them, no date having been fixed for performance nor any notice given of refusal to perform a contract for there was no unexecuted contract to be performed. A suit for specific performance is essentially a suit for enforcing a stipulation relating to property. The word contract itself primarily means a transaction which creates personal obligations but it may though less exactly refer to transactions which create real rights. It is in this latter sense that the word was used in s 51 and the rights thereby reserved to the putnidars comprehensively in the word contracts are real rights the enforcement of which is secured not by a suit for specific performance but by a suit for possession and this is the character of the present suits. The period of limitation applicable therefore is twelve years prescribed by Art 144 of the Limitation Act and the suits were not barred.

brought against them in an ordinary suit in which they could have set up a full defence but had failed to do so. In the latter case those who pay lose their right to assist however good be can e having had the full opportunity of doing so which the law allows them once for all they have not availed themselves of the opportunity so given. But s 14 of the Regulation expressly recognises the right to bring a separate suit in an ordinary Court in which the question of title can be raised notwithstanding the proceedings before the Collector taken by the zamindar under s 8 which are of an administrative rather than a properly judicial character. The rule therefore which prevents a person from recovering back money which he has paid on a claim in legal proceedings to which he might have set up a defence but has failed to do so was held to have no application in the present case in which the patnidar sued the zamindar to recover back money paid to the latter as arrears of rent wrongly alleged to be due without setting up any defence as he might have done. PAJA OF PACHETE v. If a Deputy Collector whilst exercising the power of the Deputy Commissioner delegated to him fails to exercise a jurisdiction which he might have exercised or usurps a jurisdiction which it is not within his competence to exercise then the Deputy Commissioner has power to order him either to exercise that jurisdiction or to refrain from exercising it as the case may be. The same rule applies in the case of the Commissioner and the Board of Revenue dealing with acts performed by the Deputy Commissioner. Where on an application to the Deputy Collector by the landlord for execution of a rent decree which he had obtained against the tenant other persons objected to the execution under s 211 on the ground that they were transferees from the tenant and produced (1) evidence to show that they had paid for rent by the landlord and (2) a money order receipt for payment of registration fees held (1) that the Deputy Commissioner had power to revise the decision of the Deputy Collector upholding the objection (2) that the decision of the Deputy Collector upholding the objection amounted to a finding that the circumstances of the case showed that as there had been recognition by the landlord of the tenancy of the objectors there was sufficient reason for not having it reversed within the meaning of the proviso to s 211 and (3) that as there was no failure on the part of the Deputy Collector to exercise jurisdiction nor any attempt to usurp jurisdiction the Deputy Commissioner was right in refusing to interfere in revision. Tikait Ganeswar Narayan Sahi Dec v Chandroo Mishra

The tenures resumed as chowkidari chakran were found to have been mostly recent creations so that they could not have been assumed by Government for the maintenance of village watchmen at the date of the sanad or in 1893. Held that the Chowkidari Act did not apply to such lands and the resumption and transfer thereof under the Act were without jurisdiction. That Art 14 of Sch II of the Limitation Act did not apply to the plaintiff's suit questioning the validity of such resumption and transfer. The words otherwise than under a temporary settlement in the definition of chowkidari chakran lands s 1 of the Chowkidari Act refer to a settlement by Government and the party who in that section is pointed to as assigning the land is also Government such assignment taking place at the date of the settlement. Per WOODROFFE J Assuming that the grant of the sanad in 1803 was equivalent to a settlement by Government as such settlement did not assign and did not exclude from assessment the chowkidari chakran land then existing in the plaintiff's zemindari such lands if any would not come under the operation of Beng Act VI of 1870. HARI CHANDAN MAHAPATRA v THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA (1910)

—Consent decree in previous suit—Decree not enter parties—Constructive possession of owner of submerged lands during litigation—Inverse possession—Limitation The plaintiffs sued for declaration of their title to certain Chur lands which they alleged were partly reformations on the site of and partly accretions to three mauzas. The Churs were measured in the course of Thak proceedings in the year 1899 and were subsequently measured by way of survey during the following year. The plaintiffs based their title to the disputed land on the Thak map of 1899 the Survey map of 1899 and a consent decree passed in 1879 in a suit instituted by the predecessors in interest of the plaintiffs against persons represented by the defendants in consequence of a dispute about the possession of some of the lands of these Churs. Held on the evidence that the consent decree was as binding on the parties as a decree after a contentious trial but it cannot have greater validity than the compromise itself. Held on the evidence that the proceedings in the suit of 1879 were not bona fide that the compromise was entered into without authority from the defendants and that it was not established that the defendants even though approved of the compromise had acquiesced in it. That the rights of property as between two parties cannot be affected by a map drawn for a different purpose—a purpose not relevant to the subject of the dispute between them. That the location of the boundary in the map prepared in the suit of 1879 could not be treated as conclusive between the parties for the purposes of the present controversy inasmuch as it was not necessary for the disposal of that suit and was outside its scope. *Ayer v. That as the rightful owners must be deemed in law to have been in possession of the submerged lands during the period of litigation for the purpose of deciding the question of limitation the only point for investigation was the period of time when the lands reappeared and became fit for occupation and as the possession of the defendants after reformation of the disputed lands did not extend over the statutory period the claim of the plaintiffs was not barred by limitation in respect of lands which lay within the Thak boundaries of their Chur. The question whether chur lands formed since the Permanent Settlement in beds of rivers belonging to a permanently settled zemindari are assessable as land added to the estate within the meaning of s 6 of the Act IX of 1847, has to be determined by reference to the pre-existing law and particularly to Reg II of 1819. The effect of Reg II of 1819 is to declare that churs formed since the Decennial Settlement upon land which at the time of the Settlement had been river bed are to be treated as unsettled and thus express provision cannot be excluded by showing that the river bed from which the churs have been thrown up was at the date of settlement the property of the zemindar and that the settlement was imposed upon the zemindari as a whole. When it is found that for a period of more than sixty years before the defendants (parishioners) secession, the Roman Catholic form of worship prevailed in their parish church the onus is undoubtedly on the defendants to establish by satisfactory evidence that the church was Syro Chaldean at the inception. properties appertaining to the trust from another trustee by erecting him though he may be entitled to maintain a suit in ejectment against a stranger on behalf of the trust. Even if the defendants or some of them were once entitled to be trustees along with the Vicar. Held that they by their secession from the Catholic Church and by their repudiation of the trusts of the institution which in law works a forfeiture of their office disentitled themelves to hold the office of trustee and that they had in law no answer to a suit for their removal. Marian Pillai v Bishop of Malabar 11 P 17. Mad 447 followed. Even if they offered to return to their allegiance to the Roman Church it would not be possible to accept their reversion to the extent of holding them to be fit to hold the responsible office of trustee. Even if the plaintiff had not asked for the removal of the defendant an amendment to that effect can be allowed in order to avoid future litigation and in the interests of the trust. A plaintiff may be allowed to sue certain defendants under s 30 Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1859) as representing certain others in spite of the objection or refusal of the defendants on record to represent the others; the consent of the defendants on record not being necessary. In re Andrews v Solomon (1888) 13 A 102 followed. The Bishop and other church authorities have the exclusive right to the internal management of the church whether relating to secular or religious matters such as accommodating the congregation inside the church and prescribing the part to be taken by the congregation in the services and the ceremonies. Even if they offered to return to their allegiance to the Pombal Church it would not be possible to accept their recantation to the extent of holding them to be fit to hold the responsible office of trustee. Even if the plaintiff had not a led for the removal of the defendant an amendment to that effect can be allowed in order to avoid future litigation and in the interests of the trust. A plaintiff may be allowed to sue certain defendants under s 30 Civil Procedure Code (Act XV of 1882) as representing certain others in spite of the objection or refusal of the defendants on record to represent the others the consent of the defendants on record not being necessary. In re Andrews v Salmon (1888) W A 109 followed. Poman Catholic Church —Convert to Poman Catholic religion—Claim for certain exclusive rights in the church by one set of converts over another on the ground of superiority of caste unsustainability of—Internal management of church absolute right of church authorities over. According to Canon Law a Poman Catholic church becomes as soon as it is consecrated the property of the church authorities irrespective of the fact that any particular worshipper or worshippers contributed to its construction. The Bishop and other church authorities have the exclusive right to the internal management of the church whether relating to secular or religious matters such as accommodating the congregation inside the church and prescribing the part to be taken by the congregation in the services and the ceremonies. The Canon Law knows no distinction of castes amongst the Poman Catholics and no convert to Roman Catholicism can claim any special or exclusive rights or privileges in the church on account of any supposed superiority of his caste over that of others. Where a certain section of Roman Catholics converts of a place claimed as against the local church authorities and as against another set of converts whom they considered to be of inferior caste an exclusive right to sit in and worship from a particular portion of the church during time of the service and to take part in certain duties connected with the church service. Held that such a claim was legally unsustainable however long such privileges might have been enjoyed whether by reason of any such custom or by reason of any agreement to that effect with any former Bishop of the locality. Long v The Bishop of Cape Town 1 Moo P & C (N S) 411 and Merriman v Williams 1 L R 7 A C 484 distinguished. MICHAEL PHILLIPS v THE REV BATTLE (1916) 1 L R 9 Mad 106

A comparison of s 246 of Act VIII of 1859 with s 278 to 282 of Acts X of 1859 and XIV of 1852 clearly lead to the conclusion that under s 246 of Act VIII of 1859 the Court could only make an order releasing the property from attachment or disallow the claim which must be one objecting to the sale of the property in execution. Kanaban v Varanabot Ganapathi (1911) L L R 35 Mad. 168

Under the old Civil Procedure Code of 1859, an attachment once made did not necessarily fall with the dismissal of the application for execution. Also if a judgment debtor died before the sale but after attachment the sale was not necessarily invalid merely because the legal representative of the judgment debtor had not been brought on the record. The omission was regarded at most as an irregularity which might lay the sale open to attack under the provisions of s 311 of the Code. Where in a proceeding to set aside an execution sale the applicants set up the case that the person whose property purported to have been sold and whose legal representatives they were had died before the decree and did not put forward the case upon which they later on sued to set aside the sale viz.

decret—Lands—Tenants in common—paying land revenue jointly to Government—Lands do not thereby become impartible—Compromise—M's sanction of Court. A suit for the partition of a village was dismissed on the plea that the village was impartible first because the arrangement with Government had all along been that the tenants in common should be jointly responsible to Government for the land revenue and secondly because in a previous suit between the parties it was held that the lands in the village were not divisible only the profits thereof were. The previous suit was decided in terms of a compromise. A minor was a party to it.
The guardian of the minor had applied to the Court stating that he had no objection to keep all the lands joint provided the minor got his share of the profits and the Court had made the endorsement that the application had been allowed and filed in the suit. Held overruling the plea that the arrangement settling the relations between Government and the tenants in common could not be regarded as a termination of the relations between the tenants inter se. Held further that the decision in the previous suit was passed in the terms of a compromise. Int there was no issue raised and no adjudication on the issue whether the village was impartible. Held also that this Court's sanction had not been obtained under s 462 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) to the compromise to which a minor was a party. The mere fact that the parties settled among themselves by compromise that the lands should not be divided but that they should enjoy the profits could not in law impart the character of impartibility to the estate. Impartibility must arise out of some special tenure or by some general family or local custom. Parties cannot make an estate impartible which is partible. It is opposed to public policy. Inayat Ali Khan Joshi v. Raja

A plaint was filed one day before the last day of limitation on an insufficiently stamped paper and the Court allowed a week's time to put in the balance of court fee. The court fee was put in one day later than the time allowed and later on a petition was put in praying for extension of time and the plaint was registered. Held that this amounted to an extension of the time which the Court was quite competent to grant. Held further that in the circumstances the plaintiff would have the benefit of s 28 of the Court Fees Act and the suit was not barred. AMIR HOSSAIN KHAN v BABU NANAK CHAND (1910)

A simple money decree was passed against one Raja Suchit Prasad Singh. He died leaving a widow and two nephews. Application for execution was made against the two nephews but was dismissed upon the ground that the property sought to be taken in execution was ancestral. A second application for execution was made against other property alleged to be self acquired and this time against the widow as well as the nephews. Held that the nephews were not legal representatives of the deceased judgment debtor and this being so an application for execution against them could not be held to keep the decree alive as against the widow with respect to whom it was otherwise barred by limitation. Perappa Chittar v Ramaswami Aiyar I L R 27 Mad 106 referred to. Ramanuj Sewal Singh v Hingu Lal I L R 9 All 517. Gopal v Har Prasad All Weekly Notes (1892) 241 and Hari v Narayan I L R 12 Bom 427 distinguished. Gyanendra Nath Basu v Pavi Nihal Bibi (1910)

Limitation Act (XV of 1877) Arts 142 and 144—Suit to recover possession—Dispossession—Discontinuance of possession—Possession as an agent of minors—Decree by the minors on attaining majority against the agent for possession of the property—Decree not executed and barred by limitation—Agent wrongfully dispossessed by a third person—Money decree against the original owners—Decree holder seeking to attach property—Adverse possession. Y died in 1879 leaving behind him two minor sons R and D and a mistress A. The latter looked after the minors and managed their property. When they arrived at the age of majority they found that A claimed the property in her own right. In 1891 R and D sued A for the possession of the lands and obtained a decree on the 30th of August 1892 which was confirmed on appeal on the 15th of June 1894. This decree was sought to be executed on the 26th June 1897 but the application was dismissed as barred by limitation. A was then wrongfully deprived of the possession of the property by Y who sold it to B in 1903. B mortgaged the property to E in 1900. In the same year the plaintiff obtained a money decree against P and D and in execution of it he had an attachment placed on the property but the attachment was removed in 1904 at the instance of B and E. In 1900 the plaintiff brought a suit for a declaration that the property was liable to be attached and sold in execution of his decree against R and D. The defendants B and E contended that the suit was barred under Art 142 of the Limitation Act 1877 inasmuch as neither the plaintiff nor his predecessors in title R and D were in possession of the property within twelve years preceding the suit. Held that the suit having been brought by the plaintiff under s 243 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 to establish his right to attach and sell the property in dispute as that of his judgment debtors R and D in execution of his money decree, all that he had to prove was that on the date of attachment the judgment-debtors had a subsisting right to the property and that the suit must

As the sale had already taken place and the appeal thus made unfructuous the Court dismissed the appeal with these observations. LACHMAN PERSHAD SINGH v GANGA PERSHAD SINGH (1910)

A suit by a party to a suit as his representative against an auction purchaser raising questions which as between the parties must be decided in execution under s 244 of the Code is not sustainable. The prohibition is not based on the ground that the auction purchaser is the representative of the decree holder. The auction purchaser is not such representative. Manicka Odayan v Pajapopala Pillai I L R 30 Mad 407 not approved. Per WALLIS J—

The prohibition is based on the general intention of the Legislature as gathered from the section. Per KRISHNASWAMI ARIAR J—A party to the execution proceedings can impeach a sale only by an application to set it aside and where the sale not impeached is confirmed the possession committed to auction purchaser cannot be disturbed by a suit. The true ground for the prohibition is not name of s 244 but the suit as the auction purchaser the decree holder but that for execution bar to setting aside the sale except application under s 244 between the parties the suit Civil Procedure Code is not maintainable until it is set aside. Haji v Durrani v Durrani v Durrani I L R 13 B N 291 A money decree is not the 237 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) is that before a decree holder or of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) can be impeached with the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) that the decree claim has been set aside. I L R 31 Mad. 417 If the officer certifies that a decree has been set aside there is an end of the matter to set aside decree not so certify the Court must wait that a 218 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) from the date of the receipt by the Court to set aside a decree for a certificate and upon receipt that they find that the claim has been duly set aside in accordance with the provisions of s 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882)

8 ——— Partition of Joint Family Property—Sale of a judgment debtor's share in joint Hindu family property in execution of decree—Decree holder being the purchaser—Subsequent suit by latter for partition—Whether competent. One G R obtained a money decree against one L. He applied for attachment and sale of L's share in certain property which belonged to a joint Hindu family of which L was a member. This share was ascertained to be one sixth of the property and was sold and purchased by G R himself. The sale was duly confirmed and the sale certificate issued. G R then applied for possession by partition of the share the other members of the family objected and the executing Court on 22nd November 1907 ordered that G R should sue for partition in a separate suit as partition could not be effected in execution proceedings. In 1913 the son of G R brought the present suit for partition. The lower Courts held that a separate suit was barred by s 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1908. Held that a 244 of the old Code of Civil Procedure which was applicable did not give the executing Court power to effect a partition and that the present suit was therefore necessary and competent. Yelmualai Chetti v Srinivas Chetti I L R 29 Mad 294 and Bhagwati v Banwari Lal I L R 31 All 82 F B followed. Bhagga Shah v Bura Shah 55 P R 1883 distinguished. Sheo Narain v Dur Muhammad I L R 30 All 72 not followed being overruled by Bhagwati v Banwari Lal I L R 31 All 82 F B and LAL v DUEGA I L R 1 Lah 164

M having died during the pendency of the suit his widow P and his brother A were brought by C on the record as his representatives. A decree was passed awarding the claim out of the property of the deceased. After the passing of the decree but before it could be executed both P and A died. C then brought on the record the defendants as the legal representatives of M. The latter denied that they were M's legal representatives or that they had any property of M's which could be liable for the decree. The Court overruled the objection and in execution of the decree attached and sold the property in dispute. The plaintiff purchased the property at the sale and filed this suit to recover possession thereof from the defendants. The lower Court disallowed the plaintiff's claim on the ground that the property having been joint property of M and defendants, survived to the latter at M's death and that the plaintiff obtained no title at the Court sale which he could legally assert as against the defendants. In the lower appellate Court the plaintiff contended unsuccessfully that the defendants were debarred by the provisions of s 218 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1882 from asserting their title. Held and the defendants as judgment-debtors under s. 242 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882. It was, therefore, a question in relation to them falling with in s. 244 of the Code by reason of the explanation to s. 647 that applications for the execution of the decree were proceedings in suits. The defendants were consequently bound to object to the attachment and sale under that section, so far as the decree holder's action was concerned. It was contended that whatever might have been the result if the decree holder had been a party to the suit the present dispute was between the auction purchaser who was a stranger to the previous suit and the execution proceedings therein, and the defendants, and that s. 244 did not apply. Held that though an auction purchaser at a Court sale in execution of a decree was not a party to the suit in which the decree was passed and though he was not a representative of either the decree holder or the judgment-debtor for the purposes of s. 244 yet if the question raised by the judgment-debtor as to the legality of the Court sale was virtually one between the parties to the suit that is between the decree holder and the judgment debtor and if in the decision and result of that question the auction purchaser was interested the judgment-debtor ought not to be allowed to attack the sale in a suit. The test in all such cases is whether the ground upon which the Court-sale is attacked as conferring no title upon the auction purchaser affects the parties to the suit and could have as between them been raised and determined under s. 244 and whether the auction purchaser though not a party to that suit is a party interested in the result. *GOVINDA BHASKAR v. Decree—Satisfaction—

Decree not carrying interest—Mortgage passed in satisfaction of decretal debt made payable in instalments—Interest payable on failure to pay instalments—Covenant for interest can be severed from the covenant as to repayment of principal—Agreement not void so far as concerned principal. The plaintiff obtained a decree against the defendant for Rs. 800 without interest but with costs which amounted to Rs. 89 12 0. In satisfaction of the decretal debt and in consideration of a cash advance of Rs. 10 4 0 the defendant passed a mortgage deed for Rs. 900 in favour of the plaintiff. The amount of Rs. 900 was repayable in nine annual instalments of Rs. 100 each. On failure to pay any one instalment interest was to be charged at the rate of 1½ per cent per mensem and the whole amount became payable on failure to pay any two instalments. None of the instalments having been paid the plaintiff sued to recover Rs. 900 principal and Rs. 900 as interest. The lower Courts held that the mortgage deed contravened the provisions of a 257A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) but they passed a decree for Rs. 900 in plaintiff's favour as the covenant to pay interest was quite distinct and severable from the covenant to pay principal. The defendant having appealed. Held confirming the decree that the primary and main agreement was to pay a sum of money which was not in excess of the decretal amount and that it was only on failure to fulfil that agreement that interest was to be charged that is it was only something which came into operation when there was a breach of the agreement and that the primary agreement was therefore not void under s 257A of the Civil Procedure Code 1882. Bhagchand v Padhalisan I L R 23 Bom 62 followed. CHARTU v KONDARI VITHAL (1913)

the adjutant not having been certified to the Court, it could not be assumed that as valid but was liable to execution by the decree. The Subordinate Judge overruled the contention holding that as the decree had been made after the adjutant received for a real estate matters under it he was entitled to be certified under s. 115 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. Held that the view of the Subordinate Judge gave the go-by to the plain language of the law. Paragraph of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code 1932. There is no room left by the law for the operation of the law of estoppel in the matter of execution. The last paragraph of s. 258 enacts a special law for a special purpose whereas s. 115 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, relates to the general law of estoppel and the principle is that a special law overrides for its purposes the general law. Per CHANDAPARKAR, J.—Fraudulent executions of decrees must be discouraged by the Courts whenever they come to their notice and decree holders who enter freely into judgments outside the Court and do not certify them as required by law but fraudulently apply for execution ignoring the adjutant should be dealt with under the criminal law. Per HAZARU J.—The purpose of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code 1932 is that the Court shall have complete knowledge of all that is done towards the satisfaction of its decrees. *TRIMBAK RAMKISHORE v. After the attachment in 1896 B assigned the whole of his right title and interest to the first defendant. In 1897 the plaintiffs sued B and obtained a decree. In 1900 B took the benefit of the Insolvent Act and his insolvency with a small break not material in this suit lasted up to the date of the present suit. In 1901 the plaintiffs levied an attachment on the right title and interest of P in the property already subject to the attachment by B. In 1907 A was paid off and the attachment by him was accordingly withdrawn and thereafter in 1910 on the application of the first defendant to the Judge in Chambers the attachment by the plaintiffs was raised by an order dated the 10th of April 1910. On the plaintiffs moving for a declaration that the interest of B in the said property at the date of the several attachments was liable to be attached and sold in execution of the plaintiffs' decree, that the order of the 10th of April 1910 should be set aside that the said interest of B should be sold in execution of the plaintiffs' decree and the proceeds of the sale applied according to law. Held that the essential condition of enforcement of claims under ss. 276 295 320 325A—Execution of decree—Attachment of property—Transfer of property on proceedings to Collector—Property retained under another decree between same parties—Second execution proceedings transferred to Collector—Claim under the first decree satisfied by compromise—Collector asked to return the darhkast as disposed—Judgment-debtor alienating the property—Claim or rateable distribution under another decree—Claims enforceable under the attachment—Bills of sale Act 1878 s 8—Practice and procedure. In execution of a money decree which the plaintiff obtained against B certain property was attached and ordered to be sold. The execution proceedings were thereafter transferred to the Collector under s 320 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882. In the meanwhile the plaintiff obtained another money decree against B in execution of which the property was again attached. These execution proceedings were also transferred to the Collector. While the Collector was taking steps for the execution of the first decree the plaintiff informed the Amildar who was carrying on the execution work on behalf of the Collector that his claim under the first decree was satisfied by B and that the darhkast should be returned to the Court as disposed of. The Collector did so. Ten days after this B sold the property to the defendant who out of the consideration money satisfied the plaintiff's first decree and other debts of B. The plaintiff obtained a third money decree against B in execution of which the property was sold through the Civil Court and purchased by the plaintiff himself at the Court sale. He then sued to recover possession of the property from the defendant. In support of the plaintiff's claim it was contended (i) that the deed of sale relied on by the defendant was invalid having regard to the provisions of s 325A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) (ii) that the Collector was not warranted in acting upon the plaintiff's admission that the decree had been satisfied because the satisfaction was one made out of Court and not having been certified to the Court it could not be recognized as a payment of the decree under s 276 of the Code and (iii) that the sale to the defendant was illegal and void under s 276 because the property was on the date of the sale under attachment in the plaintiff's darhkast ultimately disposed of by the Collector on the strength of the plaintiff's application that it should be returned to the Court as disposed of in consequence of the decree. Held (i) that the sale to defendant was not void under the provision of s 325A inasmuch as ss 322 to 325 presupposed

a decree which had to be satisfied and which was therefore capable of execution. That could not be said of a decree which its holder by his declaration to the Collector acknowledged to have been satisfied. (ii) That the intimation to the Collector who was in charge of the execution amounted to a due certifying of the adjustment of the decree, which satisfied the conditions of s 276. Muhammad Said Khan v Payag Sahu I L R 16 All. 8 followed. (iii) That a s 276 did not apply for though the attachment had existed at the date of the sale to the defendant and was never formally raised the darhkast claim having been satisfied was no longer enforceable under it. Held further that the second attachment itself was illegal under the provisions of the last portion of the first paragraph of s 325A and it could not affect the private sale to the defendant by B. Held also that the sale to the defendant was not illegal and void under s 276 of the Code by reason of the second darhkast. The moment the attachment of the plaintiff came to an end by reason of the satisfaction of his first decree sent to the Collector for execution all claims enforceable under the attachment ceased to be enforceable under it. A claim under another decree cognizable under s 295 ceased to be operative for the purposes of ss 276 and 295 the same being dependent upon the continuance of the said attachment. Sorabji E Warden v Coriaji Pampji I L R 16 Bom 91 distinguished. Umesh Chander Poy v Raj Bulbuh Sen I L R 8 Cal 29. Gobind Singh v Zahim Singh I L R 6 All 33 and Kunhi Moosa v Makki I L R 23 Mad 478 followed. When a decree holder intimates to the Collector that his decree has been satisfied and that the necessity for its execution by the Collector has ceased to exist the Collector's powers under ss 322 to 325 also cease because the very foundation of them consisting in the fact of a decree which is alive and capable of execution has disappeared. The provisions of s 276 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) make the private alienation void not absolutely but only as against all claims enforceable under the attachment referred to in it. Where the execution proceedings, in the course and for the purpose of which the attachment was made have come to an end on account of satisfaction of the decree by the judgment debtor and in consequence the decree is no longer alive the attachment also ceases and there is no longer any claim enforceable under the attachment to make the private alienation effected by the judgment debtor under the attachment void. The person for whose protection s 276 was primarily intended has had his claim in that event satisfied otherwise than by the attachment. As to any claim under another decree cognizable under s 295 that had been dependent on the continuance of the said attachment when that attachment was swept away all other claims cognizable under it ceased to be operative for the purposes of ss 276 and 295. The only bar in the way of the private alienation was removed as if it never existed in law and the question as to the private alienation made by the judgment-debtor to the defendant during the attachment became reduced to one between that judgment debtor and his alinee. KRUSHALCHAND v HANDRAM SAHEDRAM (1911)

One Shival brought a suit against Bai Samrat. The suit was dismissed and a decree for defendant's cost namely Rs. 60 2 10 was passed against the plaintiff. The defendant sold the decree to one Nathu who in execution attached Shival's house. A proclamation of sale was published and at the auction sale one Gangadas Dayabhai purchased the house for Rs. 13.50 and deposited one-fourth of the purchase money. The purchaser however made a default in the payment of the balance in time and the house was again put up to sale. A second proclamation of sale was issued but the description contained in this proclamation were discrepant and did not tally with those in the previous one. At the re-sale only Rs. 200 were realized. Subsequently Shival's widow Bai Suraj having applied to recover from the defaulting purchaser the loss on the re-sale. Held that the liability of the defaulting purchaser was the creature of a statute relating to procedure and that statute laid down in very clear terms that in the proclamation of sale the proclamation should specify as fairly and accurately as possible the property to be sold. The first proclamation did not state either fairly or accurately the property to be sold and it was sought to fix the liability upon the appellant by reason of the words of the statute. He was entitled to appeal to the words of a 257 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) to show that the statute had not been complied with and that it could not be said that there was a re-sale of the property which was put up in the first instance. *GANGADAS DAYABHAI v. This does not conflict in any way with the statutory definition of notice in s. 3 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) A purchaser of property is under no legal obligation to investigate his vendor's title But in dealing with real property as in other matters of business regard is had to the usual course of business and a purchaser who wilfully departs from it in order to avoid acquiring a knowledge of his vendor's title is not allowed to derive any advantage from his wilful ignorance of defects which would have come to his knowledge if he had transacted his business in the ordinary way This is what is meant by reasonable care in s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) Occupation of property which has not come to the knowledge of the party charged is not constructive notice of any interest in the property MAHJI KARNIDHAR v HOORNAI (1910)

The plaintiff was a creditor of the family of the defendants. The plaintiff's separated brother was also a creditor. The plaintiff's brother attached the family lands. The matter went in execution to the Collector who leased the lands to one Piraji. Subsequently the plaintiff and the defendants came to an understanding by which the plaintiff agreed to remit his mortgage debt and pay off his brother—the judgment creditor—and the defendants agreed to sell him one of the lands. The plaintiff then obtained possession of the family lands from which he was ejected by the defendants. Thereupon, the plaintiff having brought a suit to recover possession. Held allowing the claim that the interest which the sale-deed purported to transfer to the plaintiff was the interest which the defendants had in the lands at the time of the transfer and the Collector's powers having ceased by reason of the proceeding in attachment being closed the conveyance of the defendants' interest to the plaintiff took effect in his favour. Gangabai v. There is no doubt that the effect of s. 324A would be to invalidate such a sale as we now have to consider as against a lessee or transferee from the Collector exercising his powers under the Civil Procedure Code. *See Ganga Irashad v. But that does not dispose of the question whether after the Collector's powers have ceased by reason of the proceedings in attachment being closed the conveyance of the defendants' interests will not take effect in favour of the purchaser. The statutory provisions bearing upon the point are s. 43 of the Transfer of Property Act and s. 18 of the Specific Relief Act which provide that where a person contracts to sell certain property having only an imperfect title thereto the purchaser has the right if the vendor has subsequently to the sale acquired any interest in the property to compel him to make good the contract out of such interest. MAONIRAM VITHURAM v. In a suit by a mortgagee against the mortgagor to recover the money due on the mortgage defendant No. 2 who had purchased the equity of redemption from the mortgagor was made a party defendant. Ultimately the suit was compromised between the mortgagor and mortgagee and a decree passed in terms of the compromise. Neither to the compromise nor to the decree recording the compromise was defendant No. 2 a party. In execution of the decree the mortgaged property was sold at a Court-sale and purchased by the plaintiff. When the plaintiff attempted to recover possession of the property he was obstructed by defendant No. 2 who was in possession. On an application to remove the obstruction the Court made an order for the removal of the obstruction in February 1909. The plaintiff recovered possession of the property in March 1909 but was dispossessed in June 1908. The plaintiff filed a suit in 1913 to recover possession of the property from defendant No. 2. Held that the order for removal of obstruction was referable to s. 33, and not a 334 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 that it was binding on defendant No. 2, and that as defendant No. 2 took no steps to have the same set aside within one year of its date it had become final. BHUMJAI LANCHANDRA v. Decree in terms of compromise.—Execution of decree.—Person in possession of property a party to the suit but not a party to the decree.—Purchaser in execution of decree trying to recover possession.—Obstruction by the person in possession.—Order for removal of obstruction in execution proceedings.—Order not questioned by a suit.—Finality of the order. In a suit by a mortgagee against the mortgagor to recover the money due on the mortgage defendant No. 2 who had purchased the equity of redemption from the mortgagor was made a party defendant. Ultimately the suit was compromised between the mortgagor and mortgagee and a decree passed in terms of the compromise. Neither to the compromise nor to the decree recording the compromise was defendant No. 2 a party. In execution of the decree the mortgaged property was sold at a Court sale and purchased by the plaintiff. When the plaintiff attempted to recover possession of the property he was obstructed by defendant No. 2 who was in possession. On an application to remove the obstruction the Court made an order for the removal of the obstruction in February 1908. The plaintiff recovered possession of the property in March 1908 but was dispossessed in June 1908. The plaintiff filed a suit in 1913 to recover possession of the property from defendant No. 2. Held that the order for removal of obstruction was referable to s. 335 and not s. 334 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 that it was binding on defendant No. 2 and that as defendant No. 2 took no steps to have the same set aside within one year of its date it had become final. BIHARJI LANGHANDRA v. ss 366 371—Abatement of suit—Mortgage—Joint Hindu family—Redemption suit by the mortgagor in his personal right—Second suit to redeem by coparceners not barred by abatement One I a member of an undivided Hindu family instituted in the year 1881 a suit for redemption against the mortgagee but pending the suit he died on the 9th July 1893. On the 10th October 1893 the Court directed that the suit should abate. Subsequently in the year 1912 T V's son and three grand sons filed a second suit for redemption of the same property alleging that the property being ancestral they had interest in it by birth. It was also alleged that an adult brother of I was interested as a coparcener in the same property. The trial Court dismissed the suit on the strength of the order of abatement passed on the 10th October 1893. On appeal the District Court reversed the decree and remanded the suit for disposal. On appeal to the High Court. Held that there being no indication that I's suit was brought in a representative capacity it would certainly be defective as a redemption suit according to all canons of procedure and if the suit was defective I's personal right to sue did not embrace the rights of his coparceners and none of them would be concluded by the application of a 371 of Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held also that apart from the question raised upon a 371 there was sufficient authority for the conclusion that since the introduction of the Code of 1877 no legal proceedings by I short of actual redemption would deprive his coparceners of their right to redeem against the mortgagee. PER CUDAM. The right of a mortgagee to enforce his security by sale in a suit against the person who executes with authority express or implied, a mortgage of family property without joining the coparceners interested results from the authorized mortgage which carries with it the all embracing remedy. It does not follow that the defect of one co-owner who desires to redeem will bar the exercise of the same right by another. Where in a suit for partition by a member of a joint family the father was made third defendant and his son a minor was made fourth defendant and the Court appointed the father guardian ad litem of the minor. Held (reversing the decisions of the Courts in India) that the powers of the father were controlled by the provisions of s. 462 of the Code and he could not without leave of the Court do any act in his capacity of father or managing member of the joint family which he was debarred from doing as guardian ad litem. To hold otherwise would be to defeat the object of the enactment. A compromise made without the leave of the Court by the father with the second defendant of a decree passed against the latter was held therefore in a suit brought by a minor on attaining his majority to be not binding on him. The fact that the money was by the decree made payable not to the minor but to the father who was admittedly representing the family made no difference in the duty which lay on him to obtain the leave of the Court to an agreement which was clearly intended to affect the rights and interests of the minor. The decree made by their Lordships was to the effect that the compromise was not binding on the minor and he was remitted to his original rights under the decree in the partition suit. Manohar Lal v Jadunath Singh I L R 23 All 555 559 L P 31 A 198 131 followed Ganesh Row v Tuljaram Pow (1913) I L R 36 Mad 295

It is the legal effect of a decree of reversal that the party against whom the decree was given is to have restitution of all that he has been deprived of under it. A Court of Appeal does not necessarily enter into the question whether a decree it is about to reverse has been executed or not. HURRO CHINTER PATE CHOUDHRY v. SHOORODHONCE DILLI 24 P 40 DORAM LAYAR v. ANNAMAM APPAR I L R 23 Mad 306 and Collector of Meerut v. Kailas Prasad I L R 26 All 665 referred to. Kailas Singh v. Purnam I L R 22 Cal 431 distinguished. A mortgagor obtained a decree for redemption and in execution thereof recovered possession of the mortgaged property. On appeal however the High Court enhanced the sum payable by the plaintiff mortgagor and on his failure to pay the sum was dismissed. The mortgagee then applied to the Court of first instance asking to be restored to possession of the mortgaged property and also for mesne profits for the period during which he was out of possession. Held that the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction not only to make restitution by restoring possession but also to award mesne profits, although the decree of the High Court did not specifically provide for mesne profits. *PANNU DAYAL v. Second appeal—Questions of law and facts—Construction of document—Wajib ul arz—Land holder and tenant—Rights of Zamindars in respects of house sites and groves — In a suit for a declaration of the proprietary title of the appellants to certain lands in a village the first Court dismissed the suit on the ground that the respondent was the Zamindar and the appellants only tenants of the lands. The Subordinate Judge found on the construction of the Wajib ul arz of the village and other documentary evidence that the appellants were the owners of the lands in suit. On second appeal to the High Court it was contended that the Court was bound under s. 581 of the Civil Procedure Code 1882 to accept the finding of the Subordinate Judge as conclusive the question being one of fact but the High Court rejected that contention. Held (affirming that decision) that the Subordinate Judge's finding was arrived at by inferences drawn from a misconstruction of the Wajib ul arz. The right construction of documents was a question of law which the Court on second appeal was not precluded from considering under s. 584 and 585 of the Civil Procedure Code. On the true construction it was clear from the documentary evidence that the appellants were only tenants of the land and not proprietors. FATEH CHAND v. KESHAN KUNWAR (1912)

of 1859) to show that if a mere proprietary right the right construction of documents is a question of law which Judges in second appeal are not by ss. 551 and 552 of the Civil Procedure Code precluded from considering by any finding of a lower Appellate Court based upon such document. Where the Court of first appeal found on its construction of the wajib ul ar and other documentary evidence that the plaintiffs were the owners of the lands in suit and the High Court on second appeal on their construction of the wajib ul ar and other documents in the suit held that the plaintiffs were not the owners. Held that the Court of first appeal having misconstrued the wajib ul ar the High Court in second appeal was not bound to accept as correct its finding as set upon such misconstruction. The wajib ul ar is cogent evidence of the rights as they existed when it was made of the holder holding proprietary or other rights of property within the mouzah. The Government by applying the Chaukidari Act to the mouzah did not alter and could not have altered proprietary rights in the mouzah or any part thereof. *LAWIN CHAND v. When an application for review is granted and the case reheard in an appeal against the final decree the propriety of the order where by the review was granted can be challenged on the ground specified in s. 629 of the Code of Civil Procedure. When no such ground can be made out but the order is sought to be challenged on the ground that it was made without jurisdiction the proper course for the aggrieved party is to move the High Court in revision. When the application for review has been granted the Court is not restricted at the rehearing to a consideration of that question alone which has been argued upon the rule for review and found to have been erroneously decided. The whole case is reopened unless the Court directs under the latter part of s. 630 that the case is to be heard only upon special points. What was intended to be decided in *Dhurandhar Sen v.  representatives of a deceased member of a joint Hindu family—Court fees—Suits to enforce right to share in joint family property—Court Fees Act III of 1870 s 7 (IV) (b)—reference to arbitration by manager of joint Hindu family—Whether binding on members—Status of after born sons to call on his reference and the award arbitrator—Whether controlled in his decision by the parties' personal law. R. K. died and a dispute arose between his two sons A. K. and J. G. as to his property. They referred those disputes to arbitration by means of an award dated the 8th of August 1909. At the time J. G. was born but on the 26th of December 1909 a son J. H. was born to him. On the 9th of March 1910 the arbitrator gave his award and on the 20th of July 1910 upon an application made by K. K. to have the award filed in Court the parties agreed to a compromise by which they accepted the award with certain modifications in favour of J. G. Upon this a decree was passed. D. D. the second son of J. G. was born on the 4th of August 1913. The present suit was instituted by J. V. and D. D. the minor sons of J. G. on the 16th of June 1914 for a declaration to the effect that the entire arbitration proceeding were null and void and praying to be awarded joint possession of the property in dispute and they valued the relief sought at Rs. 2500. The property was valued for purposes of jurisdiction at a sum exceeding 8 lakhs and it was contended that the suit should be valued for purposes of Court fees at the actual value of the plaintiff's share. During the pendency of the appeal J. V. died. An application was then made under O XXII r 3 Civil Procedure Code praying that his brother D. D. and his mother V. P. D. should be brought on the record as his legal representatives. This application was accepted subject to all just exceptions. Held that there is no such thing as succession properly so called in an undivided Hindu family and the order in chambers making D. D. and V. P. D. the legal representatives of J. V. deceased must consequently be set aside. *Chumilal v P. V. The plaintiffs obtained a money decree against the defendants which awarded interest on the decretal amount up to its realisation. They applied to execute the decree and calculated interest over the decretal amount up to the date of the application. The Collector to whom the execution proceedings were transferred placed the defendants' estate under his management and when the decretal amount and interest as calculated in the plaintiffs' application were paid up he treated the decree as satisfied and returned the execution proceedings to the Court. The Court sent back the proceedings to the Collector asking him to continue in management till interest over the decretal amount from the date of the application to the date of realisation was paid to the plaintiffs. The District Court held on appeal that the Court had no jurisdiction to interfere with what lay completely within the Collector's jurisdiction and reversed the order. On second appeal Held restoring the order passed by the first Court that under the provisions of s. 7 (1) (b) of the third schedule of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908 the Collector had to take into account the whole amount with the total interest awarded by the decree and that that would include not merely interest up to the date of the application but also interest which would run according to the decree thereafter. Per CHANDAVARMA J.—The Civil Procedure Code (s. 69 and 70) of 1908 gives authority to the Collector for the purpose of enabling him to determine the best mode or modes of satisfying the decree whether it is to be satisfied by management by the Collector himself of the land attached in execution of the decree or whether it is to be by sale or letting. So far as the mere management is necessary for the satisfaction of the decree is concerned the Collector is the sole authority. The discretion is his and no Civil Court can interfere with that discretion. But that discretion does not extend to any jurisdiction in the Collector to determine whether the decree itself has been satisfied or not. The latter jurisdiction is the Civil Court's. It is that Court above which is competent to determine the question judicially—BHUCHAND HANSRAJ v. VERA CHANPA (1912) I L R 37 Bom 32

1 ———— Suit for declaration and injunction—Right to perform Panch Lala such as forenoon not being connected with any shrine or temple and being supported by purely voluntary contributions—Suit not maintainable—Jurisdiction The plaintiff a minor sued for a declaration that he had the right to perform certain religious pageants in Benares and to receive subscriptions in connection therewith and claimed an injunction to restrain the defendant from interfering with that right. It was found that these pageants had been performed for many years past by the plaintiff's father grandfather and great grandfather with the aid of voluntary subscriptions from the Hindu community. But the pageants were not connected with any particular temple shrine or sacred spot nor did the plaintiff or his ancestors hold any office by virtue of which they were under any obligation to perform such pageants. the meaning of s 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1908. The freedom of the subject entitles all Hindus to call in at any time any priest whom they may prefer to perform any ceremony and so long as that inherent freedom exists there can be in no one any legal character or any right to the office of performing ceremonies in private houses. Held further that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the money paid to the defendant unless he could prove that there was a contract between himself and the defendant whereby the defendant had bound himself to pay to the plaintiff all sums received from ceremonies performed within the plaintiff's bari. Mere proof of a custom that among the Brahmin priests of Patna there was an implied contract not to interfere with the rights of each other did not amount to proof of a contract by the defendant to pay to the plaintiff sums of money received for officiating at ceremonies within the plaintiff's bari. MIRA LAXMI v BACCHU PANDAY

The plaintiff alleged that he was one of the Jagadgurus of the Lingayats and as such he claimed the right of going in procession carried in a cross palanquin adorned with and accompanied by Panch Kala and Brudaval. One of the issues raised in the trial Court was: Is the right to parade in cross palanquin as described in the plaint a general right exercisable by any subject of His Majesty? On this issue it was contended in second appeal by the plaintiff that the lower Courts which dismissed his suit on the ground that it was not maintainable in a Civil Court should have dealt with the case as if the plaintiff was suing as a member of the public claiming as such to be entitled to be carried in a cross palanquin if he chose to adopt that method of procession. The plaintiff also asked that he should be allowed to amend his plaint accordingly. Held refusing the amendment (1) that the claim made as a member of the public was inconsistent with the plaintiff's original claim that he was entitled to be carried in procession as Jagadguru and (2) that on the pleadings the issue raised in the trial Court was irrelevant and ought not to have been admitted. Mahomed Dulek Khan v Hoosain Bibi (1888) L R 15 A 87 relied on. ANDAKISWAMI v TOTALASWAMI (1920) I L R 45 Bom 590

ss 9 and 52—Offerings made by devotees at a temple—Suit by pujaris to recover offerings from gurus of the temple—Suit of civil nature—Suit under the purview of s 9—A suit by the hereditary pujaris of a temple to recover from the gurus (temple servant) offerings placed by devotees before the idol, is a suit of civil nature within the meaning of s. 9 of the Civil Procedure Code 1908. Such a suit however falls within the purview of s. 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure where the temple is under the management of the Devasthan Committee and the funds of the temple including the offerings to the deity are administered under a scheme by the members of that Committee. Per SHAH J.—The principle adopted is apparently that the scheme once settled by a Court cannot be altered except by the Court. It does not contemplate that the Court has no jurisdiction to order an award to be filed only because it deals with manpan that matters relating to a complement or dignity about which the Courts would have no jurisdiction to entertain suits. It is the policy of law to enable parties who by private arrangement settle a dispute to have that settlement made legally effective. If there is something to arbitrate on and there is a reference and an award the policy of the law is that that award should be given effect to without minute inquiry by the Court. Disputes about manpan which cannot be settled in the Courts can often only be effectively settled by arbitration. The parties are at liberty without in any way going against the words or the spirit of the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871) to agree among themselves that when the cash allowance is received from Government it shall be distributed among them in a certain way.* PADMA WENDRA AYLASI v CURURAO RACHAWENDRA (1913)

It is contemplated by that section that if all the matters in dispute are substantially the same in both suits then the fact that the relief claimed in the subsequent suit is not identical with the relief claimed in the previous suit shall not operate to enable the parties to continue the litigation. The mere fact that the question of title is raised in both suits and decided in the first suit is not sufficient to attract the operation of s 10. 2 ——— Application by defendant for stay of plaintiff's suit if defendant having filed an earlier suit in a moharil Court—Plaintiff's application for injunction to restrain defendant from proceeding with his suit—Matter directly and substantially in issue in a previously instituted suit—meaning of—Jurisdiction of High Court to order a party before it not to proceed with a suit in another—Practice of Court of Chancery to make an order in personae against a party residing out of the Court's jurisdiction. On the 25th of March 1919 the plaintiffs' common agents in Bombay filed a suit in the High Court against the defendant cotton merchants at Bijapur claiming a sum of Rs 8,71,10 as being due to them in respect of advances made to the defendants against cotton from time to time. The defendants had however on the 13th of March 1919 filed a suit in the Court of First Class Subordinate Judge at Bijapur against the plaintiffs and seven other persons praying inter alia that the account between them and the various defendants in that suit be taken after fixing the rate at which their cotton should have been sold in Bombay and that a decree be passed against the several defendants for such amounts as may legally and properly be found due from them respectively. On the 29th of April 1919 the defendants applied to the High Court for a stay of the plaintiff's suit under s 10 of the Civil Procedure Code. The plaintiffs opposed the application and asked that an order in personae be made against the defendants restraining them from proceeding with their suit in the Bijapur Court. The trial Judge holding that s 10 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply dismissed the defendants' application for stay of the plaintiffs' suit and made an order against the defendants restraining them from proceeding with their Bijapur suit against the plaintiff. The defendants appealed contending (1) that the High Court ought to have been stayed as the matter in issue therein was involved in the earlier suit in the Bijapur Court and (2) that High Court had no jurisdiction to restrain them from proceeding with their suit in Bijapur where they resided and carried on business. Held (1) that the High Court should not be stayed inasmuch as the matter in issue therein was not directly and substantially in issue in the previously instituted suit at Bijapur within the meaning of ss 10 and 11—Stay of suit—Issue common to two suits but parties not occupying the same position. Z and J brought a suit against W and other heirs of H a deceased husband claiming certain property in virtue of a deed of gift from the mother of the deceased. This suit was decreed and the defendant filed an appeal in the High Court. Pending this appeal W brought a suit against Z and J and another in which he claimed one sixth of her dower debt exempting the other heirs of her late husband. In the second suit the deed of gift in favour of Z and J was again brought in question the plaintiff alleging that it was invalid and inoperative. In this suit the Court, at the instance of the defendants made an order under s 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1908 staying proceedings until the appeal in the former suit should be decided. Held on application by W for revision of the order staying proceedings that the Court below had properly applied s 10 of the Code but it would be necessary when the hearing of the second suit should proceed to consider carefully the effect of s 11 of the Code with reference to the facts and circumstances of the two litigations. WAHID UN NISSA DIBI v ZAMIN ALI SHAH

An application under s 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure for the stay of a suit is not a case and an order for stay passed on that application is not the decision of a case within the meaning of that word in s 115 of the Code and no revision lies from such an order. The word 'case' in s 115 is not confined to a suit but cannot be construed to mean an interlocutory order in a suit such as an order under s 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure although the order may be of such a nature that it cannot be interfered with even under the provisions of s 105 of the Code when an appeal is preferred from the final decree in the suit. Muhammad Ayub v Muhammad Mahmud I L R 32 All 623 applied. Bhargava and Co v Jeggannath Bhajjan Das I L R 41 All 607 doubted and distinguished. SULTANAT JAHAN BEGAM v SUNDAR LAL I L R 42 All 469

A suit filed in forma pauperis was decided on the 10th February 1908. An application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis was presented to the High Court on the 13th April 1908 but as it was beyond time it was rejected. On an application to excuse the delay it was excused on the ground that the applicant having been a minor s 7 of the Limitation Act 1877 applied. At the hearing it was objected that the application for permission to appeal in forma pauperis must be treated as an appeal and that s 5 and not s 7 of the Limitation Act applied to it. Held overruling the contention that whether the application was treated as falling under s 5 or under s 7 of the Limitation Act 1877 the result was the same. If it fell under s 6 as an appeal then under the second paragraph of that section which applied to appeals the Court had jurisdiction to excuse delay after the period of limitation prescribed for the presentation of an appeal had expired. If on the other hand it be treated as an application and fell under s 7 of the Limitation Act it was clearly within time and there was no need of excusing delay because the section provided that a minor could apply after he had attained the age of majority within a certain period. The probate is conclusive only as to the appointment of executors and the validity and the contents of the will and on the application for probate it is not the province of the Court to go into the question of title with reference to the property of which the will purports to dispose or the validity of such disposition. *CHINTAMAN VANKATRAO v. In a subsequent suit for trial on the same merits the defendant in the first suit was pleaded as res judicata. Held that the rejection of the suit on the ground of undervaluation at any stage of it did not make it res judicata for the purposes of a subsequent suit on the same cause of action or litigating the same title. Held further that the dismissal of the suit on the ground of undervaluation having been sufficient by itself the findings on the issues or the merits were not necessary for the decision of the suit and could not have the force of res judicata. *INAWA KOM LAYNA v. 6 ————— Consent decree—amount to res judicata—Consent decree between predecessors in title of parties in suit—Injunction granted in former suit—R's judgment and estoppel distinguished. Res judicata ousts the jurisdiction of the Court while estoppel does no more than shut the mouth of a party. 7 ————— Co plaintiff—res judicata as between—Civil Procedure Code (Act IV of 1877) s 26—Joinder of parties. The plaintiff D and his step-mother R (defendant) brought a suit against C to recover possession of certain ornaments which formed part of the estate of M the father of D and husband of R. It was held by the Court of first instance that R was entitled to the ornaments because they were her stridhan but the Appellate Court held that she was entitled to them not because they were her stridhan but because she was the absolute owner of the property. D then sued P for a declaration that he as son and heir to M was entitled to hold the decree. The defendant in reply contended inter alia that the suit was barred by res judicata. Held that the bar of res judicata did not apply inasmuch as there was no final adjudication as between R and D and in the first suit it was a matter of no consequence to the defendant therein for the purposes of the relief to be given against him whether P succeeded or whether D succeeded. A finding to become res judicata as between co-plaintiffs must have been essential for the purpose of giving relief against the defendants. Ramchandra Varayan v. Narayan Mahadevi 1 L R 11 Bom 216 followed. The Court ought not to hold a point to be res judicata unless it is clear from the pleadings and the findings in the previous suit. The mortgagee subsequently brought another suit to foreclose the mortgage under the provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturist Relief Act. The mortgage amount was found to be Rs 400 and relief granted accordingly. It was contended in the appeal that the finding as to the mortgage amount in the first suit operated as res judicata in the second suit. Held that the Dekkhan Agriculturist Relief Act 1879 was in relief of certain class of His Majesty's subjects and therefore the finding in the first suit could not affect and be res judicata in the second which was under a special law unless the previous suit also came within that law. VIRJAL PANCHANDRA v SITABAI 1 L R 30 Bom 543

The Court held that the property was joint property but allowed the widow to be in possession of it in lieu of her rights to maintenance. The widow appealed against the decree but she subsequently withdrew the appeal. On the widow's death the property passed into the possession of her daughter who claimed it as heir to her father. The nephew filed the present suit to recover possession of the property from the daughter who resisted the claim on the ground that the property having been the separate property of her father had descended to her and that the decision in the first suit was not binding on her. Held that the first decree operated as res judicata against the defendant inasmuch as it was a decree against the widow as representing her husband's estate. Held further that so far as the first suit was concerned the case was fairly contested and the mere withdrawal of the appeal by the widow was not sufficient to deprive the decree of its operative character in law. Katoma Natchair v The Pajal of Singuriga 9 Mco I A 39 followed. GHELABHAI v BAI JATEP (1912) 1 L R 37 Bom 172

a decree which awarded them the share. The decree remained unexecuted. In 1904 the plaintiff a member of the Varang family sued the Varang as well as the Desai members to obtain his 1/4th share by partition of the village. Some of the defendants in both families admitted the plaintiff's claim and asked that their shares also should be awarded to them on partition. It was contended that the claim of the defendants to obtain their share in the village was barred as res judicata in virtue of the decree of 1854 which awarded to them half a share in the village. Held that the first decree was a declaratory decree and did not operate as res judicata in the present suit. Babaji Parshram v Kashiobai 1 L R 4 Bom 157 and Nasratullah v Musyibullah 1 L R 13 All 309 followed. Soni Moganlal v Munshi Himotibhai 3 Bom L R 94 distinguished. JAGU BARAJI v BALU LAXMAN (1912)

The defendant raised the plea of res judicata urging that the plaintiff had filed a previous suit against her in the High Court for similar relief and had failed in it. The previous suit was filed without obtaining the leave of the Court under cl 12 of the Letters Patent. The residence of the parties being outside the jurisdiction of the Court the Court therefore dismissed the suit for want of jurisdiction though issues on the merits were raised and decided. The first Court disallowed the plea of res judicata on the ground that the judgment in the previous suit was delivered by the Court not competent to do so in consequence of the absence of leave. On appeal by the defendant the Judge dismissed the suit holding that the absence of leave did not go to the root of the jurisdiction of the Court and therefore the judgment of the Court was the judgment of a Court having jurisdiction. Held on second appeal by the plaintiff that the judgment in the previous suit was delivered by a Court not competent to deliver it within the meaning of s 44 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) and therefore the plea of res judicata could not prevail. ABDUL KADIR v DOOLANBHI (1913)

In a former suit between the parties the defendant claimed the property as the nearest male agnate and heir of B. An issue was raised whether the custom of the daughter's exclusion by a pitras heir was proved to have been in existence in the bhogdars village of Rahad and it was heard and decided but the suit was dismissed on the ground that the defendant who was the plaintiff in that suit was not proved to be the nearest pitras heir to B. It was contended that by reason of this finding the plaintiff's suit was barred by res judicata within the meaning of s 11 of the Civil Procedure Code 1908. Held that the suit was not barred by res judicata because although the issue was heard and decided it was not finally decided as it was not necessary for the decision which the Court came to dismissing the suit and the plaintiff had no necessity of appealing against the Court's finding on that issue. *Bai Nathu v. 22 ——— Suit for declaration and recovery of possession—Defence of res judicata—Parties not adequately represented in the former suit not fully tried—No bar of res judicata. A suit brought by three plaintiffs as surviving coparceners of a joint Hindu family for a declaration that the property in suit formed part of the joint family property and for possession was met by the plea of res judicata. The previous suit the decision in which was set up as res judicata was filed in the year 1900 by the father of the present plaintiffs 2 and 3 who were minors and who were not joined as parties against the present defendants and the present plaintiff 1 as defendant 4. The relief claimed in that suit was the same as that claimed in the present suit. The finding in that suit showed conclusively that the father of the present plaintiffs 2 and 3 who were then minors and were not parties did not adequately represent them and the suit was not fully tried and the suit was accordingly dismissed. Held that the bar of res judicata did not arise as the present plaintiffs 2 and 3 were then minors and were not adequately represented. Held further that the present plaintiff 1 who was defendant 4 in the former suit was no more than a pro forma defendant and took no active part and was not bound by the result of that suit the decree in which was in his favour. Raja Pampal Singh v Ram Gulam Singh I L R 30 A I 1 distinguished. SHADRA v SAKHAPAN GOPALSHET (1914) I L R 39 Bom 29

23 ——— Termination of tenancy by decree on prior mortgage—The appellant purchased a plot of land at a sale held in execution of a mortgage decree. In the mortgage suit the plaintiff mortgagee's case was that the tenant defendants to that suit had taken their tenancies from the mortgagor after the date of the mortgage and the mortgagee prayed for the sale of the property free from the tenancies. The case set up by one of the respondents who was the elder brother of the other respondents was that they held a permanent tenancy created prior to the mortgage which was confirmed by a confirmatory lease after the mortgage and that they had created a masonry building on the land. Issues were framed on this point and the Court found in favour of the plaintiff mortgagee and in execution of the mortgage decree the property was sold free of all encumbrances and purchased by the appellant. Subsequently a portion of the land so purchased by the appellant was acquired under the Land Acquisition Act and the respondents put in a claim for the compensation money alleging that they had a permanent mukarrar mawra interest in the land the tenancy standing in the name of the elder brother. Held that the matter was directly in issue in the former suit and decided against the respondents and they could not open the question again. KANAI LAL JALAN v PASIK LAL SARDUKHAN (1914) 19 C W N 11

must make the other co-harers defendants because the partition which is made in his favour is a partition against his co-harers. That which gives him a portion of the property takes away all right which they would otherwise have to that portion and therefore it is a decree against them and in favour of him self. Where a decree having been made in a suit for partition declaring the shares of the plaintiffs a Commissioner under the Court's direction went and on the ground measured out the declared shares and the plaintiffs were put into possession thereof but the defendants took no proceeding in the suit such as is provided for in the Code of Civil Procedure to correct errors, if any made in partitioning out. Held that apart from such proceedings none of which were taken the decree was res judicata and a suit instituted by the defendants in the previous suit with a view to correct the apportionment made in favour of the plaintiffs in the previous suit was barred by res judicata. *NAINI KANTA LAHRI v. 25 ———— Pise of value of subject matter—Pro forma defendant when bound Person not joined as executor when bound as such—Decree against limited owner upon compromise when binding on reversion—Decree erroneous/declared not res judicata effect of. To determine for purposes of res judicata whether the Court which decided the former suit had jurisdiction to try the subsequent suit regard must be had to the jurisdiction of the Court at the date of the former suit and not to its jurisdiction at the date of the subsequent suit. A decree made by a Munsif cannot cease to be res judicata by reason of a gradual increase in the value of the subject matter of the litigation. If a defendant actively contested the plaintiff's claim the decision of the suit will bind him even though he was merely described as a pro forma defendant and no relief was asked against him. A defendant who might have been joined both in his personal capacity and in that of an executor to another estate cannot be treated as having been a party necessarily in his character as an executor when he was not described in the pleadings as such. Where a decision between the parties was considered by the Court and declared not to be res judicata the latter decision even if erroneous in law becomes conclusive between the parties and it was not open to any of them to plead in a later suit that the former decision still operated as res judicata. An adverse decision obtained against a limited owner such as a Hindu daughter if obtained upon a fair trial is res judicata on the issues decided therein against reversionary heirs. A decree passed on a compromise made bona fide for the benefit of the estate and not for the personal advantage of the limited owner has the same effect and such a decree unless successfully impeached on the ground of fraud coercion collusion or any like reason would operate as res judicata against the reversioners. *MONENDRA NATH BISWAS v. Act (Bom. Act V of 1862)—Mortgage of unrecognised share of a bhag—Mortgage void—Unlawful consideration—Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872) s 24—Indian Limitation Act (IX of 1908) s 62. One A mortgaged with possession an unrecognised share of a bhag with R on May 19 1896 contrary to the provisions of the Bhagdari Act 1862. The mortgage deed provided that after possession by the mortgagee for eleven years the mortgage amount was to be paid to him whenever he should demand it either out of the property or by the mortgagor or his heirs personally. In 1903 B obtained a money decree against the estate of R whose mortgage right was put up to sale and purchased by the plaintiff at a Court sale for Rs 577. In 1910 the plaintiff filed a suit No 176 of 1910 against the representatives of P and A to obtain possession. No claim was made in that suit for payment of the amount of the mortgage debt. The suit failed on the ground that the mortgage was invalid and therefore unenforceable. In 1911 another suit was filed by the plaintiff against the same parties to recover Rs 588 from the estate of A and in the alternative to recover Rs 577 from the estate of B. The defendants Nos 1 to 3 contended that the suit was barred by res judicata and also pleaded limitation. Held that the subsequent suit for the mortgage debt was not barred by res judicata as the prior claim of 1910 for possession was not really a claim on the mortgage but a claim by virtue of the purchase by the plaintiff of the mortgagee's rights. Held further that the consideration for the mortgage being unlawful under s 24 of the Contract Act 1872 it failed ab initio and the claim for repayment of the money advanced to the mortgagor as money had and received being brought more than three years after the date of the mortgage deed was barred by reason of Art 62 of Limitation Act 1908. *Jaterbhas Jorabhas v. The property in suit originally belonged to one Devare. In 1883 during the minority of Devare his mother sold it to the Bhojes from whom one Bavachi received it in exchange for another parcel of land. In 1891 by a simple mortgage Bavachi mortgaged the property to the plaintiff. In 1898 a suit was brought by Davare against his mother Bavachi and the Bhojes in order to set aside the sale by his mother to the Bhojes. That suit was successful and the result was that the sale to Bhojes was set aside. In 1901 the plaintiff obtained a decree on his mortgage against Bavachi. The property was put to sale and was purchased by the plaintiff with permission. But when the plaintiff endeavoured to get possession he was resisted by Davare. The plaintiff therefore brought a suit in 1909 against Davare Bavachi and the Bhojes to recover possession. The defendant Davare contended that the plaintiff's suit was barred by res judicata.

In a suit brought by D in the High Court of Bombay to recover his moiety of the deposit his brother L who was a partner in the firm admitted his claim but it was contested by the other partners defendants Nos 1 and 2. Defendants Nos 3 to 6 contended that they were not partners in the firm at all. The Court passed a decree against L and defendants Nos 1 and 2. The firm made losses and ceased to work. L thereupon filed the present suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Surat for a Dissolution of the firm and for taking its accounts. D was made a party to the suit as a creditor of the firm. The defendants Nos 3 to 6 again contended that they were not partners in the firm. A question having arisen whether the contention was res judicata in the present suit. Held that the relief given to D in the earlier suit did not require or involve a decision of any case between the co-defendants and therefore the co-defendants were not to be bound as between each other by the Court's proceedings and decision which were necessary only to the decree which D obtained. Per BIRCHALL J. The Court is slow to enforce the principle of res judicata as against co-defendants and the limits of the operation of the principle in such cases seem to me to be narrowly laid down. FAKIRCHAND LALLUBHAI v NAGIB CHAND HALDAS (1915) I L R 40 Bom 210

In 1910 the plaintiff the new manager sued the defendants in ejectment praying that the mulgani lease was not binding on him and that the defendant being annual tenants should be evicted. The Court held in favour of the plaintiff on the first ground but for want of notice held that he was not entitled at that stage to evict the defendants. Then after due notice given the plaintiff again sued to eject the defendants. They again pleaded the mulgani lease. The Court held that that defence was not open to them as it was barred by res judicata. On appeal held that the defence was barred by res judicata for the decision of the Court in the earlier suit in favour of the plaintiff upon the first part of his prayer found a place in the decretal order and was as much decreed as the other part of the prayer which in the second part of that decretal order was rejected. MOTA HOLLAFFA v VITHAL GOPAL (1916) I L R 40 Bom 662

Two suits for sale on separate mortgages of the same property were filed and in each the mortgagees impleaded a third party as a subsequent mortgagee of a portion of the property in suit. The party so impleaded was in reality the owner of a considerable portion of the property comprised in the mortgages sued upon though he was not impleaded in that capacity. Mortgage suit of nearly Rs 2000 in value—Preliminary decree by Munsif specially empowered final decree by Subordinate Judge—Execution by Munsif specially empowered if competent In a mortgage suit a preliminary decree for nearly Rs 2000 was made by a Munsif with power to try suits up to the value of Rs 2000. The Munsif being transferred and his successor not being vested with the same power the final decree was made by the Subordinate Judge. Execution was however taken out in the Court of the Munsif who meanwhile had been empowered to try suits up to Rs 2000. Held—That the Munsif's Court had jurisdiction to execute the decree under s 150 of the Civil Procedure Code though not under ss 37 and 38 of the Code. ANIRUDH MULLIK v ATAMANI DAS decree—Pending execution proceedings—Transfer of property sought to be sold to the jurisdiction of another Court—Res judicata in execution proceedings—Ex parte order passed after notice effect of—Objection petition when can be treated as application to set aside ex parte order—Order IX rule 13 application of Where after attachment of property in execution of a decree for money and an order for sale made by the Court which passed the decree the property was transferred to the local limits of the jurisdiction of another Court, newly established. Held that the Court which passed the decree ceased to have jurisdiction to continue the execution proceedings and that the new Court having territorial jurisdiction over the property attached was the proper Court to entertain an application for execution by the sale of the property and pass orders thereon. In such a case no formal order of transfer of a particular case or of all pending cases is necessary. On principle unless the authority which changes the venue reserves the right to the Court which has lost the jurisdiction to continue pending proceedings affecting the property so transferred to another jurisdiction such proceedings are also ipso facto transferred by the change of venue to the new Court the records relating to that action becoming part of the records of the new Court. Section 150 Civil Procedure Code implies that the whole business of a Court might be transferred to another Court without any order of transfer by a superior Court under s 21 or any other section of Code thereby adopting the Calcutta view that by changes of venue made by the local Government the business of a Court which loses jurisdiction over a certain area so far as such area is concerned will be ipso facto transferred to the new Court. The same law on the question considered. An ex parte order in execution proceedings passed after issue of notice and after the Court has held that the service of the notice was duly effected is, on general principle, binding as res judicata. Munjal Ishrahd Dhu v Cripa Kant Lahiri I L R 3 Cal 51 followed. So where a Court purporting to act under s. 47 Civil Procedure Code directed execution to proceed against a minor and an appeal was preferred on the ground that the decree sought to be executed did not bind the minor Held that the fact that on the Appellant's own showing the minor would not be a party to the decree within meaning of a 4, and thus the order would not be an order under s. 47 would not make the appeal incompetent. the legal representative of the decree holder (mortgagee auction purchaser) brought a suit to recover possession of the property so purchased. The defendants (representatives of the mortgagors judgment debtors) contended that the question involved in the suit related to the execution of the decree therefore the suit was not maintainable under s 47 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) and that the plaintiff's remedy lay under O XXI r 5. The first Court allowed the claim. On appeal by one of the defendants Held, reversing the decree that (i) The suit was barred by s 47 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908). (ii) A decree holder by becoming a purchaser at a court sale did not cease to be a party to the suit within the meaning of s 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. (iii) Proceedings for delivery of possession of property purchased by the decree holder were proceedings in execution of the decree and fell within the scope of s 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. (iv) Art 138 of the Limitation Act (I of 1908) did not override the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code. They should be read together. Where the auction purchaser was also a party to the suit in which the decree was passed his claim for the delivery of possession of the property purchased must be determined by the Court in the execution department. But where the auction purchaser was a third party it was open to him to bring a suit for possession of the property purchased by him and such a suit would be governed by twelve years limitation under Art 138 of the Limitation Act. (v) Under s 90 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) the execution proceedings did not terminate with the sale. 9 ———— Decree irreconcilable directions in—Decree imposes mode of execution—Claim on behalf of Deity—Appal. The appellant obtained a decree on a mortgage executed by one G and had certain properties attached. Thereafter one I brought a suit for declaration that the property was welf and could not therefore be attached and sold and obtained a decree. On appeal to the High Court against this decree C and one A were substituted as the heirs of I who had died in the meantime and the appeal was ultimately dismissed against G and decreed on a compromise as between the appellant and A allowing the appellant to recover the money due to him by sale of 4 annas share of the properties. On an application for execution of this decree of the High Court without making G a party to the execution G appeared and objected that he was the sole mutwali of the property which was welf and could not be sold in execution of the decree. The lower Appellate Court refused execution holding that a suit for declaration could not legally terminate in a mortgage decree and that the decree which could be executed was the original mortgage decree but not the compromise decree. Held that as G was a party to the suit in his personal capacity as also as mutwali his objection came within s 4 of the Civil Procedure Code and an appeal lay from the order refusing to execute the decree. Kartik Chandra Ghose v Ashutosh Dhar 1 L P 39 Cal 295

That the ground upon which the application for execution was refused was erroneous the decree of the High Court in the present case was however incapable of execution inasmuch as the decree in so far as it dismissed the appeal as against G as a part representative of the former mutwali was a final decision that the property was welf and inalienable and a direction in the same decree that a portion of the property could be sold was irreconcilable with the rest of the decision and made it impossible to carry the whole decree into effect.

s 14 The opponent obtained against the applicant a decree for partition in the Zhanu Court which decree was transferred to the First Class Subordinate Judge's Court of Ahmednagar for execution. In execution the opponent recovered a sum in excess from the applicant. The applicant filed a suit against the opponent on the 14th November 1913 in the Shergaon Court to recover back the excess amount but the Court dismissed the suit on 31st March 1915 on the ground that the applicant's proper remedy was to apply to the Ahmednagar Court in execution. award decree—Decree unregistered—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1908) s. 41 In 1891 defendant No. 1 obtained a decree against one Khanderao. The decree was made payable by instalments and it was declared in the decree that the decretal amount was charged on certain lands of the judgment-debtor. The decree was not registered. In 1896 the judgment-debtor sold three of the lands mentioned in the decree to the plaintiffs and put them in possession. In 1912 defendant No. 1 filed a Darkhast in execution of the decree of 1891 and under that Darkhast lands sold to the plaintiffs in 1896 were put up to sale. The sale was confirmed by the Collector in spite of the objections put in by the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs thereupon Original Suits No 500 and 509 of 1903 on the file of the District Munsif's Court of Vizianagram against (1) S the husband of the plaintiff and the second defendant S died subsequent to the passing of the decrees which were transferred to the District Munsif's Court of Pajam for execution. The first defendant filed an application in the latter Court for bringing on the record the plaintiff and the second defendant as the legal representatives of the deceased judgment debtor and for execution of the decrees. The Court passed an order as prayed for. The plaintiff (the junior widow of S) was a minor at the time of the application and although she was placed on the record as though she were a major with a guardian ad litem to act for her, both the first defendant (the decree holder) and the third defendant (the auction purchaser) knew at the time that she was a minor. The second defendant (the co-widow) had then ceased to have any interest in her husband's estate. The decree holder applied for sale in Original Suit No 500 of 1903 of properties which were attached in both the above-mentioned decrees. The third defendant who had for the properties for Rs 601 caused the sale to be stopped in Original Suit No 500 of 1903. The first defendant in collusion with the third defendant brought them to sale in Original Suit No 509 of 1903. The reserve price was reduced to Rs 200 and the third defendant purchased the property for Rs 301. The executing Court was not informed of the sale in Original Suit No 500 of 1903 and of the third defendant's bid for Rs 601 thereon. The sale was held on 19th October 1906 and was confirmed on 23rd January 1907. The plaintiff (who attained majority in July 1907) filed an application on the 16th March 1909 in Original Suit No 509 of 1903 under s 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure for setting aside the sale and for a declaration that the sale was invalid and for other relief. The petition was converted into a suit under the provisions of s 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. The defendants contended that the sale was valid that in any event the sale had to be set aside and that both the applications under s 47 of the Civil Procedure Code and the suit were barred by limitation under arts 162 and 12 of the Limitation Act respectively. Held that the plaintiff who had no guardian ad litem appointed for her in the execution proceedings was not a party to the suit in which the sale was made and was entitled to bring a suit for a declaration that the sale was not binding without regard to the provisions of s 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. That the plaintiff not having been a party to the suit and not having been sufficiently represented by any one who was a party, the sale was not binding on the plaintiff and did not require to be set aside. That the suit which was instituted within three years of the plaintiff's attainment of majority was not barred by limitation. Per SADASIVA AYYAR J When a judgment debtor has to set aside a sale of his property for fraud of the decree holder or of both himself and the auction purchaser he can only apply under Order XXI rule 90 of the Civil Procedure Code subject to the limitation prescribed in art 166 of the Limitation Act but he may be entitled to bring a suit for other appropriate reliefs on the ground of fraud against the decree holder and the auction purchaser such as for damages or for injunction subject to the limitation prescribed in art 93 of the Limitation Act. PER SADASIVA AYYAR J LAKSHMINARAYAN (1914)

The decree was dated the 29th July 1884 and default in the payment of instalment was made in 1897. Thereupon the judgment creditor applied for the execution of the decree. He died in 1898 and the execution proceedings were continued by his brother as his representative. In March 1902 the brother also died leaving minor sons. On the 2th June 1902 the guardian or the next friend of the minors applied to have the minors brought on the record as representing their father for continuing the execution proceedings. This application was rejected in September 1902 and the original application for execution which was presented by the judgment creditor on default was also struck off. On the 1st September 1909 a fresh application to execute the original decree was presented by the minor sons of the judgment creditor. A said brother one of the minors having in the meanwhile attained majority. The application was met by the objection that as it was made after the expiration of twelve years from the date of the default mentioned in the original decree sought to be executed it was barred by s 48 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908). Held that the fresh application was time barred as being made twelve years after the date of the default. Art 18 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908) showed that the fresh period which could be obtained under the provisions of that article did not escape the provisions of s 48 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908). s 48 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) is more extensive in its application than s 230 of the Code of 1887 and it is wide enough to cover the compromise decree of which execution was sought. BALA RAM VITHALCHAND v MAPUTI (1914)

S. 60 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) lays down the general rule that property liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree is lands, houses etc. belonging to the judgment debtor. An agriculturist in order to resist the application of that general rule must prove that he belongs to the privileged class so as to render s. 22 of the Dekhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XII of 1879) applicable to his case. In the absence of such proof the exemption from liability to attachment or sale does not exist for the purpose of execution proceedings and the executing Court has therefore complete jurisdiction to make the order for sale. NARAIAN ANANDAM v. GONBAI (1912) 1 I. L. R. 37 Bom. 415

Agriculturist—meaning of. A judgment debtor put in an application before a subordinate Judge claiming that his house attached in execution should not be sold by reason of the provisions of s. 60(c) of the Civil Procedure Code 1908 as he was an agriculturist. The lower Courts dismissed the application on the ground that the judgment debtor had ceased to be an agriculturist in the ordinary sense of the term and had become a mere agricultural labourer. On appeal to the High Court Held that the judgment debtor should be protected from the attachment of the house as the term agriculturist as used in s. 60 of the Civil Procedure Code should be held to include person engaged in cultivating the soil for remuneration although they may have no proprietary interest in the soil. *PRADIP KUMAR v. his holding. Held by *RICHARDS & Co. The proviso forbids both attachment and sale that is where an attachment must precede a sale it forbids attachment as well as sale and where attachment is not a preliminary step it forbids sale. *Ram Dial v. Exemption from attachment of agriculturist's house—Agriculturist who is—Plea claiming exemption must be set up and proved by judgment debtor. The agriculturist who is protected from attachment by s. 60(c) of the Code of Civil Procedure is one belonging to the class of common agriculturists that are found in Bengal who the main source of livelihood is by cultivation i.e. the raiyat who tills the field. The plea that he is an agriculturist within the meaning of the section has got to be set up and proved by the judgment debtor. ASHUTALLA SARKAR v. PAN MAHMOUD CHOWDHURY (1910) 20 C. W. N. 874

Grant of jagir whether of revenue or land—Grant whether of revenue or for maintenance—Political pension. A Government sanad purported to grant the taluka of a certain pargana together with the lands cultivated or uncultivated to one K. for life as revenue free jagir by way of maintenance and went on to say that after the death of K. the said taluka will continue to stand in the names of his children and grand children as a permanent zamindari assessed to a light amount of jama. Held that the grant to K. was of land rather than of revenue charged on the land and was not a political pension within s 60 (g) of the Civil Procedure Code. The word jagir primarily points to occupancy though it may be occupancy of an office such as that of collector of revenue. Where however a jagir held for life only is as in this sanad used in contradistinction to an alaka held as a permanent zamindari it is an almost necessary inference that the occupancy referred to is an occupancy of land. That though the grant to K. was expressed to be for his maintenance it was not in the case of his descendants. That in the hands of the latter the subject matter of the grant was liable to attachment in execution of a decree. SAKINA BAI v. KANIZ FATIMA BEOUM (1917) 22 C W N 577 properties for consideration to his son who assumed the payment of specific debts and agreed to pay to P a monthly sum of Rs 4000 payable on the first day of each month and two annual sums of Rs 2000 and Rs 1000 respectively. These sums were made first charges on a portion of the estate conveyed subject to the then existing mortgages executed by the vendor. In the deed it was further provided that the allowance was not to be alienated by the vendor in any manner and that the sums as they fell due were in no circumstances to be payable to or demandable by any person other than the vendor. The respondent having obtained a decree for money against P applied for attachment and sale of the right title and interest of P in the monthly allowance payable from and charged upon the estate in the hands of the vendee P objected that the right to the annuity was not saleable property within s 60 Civil Procedure Code. The Subordinate Judge overruled the objection and issued a prohibitory order directing the payment of the allowance into Court periodically as it fell due. Held that the right sought to be attached was saleable property within the meaning of s 60 Civil Procedure Code, being a right to receive money charged upon property and enforceable if necessary by sale thereof. It was not a mere right to receive future maintenance within cl (n) of the proviso to that section. That the clause making the allowance inalienable and payable only to the vendor was an illegal restraint on alienation and did not even if considered valid as being in the nature of a spendthrift trust necessarily imply a bar to involuntary alienation at the instance of creditors. That the direction for payment into Court of the allowance as it fell due was contrary to law the judgment creditor being entitled only to bring to sale the right of the judgment debtor who would therefore be entitled to take out the sums already deposited in Court in pursuance of the erroneous order of the Subordinate Judge. *PADMANABH SINGH v. Held that such property was not exempt from process in execution of a decree against the life tenant but the proper mode of execution was not by sale of the life tenant's interest in the property—whatever it might be worth—but by the appointment of a receiver who might administer the property on behalf of the Court and apportion the income between the creditor and the life tenant. *SUDHAR BIBI v. Held that Major D under s 100 sub sec 3 of the Army Act 1881 was an officer of His Majesty's Regular Forces and under s 136 of the Army Act 1881 and s 60 of the Code of Civil Procedure he was entitled to receive his pay without any deduction and that the attachment must be ruled and that the Sheriff must pay to Major D the sum received by him under attachment and not set it against the plaintiff's claim. Bourcher I L R 37 Bom 26 applied. S 63 of the Code of Civil Procedure only applies as between Civil Courts of different grades or as between Revenue Courts of different grades. It cannot apply where the conflict is between a Civil Court on the one hand and a Revenue Court on the other. Hence where the same property was attached in execution of a Civil Court decree and also in execution of a Revenue Court decree but was actually sold in execution of the latter it was held that the auction purchaser was entitled to retain possession non obstante the decree of the Civil Court and the attachment thereunder. Raghubar Dayal v Banke Lal I L R 2 All 180 followed. POSHAN LAL v MOHAMMAD MASKEER ALI KHAN I L R 42 All 612

The recorded purchaser conveyed the property to another person and the plaintiff sued for a declaration of his title to the property on the ground that it was purchased by him in the name of the recorded purchaser. Held—That a sale certificate does not create title but is merely evidence of title and the title of the purchaser accrued under s 316 from the date of the confirmation of the sale. That the suit was not barred by s 66 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908 which is not applicable to an execution purchaser whose title was perfected when s 317 of the Code of 1882 was in force. Both s 317 of the Code of 1892 and s 66 of the Code of 1908 although placed in a Code of Procedure impose in essence a serious restriction upon the title of the real purchaser at the execution sale. PRAMOTHO NATH PAL CROWDHURY v SAURAVI DOSI CROWDHURANI 24 C W N 1011

After the death of the father one of the sons sued for a declaration that the property so purchased was joint family property having been purchased from joint family funds in the name of a member of the family. Held that females in a joint Hindu family not being members of the family in the sense of having a right to a share in the family property the purchase could not be taken to have been made for the benefit of the family but the defendant was in the position of a pura benamidar and a suit for the declaration asked for by the plaintiff was prohibited by s 66 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Both Singh Doodhoria v Gunesh Chander Sen 12 B I L R 317 and Achhabar Dubey v Tapas Dubey I L R 29 All 657 referred to. BAISAKH DAS v BISHAN DEVI I L R 43 All 711 filed on the 11th of June 1915 to recover a sum of Rs 5353 9 6 as the price of goods sold to the defendant. The defendant in his written statement pleaded inter alia that the goods supplied by the plaintiff were not of the quality agreed upon by the parties. On the 21st of October 1915 the parties without the intervention of the Court agreed to refer the matters in dispute between them concerning the contract referred to in the plaint in respect of which the suit had been filed in High Court to the arbitration of M D and P M. The arbitrators made their award on the 28th of October 1915 whereby they awarded to the plaintiff a sum of Rs 4001 4 0 with interest at 6 per cent till the date of payment. The award was filed by the arbitrators on the 10th of December 1915. On the 10th of January 1916 the plaintiff took out a notice of motion for an order that the adjustment of the suit arrived at between the plaintiff and the defendant as stated in the plaintiff's affidavit should be recorded under Order XVIII rule 3 of the Civil Procedure Code and a decree in accordance therewith should be passed. The defendant disputed the legality of the award on two grounds first that the arbitrators exceeded their jurisdiction and decided something which was not within their power to decide and secondly that they refused an opportunity to the defendant to call witnesses or that after they had given him to understand they would adjourn the matter to enable him to call evidence they published the award without giving him any such opportunity. Held (i) that the plaintiff had adopted a wrong procedure in applying for a decree on an award under Order XVIII rule 3 (ii) That the defendant was entitled to be heard on the objections raised by him under paragraph 1 of the Second Schedule of the Civil Procedure Code Irangias v Giridharas I L R 96 Bom 76 and Girdharas v Vanubas I L R 21 Bom 330 considered. Per MACLEOD J—No application can be made to obtain a decree on an award except as provided for in s 89 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act V of 1908). The trial Court being of opinion that the suit was governed neither by s 92 of the Civil Procedure Code nor by s 15 of the Religious Endowments Act decreed it on merits. The suit was however dismissed by the District Judge on the preliminary ground that the cognizance of the suit was barred by 92 of the Civil Procedure Code. The plaintiff having appealed. Held that the suit clearly fell within the scope of s 92 of the Civil Procedure Code inasmuch as taking the plaintiff as a whole the suit was one for the removal of the defendants from their position as trustees for the restoration of the trust property to the plaintiff as a Muktear for taking accounts and for damages for their wrongful acts as trustees. Held further that the defendants were not in the position of strangers for they were trustees and claimed as such to be entitled to hold the lands from generation to generation subject to the due fulfilment of the trust. Per MARLEY J. — There is much which is in common between the two sections (s 92 of the Civil Procedure Code and s 11 of the Religious Endowments Act) but s 92 is substantially the wider and provides inter alia for settling a scheme which is a jurisdiction of a very wide and beneficial nature. I think, therefore, that a plaintiff may proceed for appropriate relief under either Act and that the opening words in s 92 (?) only mean that if he elects to proceed under the Religious Endowments Act he is not to be prevented from doing by s 92. Where a Hindu residing in Madras and another residing in Tellicherry instituted a suit in the District Court of North Malabar under s 92 of the Civil Procedure Code in respect of a Hindu temple situated in Tellicherry in North Malabar after obtaining sanction under the section and it appeared that the former had gone to worship in the temple on one or two occasions in the past and might go there to worship in the future if business took him to Tellicherry and he relied on his right as a Hindu to worship in the temple as entitling him to institute the suit. Held by ORDINARY and CONFERRED TRIESTER, JJ (ABDUR RAHMAN J dissenting) that though as a Hindu he might have the right to worship in the temple he had not on that ground alone the interest required by s 92 of the Code to maintain the suit. Interest under s 92 of the Code denotes an interest which is substantial and not sentimental or remote; it must be a present and substantial and not a remote and fictitious or purely illusory interest. The definition of interest in s 1 of the Religious Endowments Act (XX of 1863) cannot be used as a guide in interpreting the word as used in s 92 of the Code. The English decisions under Lord Romilly's Act which lay down that the petitioners under the Act must have an interest which is clear or direct should be a guidance in interpreting the provisions of s 92 of the Civil Procedure Code. Per ABDUR RAHMAN J—In the case of a temple or a mosque persons entitled to attend there for purposes of worship are beneficiaries and must as such be held to possess a sufficient interest to support a suit under s 92 of the Civil Procedure Code. The plaintiffs trustees did not obtain sanction either under s 9 of Civil Procedure Code or s 14 of the Religious Endowments Act (XX of 1863). The defendants pleaded inter alia, that the suit was not maintainable for want of sanction and that the Civil Courts could not question the appointment made by the committee. 1 Preliminary decree—

Appeal—Status of agriculturists—The question of an appeal from a preliminary decree cannot be equated in appeal on merits—Party's duty to call Court to draw up decree—Practice and procedure. The plaintiff brought a suit to redeem mortgage according to the provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act 1879. A preliminary decree was passed whether the plaintiffs were agriculturists and decided against the plaintiffs. The Court ordered the plaintiffs to pay the requisite court fee within a week a time which not having been done the suit was dismissed. In the appeal which the plaintiffs preferred against the final decree they sought to question the finding on the preliminary issue. Held that the preliminary decree having become extinct by reason of the final decree and the plaintiffs not having exercised their right of presenting an appeal from that decree it was not open to them in the present appeal to challenge finding on the preliminary issue. Held further that though the statutory obligation lay on the Court to draw up a preliminary decree to entitle the plaintiff to appeal it was equally the duty of the plaintiff to ask the Court to draw up that decree in order to call the Court to present an appeal against it. GOVIND LACHMAN A v VITHAL GHAL (1912) 1 L P 36 Bom 536

In a suit for partition a preliminary decree was passed and the plaintiff was an agriculturist. the Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act (XII of 1879) and a redemption decree was passed. On appeal from the final decree the question as to the status of the plaintiff was raised and the Court of Appeal decided that the plaintiff was not an agriculturist and varied the decree by increasing the amount of redemption. On second appeal it was contended that the lower Appellate Court was wrong in going into the preliminary point at the stage it did. Held that no appeal was necessary against the preliminary finding and that unless there was a preliminary decree no appeal could be under the provisions of s 97 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908). Bai Dauli v Shah Yashnaw Manondas 1 L P 33 Bom 182 followed. Gowind Ramchandra v Yashai Copal 1 L R 36 Bom 536 explained. SAKHARAM VISRAM v SADASHY BALSHET (1913) 1 L R 37 Bom 480

3 Preliminary decree—Appeal—Findings on preliminary issues—To appeal lies from findings—Decree drawing up of—Duty to draw up decree is of the Court—Civil Circulars (1912) cl 159. In a suit for accounts the first Court recorded findings on certain preliminary issues and ordered accounts to be taken on the basis of those findings. No preliminary decree was drawn up by the Court and none was asked for by the plaintiff's pleader. The accounts were next taken by a commissioner and a decree was passed in accordance with his report dismissing the suit. The plaintiff appealed against the final decree and urged objections against finding on preliminary issues. Held that the plaintiff was not barred of his right to urge objections against the findings on preliminary issues for under the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) s 97 his right to appeal arose only when there was a decree based on those findings. That the practice in the mofussil Courts was in accordance with the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code and Civil Circulars cl 159 so that the Court was to draw up the decree and that the pleaders if any in the case were to see that it was in accordance with the judgment. There is no provision requiring a party or his pleader to move the Court to draw up a decree and mere omission to do the Court to do but which it is the duty of the Court to do on its own motion cannot affect his right to appeal. HAJURAM PIRCHAND v GANGARAJ SAKHARAM (1913) 1 L P 38 Bom 331

4 Preliminary decree—Appeal—Decision that suit not barred as caste question. A decision in favour of the plaintiff upon a preliminary defence that the matters in dispute are caste questions outside the jurisdiction of Civil Courts does not amount to a preliminary decree attracting the provisions of s 97 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908). SADAI NATH DINDIVU v GURUJI GOWIND 1 L P 37 Bom 60 overruled. Narayan Lalji kha v Coral Jis Ghadi 1 L P 35 Bom 39 disented from. CHAS MAISHWANI v GANGADHARAPPA (1914) 1 L P 39 Bom 339

6 ——— Partnership account set off — Preliminary decree declaring partnership dissolved and due to partners and accounts — Part of ring inquiry as to be para d from de rec and treated as order — Liability of o r if may be questioned on appeal from final decree — In a suit to have partnership accounts taken the Trial Judge by a formal adjudication dated 130th June 1930 (i) declared that the partnership was dissolved as from 1st July 1927 and ordered and decreed, (ii) that inquiry be made by the referees as to who were the partners and (iii) that the referees should take an account of the debts and assets of the parties with the assets of the partnership business. No appeal was preferred from this adjudication and inquiry was made and a decree taken. The decision of the referees upon the inquiry which was addressed to the appellant was confirmed by the Judge. In an appeal against this final decree the appellant took exception to the inquiry ordered by the Judge (as to who were the partners) as erroneous. Held that the adjudication by the Trial Judge in which the inquiry was ordered was a preliminary decree and no having been appealed against could not under s 97 of the Civil Procedure Code be questioned on the final appeal. The adjudication did not relate to be a decree but a subordinate part of it if correctly made might have been made separately as an order. The Code makes no provision for something which is neither a decree nor an order nor anything which is both and it does it provide that once adjudication by the Court can be resolved into different elements some of which are decrees and some orders. *ANAND MURARI SARKAR v. — ss 97 and 2 — Preliminary decree — Preliminary issue with a party is an agriculturalist — Finding on the issue not an adjudication which can be embodied in a decree — Practice — Procedure — A finding on a preliminary issue whether a party is an agriculturalist is not by itself an adjudication which can be embodied in a preliminary decree within the meaning of s 97 of the Civil Procedure Code 1908. Per MACLEOD C J — It is only when the finding on an issue is sufficient for the decision of a suit or a part of the suit that the Court may pronounce judgment. When the finding is not sufficient for the decision the suit must be postponed for further hearing. Accordingly the status of the case at which judgment is pronounced will determine whether the decree is preliminary or final. Per LAWRENCE J — It is an abuse of the procedure intended by the Code for a Court to draw up a preliminary decree directing accounts to be taken under s 13 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act before it had even decided whether the mortgage sued upon was proved. *Municipal Committee of Nashik City v. The plaintiffs minor sons of G through their maternal uncle brought the present suit for the usual declaration in respect of a sale and previous mortgages of land effected by their father and his two brothers defendants 1 3 in favour of the vendee defendant 4 and the previous mortgagees defendants 5 19. The first Court held that the suit was bad for misjoinder of parties and returned the plaint to the plaintiffs for amendment. The plaint was accordingly amended by striking out the mortgages and the suit was thereafter dismissed it being found that none of them had been proved for the bulk of the sale price. On appeal the District Judge held that the suit was not bad for misjoinder of parties and remanded the case for a fresh decision after impleading the previous mortgagees. Finding of fraud with out any evidence—Power in second appeal to decide case on issue not expressly framed on the evidence as it stood and reverse decision of lower Appellate Court. The Plaintiff had executed a sale deed in respect of immovable property in favour of the Defendant on the 26th June 1909 which was a Saturday and the deed contained a stipulation that the consideration money was to be paid in the presence of the registration officer. Under a prior agreement the last day for payment of the purchase money was the 27th June 1909. The deed was presented by the vendor for registration and though Defendant's agent was present at the registration office with the money it was not paid immediately as Defendant had not yet come and when the latter came the registration officer had left earlier than usual owing to indisposition and the Plaintiff also had left the office. The Defendant offered to pay the money at the registration office on Monday the 28th June 1909 the 27th being Sunday but the Plaintiff refused to accept it. In a suit by Plaintiff for cancellation of the sale deed no issue was framed as to whether the Defendant was ready and willing on the 26th June to pay the purchase money and was prevented from doing so by the action of the Plaintiff but both the trial Court and the first Court of Appeal held that no new agreement had been come to

(IX of 1899) s 10 In a suit filed for partition of joint family property, the parties agreed to refer the matter to arbitration, and a consent order of reference was taken. A similar agreement referred to the same arbitrators questions as to the partition of such immovable property as was outside the jurisdiction of the Court in the suit. The arbitrators disagreed on certain points but instead of referring their differences (as the agreement of reference authorised them to do) to an umpire they submitted their own opinions in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court. In doing so they purported to act under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) Sch. II r 11 and of the Indian Arbitration Act (IX of 1899) s 10 (b). The matter was decided by the Chamber Judge and an appeal was preferred against the decision. Held that no appeal lay. Inasmuch as the special case was in no sense an award it did not come within the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) Sch. s 105 115 Sch II Art 15—Arbitration in a suit—Award—Objection as to validity of order of reference—Absence of fresh written statement by defendant who alleged minority but was found to be of full age—Award set aside—Reason The defendant to a suit on a contract pleaded infancy and filed a written statement through a person who professed to act as his guardian. Issues were framed amongst them one as to the age of the defendant. This was tried first and it was found that the defendant was not an infant. The defendant did not put in a fresh written statement as the result of this finding but accepted the statement originally filed on his behalf. At this stage the parties agreed to refer the suit to arbitration and the issues which had been framed were by order of the Court referred to an arbitrator who in due course submitted his award. This was in favour of the defendant. The plaintiff filed objections and took exception inter alia to the absence of a writt statement filed by the defendant after he had been found to be of full age. The court accepted this plea and on this ground alone set aside the order of reference and the award. Held on application in revision by the defendant that the application would lie. The court below had in this case no jurisdiction to reverse the order of reference which in substance it had done and in setting aside the award on the sole ground of some supposed defect in the order of reference which was irrelevant it had acted with material irregularity. Gulam Khan v. Notes—New evidence what is—Preliminary granted on inadmissible judgments—O XLV r 27—Additional evidence in the Appellate Court—No discretion where no jurisdiction. The plaintiff was a co-sharer landlord of a mauza contiguous to which a chur was thrown up. The prime plaintiff defendants claimed that the chur was a reformation in situ of their estate and the other defendants were the tenants of the chur. One S also claimed a portion of the chur. The plaintiff brought a suit for rent against the tenant defendant. The principal defendants also sued them for rent and the tenants deposited the amount claimed under s 149 Bengal Tenancy Act. The plaintiff then brought a suit against the principal defendants under cl (3) of the section. The plaintiff's suit for rent was decreed by the Court of first instance. Judgment was next delivered in the suit brought by the principal defendants as also in the suit under s 149. The decree in the plaintiff's suit for rent was then affirmed in appeal by the District Judge. After the judgment was delivered in a suit for rent brought by S as also in the s 149 case in the Appellate Court. Neither to this suit of S nor to that brought by the principal defendant was the plaintiff or any of his co land lords a party. The District Judge subsequently reviewed his judgment in appeal in plaintiff's suit for rent relying on the judgments in the suits of the principal defendants and S and in the s 149 case. Held that none of the judgments was admissible for the purpose of the review and the order made thereon must be vacated. The District Judge had no jurisdiction to review his original judgment in the light of a judgment turning on facts subsequently delivered in an other Court in a suit which was not inter parte. That the judgment in the suit of S which was not in existence at the time when the case was tried in the Primary and Appellate Courts was not new evidence in the sense in which the expression is generally used nor was the judgment in the suit of the principal defendants which came into existence at the original hearing of the appeal but was not tendered on that occasion. That they merely added a debatable item to the evidence on the record and the District Judge had no power to admit them as additional evidence under O XLI r 27 of the Code. That the objection that the lower Appellate Court admitted in review evidence which he had no authority so to admit may be taken on an appeal from the decree as made on review. *SARAT KUMAR ROY v. Two suits between the same parties in which the same question was raised were decided by separate judgments in the original court. There were two appeals in the High Court which were heard together and by consent of both parties the evidence in the two suits was considered as a whole. In the result the decree of the lower court was set aside. Leave to appeal to the Privy Council was granted in one of the suits. As to the other suit it was held that although the valuation of that suit and of the appeal to the Privy Council therefrom was below Rs. 10,000 and there was no question of law involved it was a proper case to which the procedure sanctioned by O XLV r 4 should be applied and leave granted. S. PREVIEW

Review—New evidence what is—Review granted on inadmissible judgments—O XLV r 7—Additional evidence in the Appellate Court—No discretion where no jurisdiction. The plaintiff was a co-sharer landlord of a mauza contiguous to which a chur was thrown up. The principal defendants claimed that the chur was a reformation in situ of their estate and the other defendants were the tenants of the chur. One S also claimed a portion of the chur. The plaintiff brought a suit for rent against the tenant defendant. The principal defendants also sued them for rent and the tenants deposited the amount claimed under a 149 Bengal Tenancy Act. The plaintiff then brought a suit against the principal defendants under cl. (3) of the section. The plaintiff's suit for rent was decreed by the Court of first instance. Judgment was next delivered in the suit brought by the principal defendants as also in the suit under s 149. The decree in the plaintiff's suit for rent was then affirmed in appeal by the District Judge. After the judgment was delivered in a suit for rent brought by S as also in the s 140 case in the Appellate Court. Neither to this suit of S nor to that brought by the principal defendants was the plaintiff or any of his co land lords a party. The District Judge subsequently reviewed his judgment in appeal in plaintiff's suit for rent relying on the judgments in the suits of the principal defendants and S and in the s 119 case. Held that none of the judgments was admissible for the purpose of the review and the order made thereon must be vacated. The District Judge had no jurisdiction to review his original judgment in the light of a judgment turning on facts subsequently delivered in an other Court in a suit which was not inter parte. That the judgment in the suit of S which was not in existence at the time when the case was tried in the Primary and Appellate Courts was not new evidence in the sense in which the expression is generally used, nor was the judgment in the suit of the principal defendants which came into existence at the original hearing of the appeal but was not tendered on that occasion. That they merely added a debatable item to the evidence on the record and the District Judge had no power to admit them as additional evidence under O XXI r 27 of the Code. That the objection that the lower Appellate Court admitted in review evidence which he had no authority so to admit may be taken on an appeal from the decree as made on review. SARAT KUMAR ROY v SPIPATI CHATTERJI (1918) 23 C W N 242

Cls (a) and (b) of s. 115 apply only to jurisdiction of the Court whose decree or order is sought to be revised, to pass such order or decree and not to its decision on the jurisdiction of some other Court. The defendant No 1 having applied to the High Court against the order a preliminary objection was taken that the application was not competent under s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held overruling the objection that the application was competent under s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code Act (V of 1908) as the order was a case decided in which no appeal lies within the meaning of the section. Held further that the order was open to consideration under the wider provisions of s. 5 of Regulation II of 1827 continued in force by virtue of s. 9 of the High Courts Act, 1861 and saved from repeal by the operative sections of the General Repealing Act (XII of 1873) Per BACHELOR, J The word 'case' which occurs in s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) is a word of wide or comprehensive import and clearly covers a far larger area than would be covered by such a word as 'suit' or 'appeal' Inasmuch as s. 115 is

He pleaded that the defendant had been dismissed from his position as manager and asked for possession of the property which comprised shares in 26 villages a market and some collection houses. The defendant pleaded that he was a thekedar within the meaning of the Tenancy Act, and filed an application praying the Court to exercise its jurisdiction under s. 202 of that Act. The Court acceded to this prayer and adjourned the suit to an indefinite period till the question was decided by the Revenue Court. The plaintiff applied in revision against the order. Held (Per PROCTOR J) that the revision was incompetent as it was directed against an interlocutory order and a remedy by way of appeal was open to the plaintiff wherein all matters could be decided (Per WALSH J) that a revision lay to the High Court DIRANDEI KUNWAR v CHOTU LAL (1916) I L R 39 All 254

the High Court has no jurisdiction to revise an order made by a District Judge acting under a. 4 of the Bom. 11 — Onus Misplaced—Trial of wrong issue—Onus wrongly placed—Decision not supported by any evidence—Quantum of evidence. Mere errors in decision on matters of law and fact are not within the scope of s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code 1908. Cts. (a) and (b) of that section deal with the question of jurisdiction and (c) refers to illegal or irregular processual acts. An application under s 115 of the Civil Procedure Code was made to the High Court from a decision of the Judge of the Presidency Small Cause Court on the following grounds —(i) That the wrong issue was tried (ii) that the onus was misplaced (iii) that there was no evidence to support the decision. Held that the trial of the issue in the form it was raised amounted to an error in law and not to an illegality or material irregularity in the procedure. Held further that under the circumstances of the case the mere fact that the onus was wrongly placed on the defendant did not entitle the Court to interfere under s. 115. Held also that inasmuch as there was some evidence on which the Court acted there could not be any interference under the section. HARAN CHANDRA CHATTERJEE v CORPORATION OF POYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE (1919) 23 C W N 539

12 — Criminal Procedure Code s. 195 (8)—Sanction to prosecute—Sanct on granted by Munsif—Personal powers of District Judge. One of the parties to a civil suit applied for sanction to prosecute the plaintiff on the ground that he had instituted a false claim. The Munsif dismissed the application on technical grounds. The applicant applied to the District Judge under s. 195 (6) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The Judge remanded the case to the Munsif for trial of the application. Held that the powers of revision exercisable by the District Judge were confined to those conferred by s. 195 Criminal Procedure Code and he had no jurisdiction to make the order of remand. BENI PRASAD v SANJU PRA AD THAKURIA (1911) I L R 33 All 512

13 — Interlocutory order—High Courts power of revision—Charter Act (24 of 25 Vict c 194) s 115—Revision where adequate remedy exists. Quare Whether s 115 of the Civil Procedure Code or s. 15 of the Charter Act gives power to the High Court to interfere with interlocutory orders. Held that there is one common principle which governs its interference under both sections: that it will not have recourse ordinarily at least to its revisional or superintending powers where there is another and an adequate remedy open to the applicant. An order refusing to amend the pleadings if erroneous may be corrected upon appeal from the decree to be passed in the suit. Such an order not being likely to cause irreparable injury should not be interfered with under the Charter Act. CHANDI RAY v KRIPAL RAY (1911) 15 C W N 682

15 — Final order—Letters Patent s. 39—Privy Council leave to appeal to—Final order passed on appeal—Order passed by High Court on revision of passed on appeal—Order relating to discovery of final order—Order that Land Acquisition Judge cannot entertain objections to award by Government if final order when reference at claimants instance still pending—Interlocutory order—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) ss 109 113. Orders passed by the High Court in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction under s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code or of its power of superintendence under s. 15 of the Charter Act are orders made or passed on appeal within the meaning of s. 39 of the Letters Patent. Whether a particular order is a final order within the meaning of s. 109 of the Civil Procedure Code for the purpose of granting leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council must depend upon its nature and contents and its relation to the proceedings in which it has been made. As a general rule an order cannot rightly be considered final which settles a point only of several issues of law or fact, in other words if the order decides a question the solution of which cannot whatever may be taken of it terminate the proceeding before the Court it cannot be appropriately called a final order. An order of the High Court which deals with the question of the propriety of an order of a Land Acquisition Judge for discovery is not a final order within the meaning of s. 39 of the Letters Patent or s. 109 of the Civil Procedure Code. An order of the High Court holding that the Land Acquisition Judge could not review at the instance of the Secretary of State the award of the Collector in so far as it was not challenged by the claimants, the objections of the claimants to the award and all remaining to be determined by the Judge was not a final order within the meaning of s. 39 of the Letters Patent and s. 109 of the Civil Procedure Code. INDIA v BRITISH NATIGATION CO. (1910) 15 C W N 843

16 ———— Award—Decree framed upon award—Appeal—Application under revisional jurisdiction—Decree of aside—Grounds—Juri diction The plaintiff as Mutawali of a Muqda at Zanzibar, brought a suit against the defendant for the recovery of certain pots and pans. Three other persons who alleged themselves to be Mutawals were joined as parties apparently without any amendment of the plaint. After some progress of the suit the presiding Judge was asked by all concerned in the Jamat (community) to arbitrate upon all matters in difference between them. The Judge framed an award on the 30th June 1904 and the award was read out in Court after notice to the parties. In the year 1909 a pleader for the plaintiff applied to have a decree framed in the terms of the award and the Judge accordingly passed a decree on the 7th April 1909. One of the defendants having appealed against the decree which was not appealable the appeal was allowed to be converted into an application under the revisional jurisdiction s 115 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) and the decree was set aside as being passed by the Judge without any sort of jurisdiction whatever. The grounds being (i) There was no written reference to arbitration as required by law. (ii) The reference was made by a great number of persons who were not parties to the suit. (iii) The matters in difference submitted to arbitration were matters not in suit at all. (iv) The result of the said irregular proceedings was to expand the claim for the possession of a few cooling utensils into a suit for framing a scheme for the administration of a large religious endowment and no suit of the kind could have been properly launched without the previous sanction of the Advocate General or such officer as is clothed with his functions. (v) The award was made on the 30th June 1904 and the application to have it filed was not made till 1909. The application was therefore manifestly time barred. (vi) The plaintiff died early in the year 1905 and no application was ever made to bring his heirs or legal representatives on record. The suit had therefore abated by July of that year. MERALI HIRAN v. SHERIFF DEWIS (1911) 1 L R 36 Bom 105 attempting to ascertain the materials on which that valuation was based and in fact without arriving at a judicial decision at all. Held that the High Court should interfere in such a case under s 115 Civil Procedure Code if satisfied that the decision of the District Judge was wrong. *Amir Hassan v. Where the Subordinate Judge in his view of the value of the suit returned the plaint for presentation to the Munsif and the District Judge set aside that decision and it was contended that the High Court should not interfere as there was no prejudice. Held that as the law requires that suits of a particular value should be brought in particular Courts where an order was against that law no question of prejudice arises in citing aside that order. Where a land was taken for clearing and bringing under cultivation under an agreement that after a certain number of years the defendant would grant a mokurari mortgage and a suit was subsequently brought by the lessee for a declaration of his mokurari title and for the execution of the lease. Held that the suit was in effect one to enforce the agreement to lease. The mokurari title would only accrue after the lease was granted and the suit could therefore be valued on the footing of that title. *POOR CANNING AND LAND IMPROVEMENT COMPANY LTD. v. 19 ———— Jurisdiction, failure to exercise—Limitation Act (VI of 1877) s 7—Revision on the ground of limitation Seemle A Court decreeing or allowing a time barred suit or application without considering whether it is so or not may be said to have failed to exercise jurisdiction vested in it by law so as to bring the matter within the scope of s 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that a Court cannot be said to have failed to exercise jurisdiction merely because it omitted to consider ex proprio motu the question whether a person was entitled to proceed out of time by reason of some special provision of law e.g. s 7 of the Limitation Act such question not having been raised by him or on his behalf. The mere fact that in the headings to certain applications made in the case the person was described as a minor represented by a guardian was not sufficient to entitle him to the benefit of s 7 of the Limitation Act or to throw upon the Court the duty of raising the point on his behalf. *Bened Behari Bhadra v. property to sale when the plaintiffs deposited in Court the necessary amount in satisfaction of the decree. The plaintiffs brought an action for declaration that the defendants were liable to pay the judgment debt and they themselves had paid the money under circumstances which entitled them in equity to recover the same from the defendants. The suit was described as one for contributions. The lower Courts dismissed the plaintiffs' claim on the ground that as the decree had been obtained by co-sharer landlords the interest of the plaintiffs in the tenancy was not in jeopardy and the payment made by them must consequently be deemed voluntary. The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court. Held that contribution signifies payment by each of the parties interested of his share in any common liability. Consequently an action for contribution is a suit brought by one of such parties who has discharged the liability common to them all to compel the others to make good their shares. That the suit as framed could not be deemed a suit for contribution it was really a suit by the plaintiffs for recovery of money paid by them for the benefit of the defendants. That Art. 41 of the Second Schedule to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act does not cover the present case. The suit was clearly one of a nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes and as the sum claimed was less than Rs. 500 the appeal was incompetent under s. 102 Civil Procedure Code and must be dismissed. That the view taken by the lower Courts that the payment made by the plaintiffs was voluntary as the decree for rent was obtained by co-sharer landlords who could not have executed it so as to prejudice the interest of the plaintiffs was erroneous. The question of the precise effect of a sale in these circumstances would at any rate be a matter for controversy and the party liable to be affected would consequently be entitled to satisfy the decree to protect himself from the apprehended injury to his right. He would also be entitled if he made the payment to be reimbursed under s. 69 or s. 70 of the Indian Contract Act. Held however as to the application of the plaintiffs for the memorandum of appeal being treated as an application for revision that the error committed by the lower Court being one of law and not affecting the jurisdiction of the Court the High Court could not interfere in the exercise of its revisional powers. *SATTU BHUSAN BANERJEE v. Decree—Execution—

Auction sale—Deposit in Court—No application to set aside sale—Sale confirmed—subsequent application to set aside sale—Application refused—No irregularity—Titles arising from judicial sales should be settled as soon as possible The property of the applicant was sold in execution of a decree against him. Within thirty days of the date of sale the applicant deposited in Court the amount of the decree together with interest on the purchase money for the property sold. The applicant however having made no application to set aside the sale the sale was confirmed and the Court called upon the applicant to take away his money. The applicant then applied that his deposit should be considered as an application to set aside the sale. Having failed in both the Lower Courts he applied to the High Court under a 115 of the Civil Procedure Code 1908. Held that the application would not be under a 115 of the Civil Procedure Code as there was no defect whatever in jurisdiction and no irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction. The Civil Procedure Code with the Limitation Act provides a short period within which applications specifying their object should be made to set aside sale and the shortness of time allowed may be taken as indicative of the policy of the Legislature that titles arising from judicial sales should be settled as soon as possible. RAOJI v BANSILAL NARAYAN (1919)

——— ss 151 47 O XLVII r 2—Court inherent power if to be exercised in contravention of prohibition of statute and if to be exercised when not tending towards substantial justice—statute application of In exercise of its inherent powers under s 151 of the Civil Procedure Code the Court cannot assume jurisdiction to grant a review where it has been expressly forbidden by the Legislature to entertain such application. On any point specifically dealt with by the Code the Court cannot disregard the letter of the enactment according to its true construction though as the Legislature cannot anticipate and make express provisions to cover all possible contingencies it is the duty of a Judge to apply the provisions of the law not only to what appears to be regulated expressly thereby but also to all cases to which just application of them may be made and which appears to be comprehended either within the express sense of the law or within the consequences that may be gathered from it. The inherent power of a Court can be invoked only for the attainment of the ends of substantial justice for the administration of which alone Courts exist. A sale certificate is merely evidence of title and does not create title so that if the Court should refuse to grant such a certificate to the auction purchaser possession should not be delivered to him as required by the Code. This will not preclude him from suing for a declaration of title and for recovery of possession within 12 years of the date when the sale was confirmed. Where purporting to act under s 151 Civil Procedure Code a Munsif cancelled an order for delivery of possession passed by his predecessor on the ground that the application for delivery of possession having been made more than 3 years after the date of confirmation of the sale was manifestly barred by limitation. Held that as the Munsif was expressly forbidden by statute to entertain an application for review he could not entertain the application in exercise of his inherent powers. That the order should not have been made as its only effect would be to drive the auction purchaser to institute a suit. SATI BHUBAN MOOKERJEE & RADHA NATH BOSE (1914) 19 C W N 835

Refusal of Court to correct an accidental mistake in the drawing up of a decree—Petition—Jurisdiction In a suit for sale on foot of a mortgage one of the defendants pleaded a prior mortgage. An issue was expressly struck on the point and was found in favour of the prior mortgagee. The operative portion of the judgment directed that a decree for sale should be prepared in accordance with the provisions of O XLIV, r 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure but the decree which was drawn up was one for sale of the property in suit without any reference to the prior mortgage. The prior mortgagee presented an application under s 152 of the Code of Civil Procedure to the Court which permitted the decree to have it amended. Held that the prior mortgagee whether or not he had preferred an appeal from the decree was entitled with reference to s 152 to have it amended and the Court in refusing to amend had failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law. SHADEO CIR v DEO DUTT MISIR (1915) 1 L R 27 All 223

Graves of several defendants in one suit—Same act or transaction—Series of acts or transactions—Practice In reading O I r 3 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) it seems quite obvious that the word same which precedes the words acts or transaction governs also the words series of acts or transactions and must be read before those words also. The first condition to be fulfilled before joining several persons as co defendants in the same suit is that the right to relief sought in the suit must arise against all the defendants from the same act or transaction or from the same series of acts or transactions. The second condition to be fulfilled under the rule is that some common question either of fact or law should arise against the defendants if separate suits were brought against such persons. Before a plaintiff can join several defendants in the same suit both the conditions laid down in the rule must be fulfilled first the relief sought against the defendants whether jointly severally or in the alternative must arise from the same act or transaction

tion or the same series of acts or transactions And secondly, there must rise between the plaintiff and all the defendants some common question of law or fact. The plaintiff may in one action unite several causes of action against several defendants provided that all such defendants are jointly liable in respect of each and all of such causes of action and that the condition precedent to the plaintiff being allowed to join several causes of action against several defendants is that such defendants must all have a joint interest in the main question raised by the litigation and that causes of action joined in one suit against several defendants must be causes of action in which the defendants are all jointly interested. It is not necessary that every defendant should be interested as to all the reliefs claimed in the suit but it is necessary that there must be a cause of action in which all the defendants are more or less interested although the relief asked against them may vary. *UMANATH R. Suit filed by Representing body of creditors—Application to be made party—Immaterial suit Where a suit has been filed on behalf of a body of persons and no individual member of that body applies to be made a party he must show that his interests will be seriously prejudiced if he is not allowed to come in. He must show that the conduct of the suit is not in proper hands or that action prejudicial to his interest is being taken by those who purport to represent him. In an administration suit it is extremely undesirable that individual creditors should be added as parties unless as they show some very strong reason. The willingness of the applicants to bear their own costs does not counterbalance the delay caused by the addition of a party and the consequent increase in the cost of other parties.

The permission of the Court was taken under O I r 8 of the C P Code. The suit was decreed and the decree confirmed on appeal. The Appellate Court found that the Plaintiff suffered special damage and the finding was challenged in second appeal. Held that the question of whether the Plaintiff suffered special damage or not did not arise because a suit for a declaration that a pathway is a village pathway can succeed without proof of special damage. Harhar Das v. Chandra Kumar Guha 20 C W N 91 followed. The suit was one to which O I r 8 C P Code was appropriate and the Court's permission having been obtained under that rule recourse to the Advocate General was not necessary. Representing the section of a caste—to take account and to recover portions belonging to the section—Meeting not properly convened—Suit opposed by numerous members of the section—Suit as representing the plaintiffs supported by a large number of the members—Representation suit not maintainable. The caste of the Daxi Lad Banias of Broach was divided into two sections known as the Mojumpurias and Shicherias. The accounts and the funds of each section were separately kept by defendant No 1 who was the headman of the whole caste. The plaintiffs were authorised to bring the present suit at a meeting at the Mojumpuria section held on the 28th April 1909. It appeared that the meeting was irregularly convened. The plaintiffs brought the present suit under O I r 8 of the Civil Procedure Code to take accounts of the funds belonging to the Mojumpuria section from defendant No 1 and to recover from him the amount that might be found due on such accounts being taken. Out of the 183 members constituting the Mojumpuria a 112 supported the plaintiffs' contentions whilst 70 members supported the defendant No 1. The first Court granted the reliefs sought. But the District Court disallowed the second relief. On second appeal Held that the suit as constituted must fail for the plaintiffs could not represent nor sue on behalf of these numerous members of the Mojumpuria section who admittedly were in diametrical opposition to them in the present controversy. Held also that the plaintiffs could not call in aid the private expressions of consent obtained after suit filed so as to supply that authority which was admittedly lacking at the time when the suit was in fact filed. *HARSH CHANDRA SAHA v. Death of some of the persons on whose behalf a suit was brought—impleaded as respondents in the Appellate Court—abatement of appeal—order that appeal be abated—whether a decree and open to appeal. The Jat proprietors 393 in number claimed to be alone entitled to the income of the hamlat land of the village as against the Brahman proprietors 53 in number. The plaint was signed by 6 persons and was accompanied by a petition by the same persons under O I r 8 Civil Procedure Code praying that they be allowed to sue on behalf of all the Jat proprietors and that two of the defendants be permitted to defend the suit on behalf of all the Brahman proprietors. This was sanctioned by the Court and a decree was eventually passed in favour of the plaintiffs for a declaration of their rights as prayed. The defendants appealed and in the list of parties in their memorandum of appeal set out the names of 52 defendants as appellants and the 393 plaintiffs as respondents. On the date of hearing, it was discovered that three of the respondents had died and applications to bring their legal representatives on the record had not been presented within the period of limitation. Thereupon the Lower Appellate Court decided that the appeal had abated in toto relying on Hadu v Lala (41 P R 1915). On appeal to this Court it was contended that no appeal was competent as the order of the Lower Appellate Court was not a decree. Held that the order of the Lower Appellate Court was in effect that inasmuch as the interest of all the plaintiffs was common and the legal representatives of the deceased plaintiffs had not been brought on the record within time the whole appeal had abated and that such an order falls within the definition of the term 'decree' and is appealable as such. Varanjan Nath v Afzal Hussain (198 P P 1916 F B) followed. Held also as the plaintiffs' respondents who died were not among the six plaintiffs who had instituted the suit in accordance with the order of the Court under O I r 8 of the Code of Procedure but among the persons on behalf of whom the 6 plaintiffs had acted they were not parties to the suit and were unnecessary made respondents in the appeal. alternative as shebait and as owner—Inconsistent positions. Plaintiff alleged that one J was in possession of shares of coparcenary properties belonging to himself and others including one A from whose widow (it was averred) J had improperly obtained an ekrar under which he retained possession of A's share till his death. After his death defendants Nos 2 to 6 (who it transpired were executors to the will of J) remained in possession of that share. After J's death A's widow adopted plaintiff as her son and plaintiff brought this suit to recover possession of A's share with mesne profits as from the date of adoption making defendant No 1 who was heir and residuary legatee of J and defendants Nos 2 to 6 in their personal capacity defendants the allegation being that these defendants were keeping the plaintiff out of possession. The plaintiff stated that so far as he had come to know on inquiry the properties in suit were debutter properties and that he and others of the family had shebait interest therein but that in case the properties were found not to be debutter he might be allowed to recover as owner. The defendants inter alia objected that defendants Nos 2 to 6 having been in possession as executors the suit could not proceed against them in their personal capacity and that the plaintiff could not maintain the suit as a shebait and at the same time in his own right as owner. The first Court dismissed the suit on the first of these grounds and was also of opinion that the suit was not maintainable by plaintiff alternatively as shebait and owner his interest as shebait being in conflict with his interest as owner. Held that though under O I r 9 the Court could not dismiss the suit on the ground that defendants Nos 2 to 6 were not sued as executors in order effectually and completely to adjudicate all the questions involved in the case defendants Nos 2 to 6 should be sued personally as well as executors and defendant No 1 (who was found not to be in possession) should be sued as residuary legatee and heir of J and the plaint should be amended accordingly. That O II r 5 was no bar to the amendment as defendants Nos 2 to 6 claimed to be in possession of the properties as part of J's estate and prevented the plaintiff from taking possession peacefully in their character as executors. The word 'estate' as used in O II r 5 means both the estate rightly and properly held as executors and the estate in its physical sense. That the claim of the plaintiff in the alternative as shebait and as owner was not open to objection having arisen out of the same transaction and there being really no conflict the plaintiff claiming as owner only in the event of the properties being found to be not debutter. VARANJAN NATH RAY v BHARADWAJ NATH DAS (1917) 21 C W N 939

3 ——— Plaintiff described as a minor really a major—Bona fide mistake of next friend—Dismissal of suit if proper—Procedure to be adopted. Where a plaintiff was described in the plaint as a minor but had really attained majority some four days before the plaint was filed by his next friend who was under a bona fide belief that he was still a minor when she filed the suit on his behalf as his next friend. Held that the suit ought not to be dismissed but that the proper procedure to be adopted in the case was to return the plaint for presentation after making the necessary amendments by striking off the description of the plaintiff as a minor sung through his next friend and making other consequential alterations in the plaint. *Taqi Jan v. 4 ——— Limitation Act (IX of 1908) Art 171—Partition suit—Death of a party—Abatement—Application to set aside the abatement—Limitation of sixty days—In a partition suit all parties should be before the Court—Inherent power of the Court to add a party at any stage of the suit for the ends of justice. On the 5th April 1892 the plaintiff obtained a decree for partition and died in October 1893 leaving him surviving a minor son who attained majority in February 1907. At a very late stage of the execution proceedings the son made an application on the 16th April 1910 for the issue of a commission to effect partition according to the rights declared in the partition decree. Held that as soon as the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) came into force the suit abated so far as regarded the applicant a father who was a party and the application to set aside the abatement by adding the applicant as the legal representative of the deceased not having been made within sixty days under Art 171 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908) the application was time-barred. Held further that in a partition suit all the parties should be before the Court and that there was nothing in the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) limiting or affecting the inherent power of the Court to make such orders as might be necessary for the ends of justice. *LAKSHMINATHAN PEWACHAND v. O I, r 10 (2) and O XXXIV r 1—Mortgage—Suit for redemption—Suit by some of the heirs of mortgagor—Application to add remaining heirs as defendants after cause of action had become time barred—Indian Limitation Act (IX of 1908) s 22 Some of the heirs of a mortgagor sued to redeem the mortgage a few days before the expiry of the period of limitation. To meet an objection raised for non joinder of parties the plaintiffs subsequently applied to make the remaining heirs party defendants to the suit. The lower Courts declined to make them parties on the ground that the claim as regards them was barred by s 22 of the Indian Limitation Act 1908. The plaintiffs having appealed Held that the plaintiffs right to redeem which they had when they filed the suit was not lost by their omission to make the remaining heirs parties. They were only necessary parties to save multiplicity of suits and to prevent the mortgagee being subjected to suits being filed against him in succession by various parties entitled to the equity of redemption. Held also that it was within the discretion of the Court under O I r 10 sub r (2) of the Civil Procedure Code to make the remaining heirs co defendants and then to consider what would be the legal result of such addition. Per LAWCEET J—There is no provision in either the Civil Procedure Code or the Indian Limitation Act which says that a party cannot be added after his right of suit or liability to be sued (as the case may be) is barred by the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act. Accordingly I think it is absurd to hold that the plaintiffs right of redemption is entirely lost because he has not complied with the provisions of O XXXIV r 1. That in my opinion would be subordinating justice to a technicality of procedure. SHIVRAI v SHRIDHESHWAR MANTAN (1920) I L R 45 Bom. 1009

reco or pos e sion on tenants failure to pay rent within three months—Defendants failure and recovery of possession by plaintiff—Prayer in the plaint for reservation of leave to bring a suit for rent not granted—Subsequent suit by the plaintiff to recover rent—Subsequent suit barred A plea provided that on the tenants failure to pay rent the landlord should be entitled to take possession of the lands. The tenants having failed to pay the rent of two years the landlord sued them and obtained a decree which directed that on the defendants default to pay all the arrears of rent and costs within three months the plaintiff should take possession of the land. In the said suit the plaintiff had asked for permission to bring a separate suit for the rent in arrears for two years but none was given. Subsequently the plaintiff having brought a suit for the said rent of two years. Held that the suit was barred under O II r 2 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1903) as the claim in the suit for rent up to the date of forfeiture arose upon the same contract as did the landlord's right of forfeiture for non payment of rent that no necessity or reason existed for a separate suit for rent where there had been a forfeiture or non payment and that the claim for possession and the claim for rent ought to be enforced in one suit provided the cause of action was the same unless the Court should give leave for the reservation of one of the remedies. The creditor accepted the hundi but the debtor failed to pay it at maturity. The creditor then sued the debtor on his hundi but failed to recover. Held that this was no bar to his suing on the accounts to recover the debt.
